Paris, Oct. 3.—The convent of Amanlis, department of Ille-et-Vilaine, strongly barricaded and defended, was besieged Friday by civil officers, assisted by gendarmes. A crowd of hundreds of people, headed by a former mayor, biased the officers, threw stones at them and impeded their progress. One of the novel methods of defense consisted in a number of bee hives, which were placed at the entrance of the convent. The barricades were finally broken down and a number of monks and civilians were arrested.

THE PORTE

Russian and Austro-Hungarian Ambassadors on the Alert.

Vienna, Oct. 5.—As an outcome of the conference between the czar and Emperor Francis Joseph at Murzsteg the governments of Austria and Russia have sent the following identical telegram to the ambassadors of those countries in Constantinople. The telegrams were couched in the following terms:

"You were recently instructed to declare that Austria-Hungary and Russia adhere to the task of pacification which they have undertaken and are resolved to preserve the program drawn up at the beginning of the year, notwithstanding the difficulties hitherto opposed to its execution. For, indeed, while on the one hand the revolutionary committees have provoked disturbances and deterred the Christian population of the vilayets from co-operating in the execution of the reforms, on the other hand, the representatives of the sublime porte entrusted with their application have been generally wanting in the necessary zeal and have not been imbued with the idea which inspired these measures. Both powers are united in the determination to show that it is their firm resolve to insist upon the execution in their entirety of those reforms which was accepted by the porte and which are calculated to guarantee general security. In this connection you will receive detailed instructions without delay.

"While the powers recognise to the full extent the porte's right and duty to suppress the disorders fostered by the insurrectionary agitation of the Macedonian committee, they at the same time deplore the fact that this suppression was accompanied by excesses and cruelties from which the peaceful inhabitants suffered. It therefore appears to them to be their urgent duty to come to the assistance of the victims of these regretable occurrences, and the above-mentioned instructions will acquaint you with the details of the humanitarian action which they deem necessary with the object of supporting the inhabitants who have been deprived of all means of existence, facilitating their repatriation and restoring the villages, churches and schools destroyed by fire.

"The Austro-Hungarian and Russian governments entertain the firm hope that their continued endeavors to establish a lasting peace in the sorely tried provinces will attain their object, and they are convinced that their impartial advice will be heeded by all to whom it is addressed in their own interests.

"By command of his majesty, my august master, I request you to communicate the foregoing to the Ottoman government after you have arrived at an understanding with your Russian (or Austrian) colleague, who has received identical instructions."

TWELVE PERSONS DROWNED.

Twelve Persons Drowned and Seven Picked Up.

The Saved Were Found Floating on Pieces of Wreckage and Were Exhausted From Their Struggles Against Drowning.

Marinette, Wis., Oct. 5.—During a squall Saturday night on Lake Michigan the steamer Erie H. Hackley capsized and 12 persons were drowned. The Goodrich line steamer Sheboygan rescued the other seven persons on board the Hackley, after they had floated about on pieces of wreckage all night. Report of the disaster reached Marinette Sunday.

The Hackley was struck by the squall when seven miles off Green island. The upper work was blown away before the men could reach a haven. The boat then turned over and went down in deep water.

The drowned: George LeClaire, jr., Jacksonport, Wis.; Joseph V. Crus, captain of the Hackley, Fish Creek; Edna Barringer, Lawrence Barringer, Fish Creek; Henry Rabitoy, Fish Creek; Carl Kelky, Fish Creek; Miss Frances Vincent; Miss Vincent's sister, Egg Harbor, Wis.; Freeman Thorp, Fish Creek; Nels Nelson, Sturgeon Bay; Frank Fitzgibbons, Jacksonport; T. Truchly, cook.

Rescued: Frank Blakeley, purser, Fish Creek; Orrin Rollin, engineer, Fish Creek; Milton Hasen, Blaine Mc-Sweeney, Fish Creek; two men of Ellison Bay, Wis.

As the Hackley went to bottom those who would and could seized on floating pieces of wreckage, while the women and three or four of the men, failing to find any object to which to cling, sank in the raging sea, so far as is known.

The waves were rolling high and several of those who at first saved themselves from immediate death lost strength and sank. It was several hours after the Hackley sank before the Sheboygan hove within hailing distance. The shouts of the floating men attracted the attention of the sailors on the Sheboygan and every assistance was loaned.

The rescuers of the lake made rescue slow, but the officers of the Sheboygan feel sure that they took aboard every person afloat. Some of the persons who were rescued say that it is possible that one or more of the 12 persons missing may have escaped north. This view is not given much credence by the sailors of the Sheboygan.

The Sheboygan made into Fish Creek when hope of rescuing other persons seemed improbable. The rescued persons were so exhausted from their struggle against drowning that they were unable for some time to tell anything about the wreck.

The persons saved by the Sheboygan say that with the crashing away of the upper works all persons aboard the Hackley ran on deck. Hasty preparations for a plunge into the water were begun, but before any plans could be carried out, the boat listed, turned over and went down like a rock.

Search is still being made for any person who may have escaped death and for the bodies of those who were drowned.

SPECIAL SERVICE.

Official Tribute Will Be Paid to Sir Michael Herbert's Memory.

Washington, Oct. 5.—In a memorial service to be held at St. John's church on Tuesday, October 6, Rev. Cotton Smith, the rector, officiating, this government will pay official tribute to the memory of Rt. Hon. Sir Michael H. Herbert, G. C. M. G. A., C. B., his Brittanic majesty's ambassador to the United States, who died September 30. The president, his cabinet and the diplomatic corps will attend the services.

Mr. Arthur Raikes, first secretary of embassy and charge d'affaires ad interim, will receive Monday by cable from King Edward designation to be present as the personal representative of his majesty. In the absence of Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, Senor de Aspirez, the Mexican ambassador, will be the acting dean of the corps, and will rank next to the president. In the event that he is able to reach Washington in time, Baron Von Sternberg, the Germán ambassador, who was Sir Michael's closest friend in the corps, will attend as the personal representative of Emperor William. Baron Sternburg is now at his summer home in New Hampshire.

Invitations to the service were issued from the state department Sunday by Mr. Loomis, the acting secretary of state, to the officials of the Washington government and members of the diplomatic corps. Prominent army and navy officials will also be present, and it is expected that they and the members of the corps will be in uniform.

This service is without precedent. Sir Michael is the only ambassador accredited to this government who has died while absent on leave. The service is in accordance with the wishes of the president, who was for years a warm personal friend of Sir Michael.

Mr. Loomis was suddenly called to his home in Ohio Sunday but hopes to return to Washington on Tuesday.

Sir Michael and Lady Herbert were members of St. John's church, as was Lord Pauncefote, whose funeral was held there last year.

It is expected that the funersl of the British ambassador will take place about the same time on Tuesday at his home in England.

London, Oct. 5.—By the king's command a memorial service for Sir Michael Herbert will be held in Marlborough House chapel, adjoining St. James palace, on Tuesday afternoon. Special seats will be reserved for members of the diplomatic corps.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 2.—The Securities Warehouse Co., of New York, has arranged to lend $10,000,000 to the Kentucky Burley Tobacco Growers' association with which to buy the first year's crop from the growers.

The following is an extract from a letter of Mrs. Sophia Webster Loyd's life, as published in the Norwood, Ohio, Gazette, after her death:

"Mr. Lloyd, a civil engineer as well as teacher, was engaged in 1853 as one of a party to survey a railroad between Covington and Louisville, Ky. His wife, then the mother of two children, John Uri and Nelson Ashley, soon followed him, locating near the line of the survey in Burlington, Boone County, Ky., and it was at this time that Mrs. Lloyd became a member of the Baptist church. Shortly after their reaching Kentucky came the great panic which paralyzed all industries throughout the United States, stranding the little family among strangers. Mr. Lloyd then turned his attention to teaching, being assisted in this by his wife. Their new-found friends did all they could to help them. In those days communication between the state of New York and Kentucky was a difficult matter, and they could expect no assistance from their former home. Ever after the friendship between the New York wanderers and their Southern friends was most loyal and affectionate. To the end of her days it was a pleasure to Mrs. Lloyd to hear from her old Kentucky friends, and she kept herself well informed as to the changes in the families in Boone County, and for this purpose was a subscriber to and a reader of the Boone County Recorder. Later, the family moved to Petersburg, Ky., where the father and mother took charge of the village school for several years. An opportunity opening to go to Florence, Ky., on the Lexington Pike, the family moved there, and here was their home during most of the Civil War.

"During vacations, Mr. Lloyd would survey throughout Kentucky and occasionally would take part in distant surveying enterprises. But it may be said that the family, from the time they left New York until the death of Mr. Lloyd, lived in Boone County, Ky., excepting a few years, about 1870 when they lived in Crittenden, Grant County, Ky., about twenty miles south of Florence, on the Lexington Pike.

"It was recently remarked by one of their old scholars that the impress of the Lloyds as teachers is to be found on the business and professional world; for many Northern Kentucky men of reputation gained their education under their instruction, and at the funeral of Mrs. Lloyd there were many who came from afar to pay their last tribute of respect."

Politically there was considerable doing in Burlington, last Monday. Immediately afternoon, and as soon as the Master Commissioner had completed his sales, Hon. James W. Kennedy informed the crowd that several candidates were present, and desired to speak. He then introduced Hon. Ernest C. Smith, editor of the Carrollton Democrat, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district. Mr. Smith then proceeded with a rattling Democratic speech, and he made a good impression on his audience. Mr. Smith was followed by Messrs. Bourne, Gray, Greene, Lilly and McElrath, candidates for the Democratic nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney, in the order mentioned. Each of these gentlemen presented his claims to the office in good style, and it was apparent that each had a good following in the crowd. The speakers spoke from the court house steps, because the circuit court room is undergoing repairs and could not be occupied.

Fine Farm For Sale.

I withdraw from sale my farm of 255 acres at Hebron at the price named in a recent notice. The farm is for sale at a bargain if sold soon, but not at that price. The conditions and circumstances and opportunities existing when that offer was made, do not exist now—hence the withdrawal. This is a magnificent farm, finely located and elegantly improved. The land and improvements are all in splendid condition. This plantation and its improvements were planned, constructed, developed and finished for a superb country home, for a country gentleman, and only a man of that character can appreciate it. The whole farm is as beautiful as a city park. It is for sale at a bargain if sold soon. If not sold soon it will be for rent to good and careful men.

A Chicago man has observed that, "Good deeds are better than real estate deeds—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say: "My good friend, cheer up." A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold, and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by All Druggists.

When one is growing a diversified lot of crops there is little time for choosing seasons in which to do the necessary branches of the work. In many localities there is a rooted objection to fall plowing, and in some cases these objections may be sound, although in the majority of cases there are three good arguments in favor of fall plowing to one against it. There is more time to do the work, and as a result it is better done in the fall. Fall plowed soil can be worked earlier in the spring because it is open and warms up earlier. In the normal season one can plant in fall-plowed ground a week or ten days earlier than in ground plowed in the spring. In some sections where it does not seem advisable to harrow after fall plowing, and especially when sod land has been turned under, a disc harrow can be run over the ground to advantage, leaving the work of the smoothing harrow to be done in the spring.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that: "Good deeds are better than real estate deeds—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say: "My good friend, cheer up." A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold, and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by All Druggists.

M. F. Stephenson, of Walton, called Monday and ordered bills for a sale of stock, crop and household goods on the 31st inst.

Only a Very Few Published.

It is not possible for the proprietors to publish more than a very few of the numerous letters received in praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and telling of its remarkable cures. They come from people in every walk in life and from every state in the Union. The following from Mr. T. W. Greathonse, of Prattsburg, Ga., speaks for itself: "I would have been dead now but for the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It cured me of chronic diarrhoea after seven years of suffering. I can never say too much in praise of that remedy." For sale by All Druggists.

W. C. Ryle writes from Fresno, California: "Enclosed you will find P. O. order for $1 50 in return for which please send me the RECORDER for one year. We are situated two miles from the city of Fresno in the San Joakin Valley. This is the center of the raisin growing district of California. About 140,000,000 tons are packed in Fresno annually, and about the same amount of wine grapes are also raised. Many other fruits are grown here, also, such as the orange, lemon, prune and olives, but grapes and figs are the staples. Very little grain is grown here, except barley cattle are fed on alfalfa, which grows here to perfection. Since I have been in California I have visited San Francisco, San Jose, Santa Barbara and Los Angeles, besides many smaller towns, but have seen no place which compares with Fresno. The San Joakin Valley is about 60 miles wide. In the east can be seen the Sierra Nevada mountains, and in the west the Coast Range. The ground is very level, with fine roads, which are kept oiled, so there is no dust. There are many beautiful homes surrounded by palms, ferns and all kinds of flowers. But while we are in the garden spot of California we have not forgotten Kentucky, and the RECORDER will be a welcome guest, eagerly looked for each week.

Near-Sighted Christians

Distressing Condition from Which Many of God's Children Suffer

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.

Chicago, Sunday, Oct. .1903.

Text.—"Fret not thyself because of evil-doers. . . . Fret not thyself in any wise to do evil."—Ps. 37:1, 8.

MANY Christians are afflicted with near-sightedness. The natural eye may be perfect and perform its functions with unerring faithfulness, but they are near-sighted nevertheless. They may be able to see the glories of mountain, of woodland, of meadow, with waters shimmering and splashing in the sunshine, and birds sailing in the blue vault of the heavens, but notwithstanding the keenness of the natural vision which enables them to drink in the beauties of nature, they may be woefully and distressingly near-sighted. The spiritual vision is defective. The eyes of the soul are not trained to see beyond the present moment, or circumstance, or condition, or need. There is no looking off to the distant triumph and blessing of the Lord, for the eyes are holden by the stress of present circumstances, or the glitter of present gain. It is as though the Christian used the little end of a telescope when looking at the things of God, and reversing it and magnifying and bringing nearer objects when looking at the world. Jesus charged His disciples with having eyes and yet seeing not, and the type of the near-sighted Christian is not extinct. He is met with on every hand. Yea, perhaps we will not have to go very far at the present moment to discover such an one. Almost all Christians are afflicted with spiritual near-sightedness at times, while with others the condition is chronic. This is a disease which is distressing to the Christian and limits his efficiency in the service of the Lord. The Christian who permits this disease to fasten itself upon him is handicapped, both as to his personal relationship to his Lord and his relationship to the world. There is confused uncertainty attending his movements and he is unable to see far enough to appreciate his opportunities and blessings. Take for illustration the person who is suffering from near-sightedness of the natnral eye, and whose defect has not been cured or corrected by properly-fitted lenses. What a great disadvantage he labors nnder. He is never quite sure of his footing, and everything is confused and misshapen before his imperfect vision. And it is so with the Christian who suffers from spiritual near-sightedness. He is not able to look far enough ahead to walk with any certainty or courage, and his efficiency in service is curtailed, or even wholly destroyed, because of present stress or difficulties or present pleasures and hope of gain.

BUT what connection has the near-sighted Christian to the words of our text? Much, because the Christian who frets at the success or prosperity of evil-doers, or who is tempted to meet evil with evil, or trickery with trickery, or questionable shrewdness with questionable shrewdness, is the near-sighted Christian. The whole thirty-seventh Psalm is splendid eyesalve for this disease of near-sightedness. Our text is the argent admonition which introduces to the rest of the Psalm. The Psalmist unfolds in great richness and fullness and clearness the reasons why the Christian should not be near-sighted. Doubtless in David's day there were a good many people afflicted with this disease. In one of the Psalms ascribed to Asaph—the seventy-third—the troubled and perplexed and near-sighted poet exclaims:

"But as for me, my feet were almost gone;
My steps had well-nigh slipped.
For I was envious at the arrogant,
When I saw the prosperity of the wicked.
For there are no bands in their death;
But their strength is firm.
They are not in trouble as other men;
Neither are they plagued like other men.
Therefore pride is as a chain about their neck;
Violence covereth them as a garment.
Their eyes stand out with fatness;
They have more than heart could wish.
They scoff, and in wickedness utter oppression;
They speak loftily.
They have set their mouth in the heavens,
And their tongue walketh through the earth.
Therefore his people return thither;
And waters of a full cup are wrung out by them.
And they say, How doth God know?
And is there knowledge in the Most High?
Behold, these are the wicked;
And, being alway at ease, they increase in riches.
Surely in vain have I cleansed my heart,
And washed my hands in innocency;
For all the day long have I been plagued,
And chastened every morning.
If I had said, I will speak thus;
Behold, I had dealt treacherously with the generation of thy children.
When I thought how I might know this,
It was too painful for me."

And if he had looked nowhere else than upon the picture which he has painted in the preceding lines, surely his feet would have wholly slipped, but he goes on to tell us:

"I went into the sanctuary of God,
And considered their latter end.
Surely thou settest them in slippery places;
Thou castest them down to destruction."

Asaph's near-sightedness was cured by a glimpse of God and His large purposes and ultimate triumph, and so may the near-sightedness of all Christians be so cured. The thirty-seventh Psalm unfolds the part God plays in human affairs, and explains the reason why the Christian needs not fret because of evil-doers, or because of their prosperity. Read it carefully and prayerfully.

TAKE your Bible and search through its pages for the long list of near-sighted followers of God. Some suffered from intermittent attacks of the disease, others suffered perpetually from the distressing condition. Saul belonged to this latter class. His persistent near-sightedness kept him continually out of the pathway of God's will and purpose for him. He would not see that his course led down and away from God. And how many are there who are running perilously near to the course which Saul took to his destruction. A near-sightedness which shut out all but the present purpose or plan, or desire. Then there are those who suffer from the intermittent attacks of near-sightedness. There was David. A night of debauch and pleasure cost him days and weeks and months of agony of soul, and days and distress and disgrace of life. One has only to read the fifty-first Psalm to know what his near-sightedness cost him. Sorrow and distress and trouble ultimately are the lot of the near-sighted Christian. He may forget that there is an accounting day coming. The near-sighted Christian does not look over into the to-morrows, but sees only the desires and attractions and ambitions of to-day. He lives from hand to mouth, and gulps down anything that comes along. No wonder there is spiritual dyspepsia, that there are deformities and monstrosities. Near-sightedness brings in its wake a distressing array of difficulties and troubles.

AND when the consequences of near-sightedness are realized what sense of regret there is that one has allowed himself to fall into such error. And a new danger is encountered here. If realization of past near-sightedness is not followed by a treating and curing of the disease, there is soon further cause to mourn continued near-sightedness. If I know that I have a certain disease, prudence and necessity demand that I take means to cure that disease. How foolish for me to mourn the ill effects suffered from the disease without taking corrective steps to prevent further evil consequences And yet that is exactly the way in which so many, many Christians go blundering through life. Their career is one long-continued story of regret, regret, regret, but corrective measures are not taken to prevent the reason for regret in the future. It is easy to look backward and realize past near-sightedness, but it is another matter to have that near-sightedness cured. Why go on blundering? Why not call in the Great Physician and seek His aid in effecting a cure? But it is one thing to call in the Saviour and have Him diagnose the case, and it is quite another thing to take His medicine. When He prescribes more faith; more active, positive goodness; more patient waiting, you must take them all if you would be cured. Near-sightedness limits the vision to the present, but faith reaches up and on until the certainties of God are laid hold of. Near-sightedness prevents one from seeing the opportunities of being good and doing good. It destroys the desire to do good. Spiritual near-sightedness tends to selfishness and self-seeking. But let works, the handmaiden of faith, have her rightful place in the life, and another long step is taken in effecting a cure. The near-sighted Christian may be busy saying, "Lord, Lord," and withholding the cup of cold water which will win the recognition and approval of the Master. And with faith and works must be mixed a liberal amount of patience. The near-sighted Christian knows not the meaning of that word patience. He does not know how to wait. His near-sightedness results in impatience. He cannot see far enough to wait for things; near-sightedness tells him he must have at once or not at all. But patience must be taken in liberal doses, if that disease of near-sightedness is to be cured.

THE more alarming condition of near-sightedness is suggested in the latter part of our text: "Fret not thyself in anywise to do evil." Is the admonition of the Psalmist needed today? What does it mean to be fretted into the commission of wrong? It seems to me there are two directions in which this admonition of the Psalmist is violated very generally in this our day. First of all, in the prevalence of lowered standards, a sort of compromising attitude toward evil; and secondly, the laying aside the weapons of righteousness and truth in combat with evil, and resorting to the arms and tactics of the enemy. Both are evidences of near-sightedness on the part of the Christian who is guilty of such practices. There is great danger of the Christian under the stress of circumstances and the tendencies of the times in falling into either or both of these errors, and perhaps without being conscious of it. I am inclined to believe there is a steady drifting away from the one standard of truth and righteousness which God has established. Human wisdom and reasoning are busy leveling these standards down to man's conditions, instead of seeking to bring man up to the high standards of God. It is declared openly that the successful business man cannot be strictly honest, and the Christian allows himself to be influenced by such declarations, and a low standard comes to rule in the life. Christians, who would consider it dishonest to cheat their neighbor out of five cents, consider they have done a wise and commendable and right thing when they cheat the railway out of a fare it has earned. Christians, who know that a lie is an abomination in the sight of the Lord and in the stepping stone to other evil doing, believe or try to believe that the white lie, as it is called (white with the leprosy of sin, perhaps), is admissible and right at times. And all this is an indication, a sad indication, of the growth of lower standards.

THE child's copy book furnishes us an illustration here which is pointed and emphatic. The first word written under the perfect copy furnished at the head of the column is excellent and very like the perfect original, but as the child proceeds with its task and uses as a pattern that which it has but previously written, the last effort at the bottom of the page is sadly unlike the perfect copy from which the start was made. Unconsciously that child has departed step by step from the well-formed letters of the copy until it is startled at last when it lifts its eyes from the word at the bottom of the column and sees how unlike it is to that at the top. The irregularities which crept into the first transcription and which were hardly perceptible have been intensified until the alteration has become decided and striking. So it is with principles, rules and customs, and even laws. Man has been busy for a good many years cutting his forms of rules of conduct and government from the patterns which the preceding generation has furnished, until principles and conditions have come to prevail which would not have been conceived of or tolerated years ago. Take the present attitude towards divorce and many of the laws relating thereto, as an illustration. Take the scientific nonsense met with on every hand regarding child-bearing, the rearing and control of children, and the life and atmosphere of the home. Take the Sunday question—Sunday theaters; Sunday newspapers with their villainous humor, and their sensational features, which deaden the religious sense of the adults and blast the budding germs of piety in the young; Sunday sports and outings. Take the spirit which largely rules in legislative bodies, and in the commercial and industrial worlds, one must admit that here has been a departure from first principles.

AND in the second place Christians are fretted into the doing of evil when they adopt questionable means in dealing with or combating evil. They reason that you must meet the enemy on his own ground and with his own weapons if you would conquer. They lose sight of the fact that God is planning the battle, and that carnal weapons in the hands of the Christian are dishonoring to God and dangerous to himself. Even though they seem to succeed for the time, ultimately they will react and strike back after the manner of the boomerang. God's warning: "Fret not thyself in any wise to do evil," is forgotten when evil assails, and the chafing spirit plunges into the conflict regardless of Christian dignity or the principles of righteousness. When the enemy resorts to sharp double dealing, attempt is made to retaliate in kind. Trickery calls forth trickery. But the Christian never yet won a permanent and enduring advantage or victory through conduct or methods which were contrary to God's standards of righteousness and truth. Often the individual Christian, often religious bodies, come face to face with the temptation of securing an advantage by a course which will not stand the searching glance of God or secure His approval. Human wisdom and reasoning would declare that it was the right course to pursue because of the advantage it would secure, but departure from the pathway of strict integrity or righteousness brings its penalty.

THE Christian can always afford to wait on God. If it is the will of God that the object sought or desired is to be attained, then it will come in due time, by methods and means which are alike upright and honorable. Jacob did not have to lie to secure the birthright and the blessings which accompanied it. It was his by right of purchase and by fulfilment of the promise and purpose of God. He secured the blessing and birthright by questionable means because he would not wait upon God to bring His purposes to pass; but see the train of evils, difficulties and troubles which followed Jacob all his life until his sons in turn lied to him and nearly broke his heart in the case of Joseph. David knew that it did not pay to do evil, even to obtain a great advantage. Twice did he let his enemy Saul go safely out of his hand when seemingly providentially the king was placed in his power, and when he might have reasoned that it would be a good thing to end the conflict in Israel and ascend to the throne for which he had been annointed. The near-sighted Christian frets because of evil-doers; he frets himself into the adoption of lowered standards; he frets himself into the adoption of evil methods in combating evil, but he loses in the end. God says: "Fret not thyself because of evil-doers. Fret not thyself in any wise to do evil." We need more faith; we need more positive goodness in our lives and hearts; we need more patience in waiting upon God, if we would obey God's voice and be free from the sad affliction of spiritual near-sightedness.

Well to Bear in Mind.

That which is good to be done cannot be done too soon, and if it is neglected to be done early it will generally happen that it will not be done at all.

WILD-GOOSE DRIVING.

Form of Sport Much Enjoyed by the Gunners of Warren County, North Carolina.

"I doubt if there is another place where wild geese are hunted after the method used on the Roanoke river in North Carolina," said a New York sportsman who has hunted there, relates the New York Sun. "In the first place, there is no choicer haunt for wild geese than parts of the Roanoke river.

"In Warren county the river is for miles a succession of falls and rapids, and is unnavigable except by means of the peculiar flat boats the natives use. The river is a quarter of a mile wide.

"For miles the shores are lined with oak and beech trees and all kinds of berry bushes and wild grapevines. In their seasons acorns and beechnuts and berries and grapes fall into the river in enormous quantities, and as they are carried down stream they lodge in the hollows of the rocks. It is this accumulation of palatable picking that attracts the wild geese in large numbers to that part of the river.

"But the geese, after their kind, are extremely shy, and the difficulty of getting about in a boat where they are feeding makes gunning for them, except in one particular way, rather barren sport.

"It is not known who discovered that while wild geese on the Roanoke river would not sit and wait for the gunner to get within gunshot of them, they could be driven right up to the guns, but for time out of mind that is the way wild geese have been hunted in Warren county, N. C. The geese are driven to the blinds where the gunners are hidden, something in the way grouse are driven on the English moors. If goose driving is practiced elsewhere I have yet to hear of the place.

"In hunting wild geese on the Roanoke river, a blind for two men is built on the smallest rock that will give them sufficient foothold and well below some favorite feeding place for the geese. The nature of the rocks and the hollows scatter the flocks as they pasture, and while there may be hundreds of fowl in sight there will rarely be more than two or three together.

"After the gunners have taken their places in the blind a third hunter makes his way in a boat up the stream until he gets above a lot of feeding geese. Then he works out into the river and drifts down with the current.

"As he approaches the geese he begins to whistle, shrill and loud. He may whistle a tune if he knows one, or he may just whistle. And he must be a person of long and strong wind.

"When the geese hear the whistling they begin to gather into one flock. As long as the man in the boat keeps whistling the huddling goes, although constantly moving along down stream, and ever out of gun range of the boat, will have no eyes or ears for anything else.

"Tossing carelessly along on the rapids a skilful driver will have a hundred or more geese drifting ahead of him, gazing wonderingly at him and listening to his whistle, by the time they have drawn near to the blind, all well bunched, and offering great opportunity to the waiting gunners within. When the geese have been driven to within 30 or 40 yards of the blind the guns open on them.

"The geese rise in such confusion after the first fire that it is easy to pick up and use a second gun on them before they have got out of range, and the driver is pretty sure to drop a few as the frightened flocks wing over him in their flight up stream, in which direction they invariably speed. It is great sport, this wild goose driving on the Roanoke river, as any one will agree who tries it once."

THIBETAN CHILDREN.

The children of Thibet are neither cuddled nor amused. No one pays any attention to them. They have no sweets and no playthings. If they are entertained, it is entirely through their own effort or invention. And one diversion never fails, for they are experts in riding on the backs of cows and horses, it hardly matters which, says Youth's Companion.

A Thibetan baby differs widely from other children in seeming to have little nervous development, and consequently slight capacity for "taking notice." So, says the author of a book on Thibet, a white baby living in Thibet with a traveling party attracted the greatest amount of attention. He was only an ordinary child, but his wide-awake interest in life seemed to the Thibetans something amazing. They would come on tiptoe, their tongues protruding, to stand and gaze at him, asleep in his hammock, then holding up both thumbs and putting out the tongue still farther, in token of approbation. When it came time for his bath, and the tent was closed on account of the draught, men and women would pull up the flap about the bottom, and the whole aperture would be filled with dark faces and laughing black eyes.

"White child!" one would call, and then another.

"See her put him into the water!"

"He will die!"

"Why does she not baste him with butter and leave him out in the sun?"

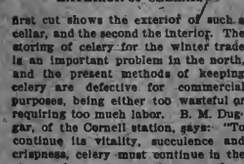
A CELLAR FOR CELERY.



Improved Storage System, Recommended by the Cornell (N. Y.) Experiment Station.

When celery is grown in considerable quantities it is necessary to have a place in which to store it. It is also advisable to construct the place early in the season to make sure that it is ready when needed. We show two cuts of an improved storage for celery that has recently been illustrated by the Cornell Experiment station. The first cut shows the exterior of such a cellar, and the second the interior. The storing of celery for the winter trade is an important problem in the north, and the present methods of keeping celery are defective for commercial purposes, being either too wasteful or requiring too much labor. B. M. Duggar, of the Cornell station, says: "To continue its vitality, succulence and crispness, celery must continue in the storage house a very slow growth, a growth sufficient to establish the roots in the soil and to complete the development of the inner leaves. Thorough freezing is fatal, but the lowest temperature at which freezing will not take place is most desirable. Not only does this temperature hold the plant in the desired condition of greatly suspended activities, but it renders next to impossible the growth of injurious fungi, which would speedily wilt and rot it. In order, then, to approach the temperature sought, the house should be so snugly constructed as to provide against freezing. Again, it should be so provided with ventilating appliances that at any time advantage may be taken of any cold intervals to rapidly and effectively chill the house, after which it might be securely closed for a warmer period, and, with this inclosed lower temperature remains for a time at a point more nearly that desired.—Farmers' Review.

INTERIOR OF CELLAR.

HEIGHT OF FRUIT TREES.

Tendency of Progressive Orchardists Now is to Lower Heads for All Kinds of Fruits.

There is considerable difference of opinion among orchardists as to the height at which fruit trees should be headed. In the eastern states there are many who think the trunks should be four to five feet, and some of the apple orchards have bodies taller than this. However well this may be for the eastern conditions, it is not the proper way to train trees anywhere in the central and western states, and in the east the tendency is to lower heads. The more recently planted apple orchards are rarely over two to three feet to the lower branches, and the pear orchards from one to two feet.

Any one who has had experience in the west knows that the hot suns and almost constant summer winds work havoc in orchards that are headed high. The flat-headed apple tree borer works in the trunks and large branches that are exposed to the sun. I have seen apple trees in northern Texas that were badly attacked by this insect almost ten feet from the ground. In Kansas and Missouri it is not so abundant and destructive, but nearly all the apple trees with tall, bare trunks have borers on them.

Tall heads give the wind greater power over the roots, which strains them unduly, often causing the trees to incline to the northeast or fall to the grounds. The fruit is much harder to gather from tall headed trees than from those with low heads. It is especially important that peach trees should be headed low, and then kept pruned back so that ladders will rarely be needed to be used in gathering the peaches.

Spraying is much more easily done on low-headed trees, and the same is true of pruning. There does not seem to be any good reason for heading fruit trees high, except that they are troublesome to cultivate when the branches are very close to the ground. This can be largely overcome by using tools that are made to meet these requirements.—Midland Farmer.

Roots Penetrate Rock.

There is a tree just beyond the New England railway arch on the Middlebury road in Connecticut which has arisen through a solid rock many tons in weight, making a fissure which would require a dynamite explosion to accomplish.

CORN FOR THE CALVES.

After Fifteen Years of Experience Writer Declares It to Be the Very Best Food.

My experience in raising calves extends over fifteen years. Of course, everyone knows how to feed calves, but many do not know just what is best to feed. Ask me, and I will say "shelled corn." "When do you begin?" I begin when the calf is three days old. Feed it just a few kernels at first and gradually increase to a pint by the time the calf is six weeks old. They chew it all up. I never know a calf to pass a whole grain. I never feed a calf more than two quarts of milk at a feeding. If I am raising calves for milkers I do not feed them enough to make them fat. I have experimented with all manner of ground foods, but none of them equal shelled corn. My calves' hair is sleek and glossy, they are growing rapidly, they run and frisk about and are always ready to eat corn. My neighbor, who persists in feeding his calves all the milk they can drink, besides a couple of quarts of ground feed, has funny looking calves. They are little, pot-gutted things; hair standing on end. They have the scours nearly all the time; lie around half asleep. I wouldn't trade one of mine for a dozen of his. In short, if you want good calves feed them corn; if you want poor, worthless animals, feed them something else.—I. H. Watt, in Practical Farmer.

USUALLY EFFECTS CURE.

Common-Sense Device for Preventing Cows Throwing Fences or Hooking Each Other.

This is my style of a device to prevent cattle throwing fences or hooking other cows. It is made of a wooden strip two and one-half inches wide, and three-fourths inch thick, being attached to the horns by screws. To this is fastened, by a small bolt, a strip of hardwood, three inches wide, one-half inch thick, and of a length sufficient to reach downward within one inch of the face, and to within two or three inches of the nostrils. In the lower end of this strip are previously driven several sharp nails, which project about one-fourth inch. The arrangement, when properly attached, allows the animal to eat and drink with all ease, but when an attempt is made to hook or to throw a fence, the sharpened nails soon cause an abrupt cessation of that kind of mischief.—S. M. Fletcher, in Farm and Home.

Poor Cream Closed Factory.

Poor cream caused the closing of a new creamery in Minnesota recently. The buildings had been erected and equipped at considerable expense and everything was first-class. A large supply of cream was received, but the cream itself was very poor. The farmers said they had too much work to do to bring their cream in more than once a week, and the consequence was that the cream received was of exceptionally poor quality. The butter made was of course correspondingly poor and the money received for it was not sufficient to pay expenses and yield a profit. Hence the creamery shut down. It was known in the immediate neighborhood as a "cooperative concern" on account of its failure.

Gentlemen:---"I can cheerfully say that Mrs. Schley has taken Pe-ru-na and I believe with good effect."--W. S. SCHLEY---Washington, D. C.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY, one of the foremost, notable heroes of the Nineteenth Century. A name that starts terror in the heart of every Spaniard. A man of steady nerve, clear head, undaunted courage and prompt decision.

Approached by a friend recently, his opinion was asked as to the efficacy of Peruna, the national catarrh remedy. Without the slightest hesitation he gave this remedy his endorsement. It appeared on later conversation that Peruna has been used in his family, where it is a favorite remedy.

Such endorsements serve to indicate the wonderful hold that Peruna has upon the minds of the American people. It is out of the question that so great and famous a man as Admiral Schley could have any other reason for giving his endorsement to Peruna than his positive conviction that the remedy is all that he says it is.

The fact is Peruna has overcome all opposition and has won its way to the hearts of the people. The natural timidity which so many people have felt about giving endorsements to any remedy is giving way. Gratitude and a desire to help others has inspired thousands of people to give public testimonials for Peruna who heretofore would not have consented to such publicity.

Never before in the annals of medicine has it happened that so many men of national and international reputation have been willing to give unqualified and public endorsements to a proprietary remedy. No amount of advertising could have accomplished such a result. Peruna has won on its own merits. Peruna cures catarrh of whatever phase or location in the human body. This is why it receives so many notable and unique endorsements.

Meanest Man.

The meanest man in Illinois lives at Centralia. He put a large porcelain egg in the nest of an ambitious hen and found that the eggs she had afterward laid were increased in size. Then he put a goose egg in the nest; the aforesaid hen laid an egg just as large. He was so pleased with the scheme that he put a whitewashed football in the nest and awaited results. When he went the next time to search for eggs he found one as big as a football, but no hen in sight. Securing the egg, he saw engraved on it by the hen photography these words: "I'm no ostrich, but I have done my best." Later he found the hen inside of the egg.—Leaf River (Ill.) Mirror.

Why She Rang Off.

Telephone mistakes may have their serious sides. A man who wanted to communicate with another named Jones looked in the directory and then called up a number. Presently came through the receiver a soft feminine "Hello!" and he asked, "who is that?"

"This is Mrs. Jones."

"Have you any idea where your husband is?"

He couldn't understand why she "rang off" so sharply until he looked in the book again and discovered that he had called up the residence of a widow.—N. Y. Yorker.

He Won.

Like other men of prominence, Admiral Dewey often comes across the irrepressible party, who always affects to be on terms of intimacy with notable persons. Courteous and genial to a degree, the admiral has profound dislike for this sort of nuisance, and does not hesitate to show the feeling. Not long ago, while out walking in Washington, he was accosted by an effusive stranger, who grasped his hand and said: "George, I'll bet you don't know me." The admiral looked his displeasure as he answered, grimly: "You win," and walked on.—Detroit Free Press.

Carrie—"I'm sure you mis judge Mr. Sweetper, papa. He is a man of great ambition. You should hear him tell of the things he is going to do." Carrie's Papa—"And I suppose I'm one of 'em; but I reckon he'll find it harder to accomplish than he fancies it is."—Boston Transcript.

Mrs. Ascum—"Your boy is at college now, eh? He's pretty bright, too, isn't he?" Mrs. Mashpop—"Yes, indeed. His professor says he's a regular genesis."—Philadelphia Press.

REASSURING.

She Expected to Be in the Same "Fix" Herself and Could Therefore Sympathize.

A middle-aged man and his wife decided to take a trip to Washington, and as it was the beginning of the season, they both invested in some new clothes for the journey. Their grown-up children made fun of their "new" appearance, but it was not until they were safely settled in their seats and opened their bags that they discovered the joke that had been played upon them, relates the New York Times.

One of their offspring had filled both satchels with rice, and, on taking out what they needed, the tiny grains were scattered broadcast.

Of course there was at once an amused smile on every one's face, and the mother felt herself getting redder than she had ever been in her life before, and was made no more comfortable when a fat German woman opposite leaned over and said quite audibly: "Ach—never mind. I'm a vidder woman now, but this time next week I'll be in the same fix myself."

Cheaper Than Staying at Home.

The man who wishes to locate in the Southwest this fall has little excuse for staying at home, so far as railroad rates are concerned. The Santa Fe announces very low one-way second-class rates to California—$33 from Chicago, $25 from Kansas City, $30 from St. Louis, and proportionate reductions from the East generally. These tickets are on sale every day until November 30. They are being availed of by those wishing to settle in the San Joaquin and other great valleys of California, likewise Arizona passengers. The same line also offers a rate of one and half fare, plus $2, one-way or round-trip, to the Southwest generally, the first and third Tuesdays of each month; the last semi-monthly excursion filled every available car. On October 20 a special bargain-counter round trip home-seekers' rate is advertised for $20 from Chicago, and $15 from Kansas City to central and eastern Texas and to Oklahoma, also $3 higher to Pecos Valley, of New Mexico.

The mere sightseer will be more interested in the excursions to Los Angeles and San Francisco that are booked on the Santa Fe the latter part of October, account American Bankers' Association. The rate then, out and back, will be $62.50 from Chicago, $50 from Kansas City, and similarly reduced from other points. Anyone may go who has the price in his pocketbook. Special parties will take in the Grand Canyon of Arizona on the way, and will be personally escorted. Those wishing to try an ocean voyage can extend their trip by Oceanic line steamer from San Francisco to Hawaii and enjoy a week's outing in the isles of peace.

A Doctor's Retort.

Every doctor knows the pain and woman who cultivate the habit of accosting him in the street and in the guise of ordinary conversation try to extract free medical advice. One such inquirer greeted an eminent physician with the remark:

"I hear fish as an excellent brain food. Do you think so?"

"Excellent," was the reply, "but in your case it seems a pity to waste the fish."—London Outlook.

A Low Rate to Texas.

October 20th only, the M., K. & T. Ry will have on sale tickets from St. Louis, Hannibal and Kansas City to Texas, Oklahoma and Indian Territory at rate of $15.00 for the round trip, final limit November 10th. Rate of $18.00 will also apply from Cincinnati, $20.00 from Chicago. No one can afford to miss this opportunity of seeing the great southwestern country in the fullness of its glory and prosperity. THE CONVENTION.

Greene Won in the Sixteenth Round Lilly the Last Man Down and Out.

The district convention to nominate a Democratic candidate for Commonwealth's Attorne, was held in the opera house at Walton yesterday. When the convention met the Greene men put County Attorney Castleman for chairman, and the other candidates combined and defeated him with A. B. Rouse, of Burlington, by a vote of 68 to 33. Everett Winn, of Gallatin county, was elected secretary. On the tenth ballot McElrath was dropped and Gray followed shortly after, putting the other three candidates neck and neck. Greens's strength was augmented by the fall of each of the other candidates, and when the opportunity offered Greene made Bourne shoot the Greene made Bourne shoot the shoot, and on the next, the 16th ballot, Bourne retaliated (?) by rising in the convention and casting Owen county's 34 votes for Greene, and it was all over. Greene made a nice little speech accepting the nomination, as did each of the defeated candidates pledging him his support.

A rough rider having got into the White House, Hobson feels that a former naval and osculating hero ought to be able to get into Congress.

Suits have been filed in Austin, Texas, against a number of railroads and the express companies to prevent the corporations from entering into an agreement.

We see by the Oregon City Courier that our old friend, John Westover, recently of Williamstown, is working the big, "yaller" pumpkin scheme as a circulation increaser in the far west.

In the approaching race for Congress in this district the country will have at least one entry, but so far the rural politicians have had very poor luck in going up against the city fellows.

Owensboro people are not hankering after another State Fair. They have got enough to do them for a long time. If Kentucky is to have a State Fair it should have a permanent location. It will never be a success so long as it is portable.

The teachers are making their district meetings in this county more interesting this fall than usual. These meetings can be made of great value to both patrons and teachers if they will but give them the attention to which they are entitled.

It is said that five sixths of the negroes of Virginia are disfranchised. They are still better off than the residents of the District of Columbia where six sixths, white and colored, are disfranchised, with the result of the best city government in the world.

The drought that was becoming serious in this part of the county was broken up last Wednesday afternoon by the best rain that had fallen here in many weeks. The water courses were started again, and the springs refreshed, so there is now plenty of water for all purposes.

New varieties of Russian wheat have been tested with good results at a branch experiment station in Kansas. Several kinds, Kharkov, Crimean, Theiss, etc., yielded over forty bushels per acre, and others ranged from thirty-five to forty bushels. The seed is being sold to Kansas wheat growers.

The bill of exceptions in the Caleb Powers case was signed by Judge Robins last Thursday, which perfects the record for appeal. Powers' attorney asked the court to pay for making the transcript. This the court refused to do unless Powers would make oath that he had no money. Powers immediately gave his check for the cost, which was $750.

An effort has been made by ultra partisan Republicans to send abroad the impression that Gov. Beckham's train pulling out from Howard station, one day last week leaving Gov. Durbin, of Indiana, standing in the rain, was intended as a snub for the Governor of Indiana, after Gov. Beckham had invited him to ride to Louisville in his private coach; but Governor Beckham disclaims any such intention, and Gov. Durbin says his being left was the fault of the train men and not of the Governor of Kentucky. Consequently another issue which it was hoped to make in the Kentucky campaign will have to be abandoned.

An interesting report that John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, is slated for Mr. Roosevelt's running mate in 1904, is given to the public by the Chicago Chronicle. The Chronicle says that a deal has been made whereby capital has conceded to labor a place on the national republican ticket and that Mr. Mitchell has been picked as the vice presidential candidate. The Chronicle says: "The basis for the nomination of Mr. Mitchell for vice president is said to be a desire on the part of the republican leaders to calm the feelings of organized labor against the administration and the decision of President Roosevelt in favor of the 'open shop.' It is figured that there is a division of sentiment on this question in trades union ranks and that the selection of Mr. Mitchell on the national ticket will go a long way toward assuring the trades unionists of the country that the republican party is not attempting to break up the union labor movement."

An interesting comparison as to the amount of gold in the United States Treasury and that stored in the treasuries of other countries, was recently made by Ellis H. Roberts, treasurer of the United States, in a speech delivered before the joint convention of the Maryland and District of Columbia Bankers' association. According to the Washington correspondent for the New York American, Mr. Roberts declared that at present there is the largest sum of gold ever recorded in the treasury, $653,000,000. Mr. Roberts added: "Our treasury holds three and nineteenths times the amount of gold belonging to the Bank of England, more than three and eighteenths times that of the Imperial German Bank, almost three times that of the Austro-Hungarian Bank, and lacks only $8,000,000 of being equal to that of both the banks of England and France. It exceeds the amount of Russia, Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands combined."

The Republican platform denounces the Democratic party because it "fetters enterprise, excludes capital, and handicaps industry" in Kentucky. This declaration is shown by the records to be untrue. A plain statement will refute the charge. During the four years of the Republican administration under Gov. Bradley, there were organized under the corporation laws of the State 822 corporations, with an aggregate capital of $26,526,940, and the organization tax paid into the State Treasury therefor was $26,526.94. During the first three years and six months of the Beckham administration, up to June 30, 1903, there were organized under the corporation laws of the State 1,792 corporations, with an aggregate authorized capital of $99,602,795, and the organization tax paid into the treasury therefor was $99,603. It is thus shown that during three and one half years of the Democratic administration that $69,075,855 more of the capital found its way into Kentucky and was invested in the channels of trade, than did under the full term of four years while Mr. Bradley was Governor. To show the confidence which the stockholders in the Belknap Hardware Company have in Kentucky, under a Democratic administration, it may be stated that its capital stock has recently been increased from $1,000,000 to $2,500,000. If it had not been safe to invest in Kentucky, under a Democratic administration, such a good business man as Col. Belknap's friends claims that he is would not have done so.

It is not probable that any one will attempt at the coming World's fair to work such a "fake" as was done in the Iowa building at the Columbian exposition in Chicago ten years ago. A great sensation among agriculturists was created by a display of some immense ears of corn, which were put forth as a sample of Iowa's chief staple. People supposed they were genuine, and all marveled at the size of the ears and wondered what sort of soil there could be in Iowa to produce them. It turned out afterward that they were the product of a Shenandoah genius, who sawed a lot of corncobs into sections, glued them together and then stuck on the kernels. It was done so nicely that it deceived the most experienced farmers. These big ears of corn were afterward exhibited at state fairs all over the country.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Burley Tobacco Growers.

The Executive Committee of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association held a meeting in Lexington on the 10th inst., when the Finance Committee reported that the Security Warehouse Company, of New York City, had agreed to finance the concern, provided 25 per cent of the amount wanted could be raised in subscribed stock by the growers. This stock to either be paid in cash or to put up 25 per cent of each crop of tobacco. Thereupon the committee issued the following circular:

"We congratulate the Burley tobacco growers on the success of our organization. We have 70 per cent of the Burley tobacco, and believe we will soon have practically all of it signed to our company, because some growers have been withholding their crops to see if we will be able to comply with our contracts.

"The money has been secured from capitalists to pay for the tobacco, but it will be necessary for the Association to raise some money with which to prepare for handling the tobacco and to start business with. In order to raise this money each grower of tobacco must feel that he is in a measure individually responsible and our success depends upon your loyalty to the organization and your willingness to come to its aid. The Executive Committee for your county, or our agent, will call upon you and explain what is necessary to raise the needed money, and what will be expected of you. However, don't wait to be hunted up, but call upon your county committeeman at once and have him explain it to you.

"You are urged to subscribe for the stock of the Association to the extent you are able, at $10 a share. If you can not pay the money, you can pay for the stock in tobacco when you deliver it. The stock can be paid for with the increased price you receive for your tobacco, and you will have your stock clear. A large amount of stock has already been subscribed, and every dollar's worth of stock needed, will, we believe, be subscribed within thirty days.

"The members are all notified that the Association will be ready to comply with its contracts on the first of next December, and they should not contract to sell their tobacco to anyother party or concern."

Crop and Stock.

Yearling mules are selling in Boyle county at about an average of $70.

James Whalley, of Bath county sold over $700 worth of hogs this year, the produce of three sows.

In Bourbon county James R. Letton sold to Steve Houston two Shropshiredown bucks for $27 50.

W. B. Green, shipped from Winchester for Baltimore 427 hogs, weight 100 to 225 pounds, bought in Clark county at 4¾ to 5¼ cents.

Jonas Weil bought of Van B. Nelson, of Woodford county, 70 head of 1,060 pound steers at $3.25 and of E. M. Wallace 28 head of 1,050 pounds at $3.35.

M. J. Farris, of Boyle, has purchased 6,000 bales of hay, which he will mix with shelled corn and feed to his cattle this winter. It costs $14 per ton delivered in his barns.

The bacon hog is now attracting a lot of interest. This class has captured the public taste and left the heavy fat hog in the lurch. The packing houses demands a good bacon hog and pay well for it.

McBrayer Moore, of Danville, had bad luck with his 15 thoroughbreds in New York, where he went to sell them. Five died of pneumonia, 9 were retired on account of sickness, and 4 sold for $3,725.

There is more loss storing potatoes than in storing any other crop. Barring all waste from rot, there is a heavy shrinkage, both in quantity and weight. A bin holding 100 bushels will show a shrinkage of nearly one-tenth, besides a greater loss in weight. A bushel basket full, that will weigh fully sixty pounds in October, when taken from the soil, will not weigh so much after being stored in the cellar during the winter. The shrinkage in weight is much less when kept in pits closely covered with earth, for there is then less chance for evaporation.

The man who owns money is to be congratulated, but the man who is owned by money is in a bad fix.

Potato tops cost the farmer more than tubers in fertility. The solid matter of tubers is mostly starch, while the tops contain a large proportion of potash, for which reason potash is an essential ingredient in the cultivation of potatoes, as healthy tops and vigorous growth conduce to a large proportion of tubers. The tops of all root crops should be saved and added to the manure heap.

It was ... the health ... sr., and T. ... to avoid not ... them to be ... first meeting ... 50 years ... Rev. Kirtley was not present. The interesting history of Bellevue church, prepared by Rev. Uts was read by Rev. Atwood.

On Thursday and Friday the business of the Association was attended to, and the reports to that body from the several churches were very gratifying to the membership.

One church, Gunpowder, was admitted to the Association. This church was organized August 2nd, 1902, with 24 members, and was the result of much earnest labor on the part of Rev. Samuel Adams, who is its pastor. Rev. Adams, assisted by Rev. Atwood, held one revival with the Gunpowder church, and several additions resulted. When the church was received into the Association, last week, it reported a membership of 30, and no church in the Association was more liberal in contributions for mission work, &c., than was Gunpowder church, the number of members being considered. It is believed a strong church will be built up at Gunpowder.

The session of the Association held with Bellevue church, last week was one of the most pleasant in the history of the Association. The people of the town and neighborhood left nothing undone that was calculated to contribute to the pleasure and comfort of persons from a distance. Their homes were thrown open to visitors at night, and each day a sumptuous dinner was served in the church yard grove. During the three days many able addresses and sermons were delivered by the several noted visiting divines present. Among the visiting ministers were Revs. W. H. Felix, of Lexington; E. N. Dicken, of Franklin; C. W. Daniel, of Covington; G. W. Argabright, of Georgetown; C. F. Dame, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., J. A. Burnes, of Oneds; J. G. Bow, of Missouri; T. T. Eaton, Louisville; G. W. Base Ball.

Game called at 2:30 p. m.

The Boones and the Petersburg ball team played here Saturday, and the game was one that gave the rooters for each side a fine opportunity to exercise their lungs. For the first three innings the Petersburg rooters had everything their own way, the Boones being retired in one, two, three order, while the Petersburg boys brought in three runs. In the fourth inning the Boones rallied and scored three runs, two of them being driven in by Jesse Kirk's home run hit. This started the Burlington rooters who had remained quiet up to this time. Pandemonium reigned for the next three innings which was clinched in favor of the Boones when they had the bases full of men, and Bullock sent them across the plate with a home run drive to left field. Petersburg never rallied from this shock and were goose egged in the next two innings, the Boones making one run in the eigth. The Boones' infield put up a very strong game, but Petersburg got very much the best of them in the out field. Following is the score:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9—
Petersburg	0	1	1	2	0	0	2	0	0— 6

Batteries—Houston and Theetge; Hughes and Hogan.

Struck Out—By Houston 6; by Hughes 4.

Hits—Boones 11; Petersburg 10.

Home Run—Vessenmier, Kirkpatrick, Bullock.

Two Base Hits—Hughes, Mahan, Bond.

Attendance—400.

NOTES.

Theetge and Houston make a strong battery.

Johnnie Hogan caught a good game as usual.

McGinnis' umpiring was satisfactory to the crowd.

It was a cool afternoon and overcoats were numerous.

Home runs are becoming common occurrences with the Boones.

Dr. Sayre, of Hebron, was present with his kodac and took several snap shots at interesting points in the game.

Every time Hughes threw a ball his neck pained him, but he was too plucky to let that small matter lose him the game.

These reports are to the effect that the government is preparing to discharge the recruits summoned for three weeks drill and that—this report on the authority of the Dvenik—the Turkish and Bulgarian governments have reached an understanding on the question of demobilization whereby Bulgaria will release 20,000 men and Turkey 40,000. DELIVERY OF CONVICTS.

Well Organized and Partially Successful Attempt Made.

Salt Lake, Utah, Oct. 10.—As a result of a well organized and partly successful attempt at a wholesale delivery of prisoners at the Utah state penitentiary Friday night, one prisoner was killed, one guard was shot and wounded, and another man was beaten almost into insensibility, and three prisoners were wounded and two others under death sentences escaped.

A posse of prison guards with several bloodhounds was promptly started on the trail of the two escaped convicts, but owing to darkness and the wild nature of the country in the immediate vicinity of the prison no results are looked for Friday night.

The outbreak occurred as the prisoners were being placed in their cells for the night by Guards Wilkins and Jacobs. Two of the prisoners overpowered Wilkins and Jacobs, the former being shot and slightly wounded and the latter frightfully beaten.

The convicts took the prison keys from the guards and released five other prisoners who had already been locked up. The seven prisoners then compelled Guard Wilkins, notwithstanding his injuries, to march at their head, and, with the assistance of ladders found near the workshop they proceeded to scale the wall. Wilkins was made to ascend first. As the first convict reached the top Guard Naylor, who was on the south wall, opened fire. This was the signal for a general alarm, and several guards who were in the office quickly seized their guns and hastened to the scene.

Guard Driggs reached the wall just as Frank Dayton and Ed Mullan were descending on the outside. He ordered them to halt, but as they paid no attention to the command, he fired and killed Dayton. A second shot struck Mullan in the leg as he was coming down the ladder, and he dropped to the ground, his body falling over the corpse of Dayton. The other five convicts had succeeded in reaching the ground outside the wall when they were fired upon by other guards. Abe Majors was shot in the arm and fell to the ground, crying with pain. Nick Haworth was also shot and fell but quickly arose and continued his flight. Harry Waddell was shot in the leg. James Lynch escaped uninjured, it is believed. After running about 100 yards from the wall, Haworth dropped a rope made from blankets which was found stained with blood. At the foot of the wall were found several cartridges which the convicts dropped as they came over.

Two of the prisoners were armed with revolvers. Where they secured the weapons is not known.

BLUES AND BROWNS

Surrounding Hills Reverberated to the Pounding Cannon and the Clattering Roll of the Krags Rifles During Engagement

Camp Young, West Point, Ky., Oct. 9.—More spectacular and hotly contested, but lacking one or two of the finer points brought out in previous maneuvers, was the engagement participated in Thursday by practically the entire number of regular soldiers and national guardsmen in camp. When recall was sounded after two hours of hot fighting the result was practically a dog fall, the Blue army inflicting the heaviest loss as tallied by the umpires, but the Browns largely making up for this by a greater readiness to seize tactical advantage of position. The firing was the heaviest yet witnessed by the observers here. Car loads of blank cartridges were expended, by infantry, cavalry and artillery and from the time the opposing forces met until the game was over the hills reverberated to pounding cannon and the clattering roll of the Krags frequently rose to the crash of heavy volley firing.

The Blue division of the army, commanded by Col. Anderson, was composed of the first brigade (seven battalions representing the 1st, 3d and 20th United States infantry and the 1st, Wisconsin regiment); second brigade (1st, 2d and 3d Indiana infantry, the 7th cavalry, two squadrons, and the 14th battery, field artillery).

The Brown division, commanded by Brig. Gen. Bliss, U. S. A., was composed of the third brigade (1st, 2d and 3d Michigan); fourth brigade (2d and 3d Kentucky, 8th Ohio and Kentucky light artillery battalion used as infantry); seven troops of cavalry, the 21st battery, field artillery, 1st battery, Indiana field artillery.

The battle was precipitated at the entrance to a long and tortuous decline in the hills, two guns from the 21st battery and two troops of cavalry being sent on the run to take and hold it before the Blues came up. The Blues had, however, already gained a position from which they could turn the defile so the Brown force was compelled to retire. This move on the part of the Brown commander threw the original plans of the Blues into confusion and forced them to strike at the Brown left and left center. Accordingly the Indiana brigade delivered a hard blow for the Blues, the firing during their attack on the Brown left wing being the hottest of the day. The Indiana guardsmen who have already gained an enviable record enhanced it still further by capturing three companies of the 8th Ohio and inflicting losses on the 3d Kentucky and 8th Ohio, estimated by the umpires as 120 "killed."

Camp Young, West Point, Ky., Oct. 10.—Thousands of men in khaki and blue, with the October sun shining athwart company alignments, with arms at port, passed in front of Maj. Gen. Bates and his staff in the presence of a large crowd Friday. The twice deferred review of all the troops at Camp Young was a most brilliant event and practically brought to a close the combined maneuvers of the regulars and national guardsmen, which have been in progress for ten days.

All the national guards were paid off Friday. The average for each private without regard to states is about $7.50 for the ten days work.

Still Another Case.

Franksville, Wis., Oct. 12th.—Just another remarkable cures have been reported from all over the country, but there is one right here in Franksville which is certainly worth publishing, and which has not as yet been given to the public.

Mrs. Louie Markison of this place had been a sick woman for quite a long time and could not find anything to give her any help. She suffered all the painful symptoms of what is generally known as female weakness. Every woman who reads her story will understand these distressing conditions which combine to make the lives of many women one long burden of weakness and suffering.

Mrs. Markison chanced one day to hear of a new remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills, that was said to be a splendid medicine for women's weakness. She determined to try some and soon found herself getting better. She kept on with the pills and was cured. Speaking of her case Mrs. Markison says:

"I can and do praise Dodd's Kidney Pills as a remedy for female weakness. They are the best medicine I have ever known, and have done me a great deal of good."

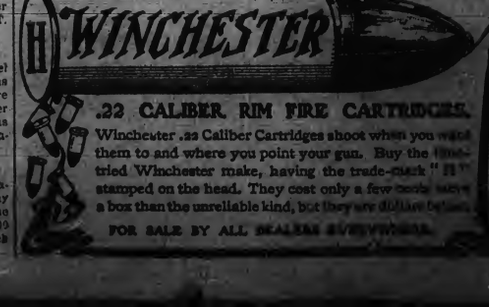
Miss Alice M. Smith, of Minneapolis, Minn., tells how woman's monthly suffering may be quickly and permanently relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have never before given my endorsement for any medicine, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has added so much to my life and happiness that I feel like making an exception in this case. For two years every month I would have two days of severe pain and could find no relief, but one day when visiting a friend I ran across Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,—she had used it with the best results and advised me to try it. I found that it worked wonders with me; I now experience no pain and only had to use a few bottles to bring about this wonderful change. I use it occasionally now when I am exceptionally tired or worn out."—MISS ALICE M. SMITH, 804 Third Ave., South Minneapolis, Minn., Chairman Executive Committee Minneapolis Study Club.

Beauty and strength in women vanish early in life because of monthly pain or some menstrual irregularity. Many suffer silently and see their best gifts fade away. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helps women preserve roundness of form and freshness of face because it makes their entire female organism healthy. It carries women safely through the various natural crises and is the safeguard of woman's health.

The truth about this great medicine is told in the letters from women published in this paper constantly.

Mrs. C. Kleinschrodt, Morrison, Ill., says:—



"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have suffered ever since I was thirteen years of age with my menses. They were irregular and very painful. I doctored a great deal but received no benefit.

"A friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and after taking a few bottles of it, I found great relief.

"Menstruation is now regular and without pain. I am enjoying better health than I have for sometime."

How is it possible for us to make it plainer that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will positively help all sick women? All women are constituted alike, rich and poor, high and low,—all suffer from the same organic troubles. Surely, no one can wish to remain weak and sickly, discouraged with life and without hope for the future, when proof is so unmistakable that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure monthly suffering—all womb and ovarian troubles, and all the ills peculiar to women.

THE NORTHEAST GALE.

The Virginia Coast For Miles Littered With Wreckage.

Station in Storm's Wake—One of the Most Heroic Acts in the History of the Surfmen on That Coast.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 12.—The northeast gale that has raged over this region since Thursday had Sunday night nearly spent its power, but for miles and miles along the Virginia coast the beach is littered with wreckage and throughout this entire section of the country devastation lies in the wake of the storm. Thousands of people crowded trains to the coast Sunday and saw the wrecks of the big barges Ocean Belle and Georgia near Virginia Beach. There is nothing left but an indiscriminate tangle of debris along the shore at Dam Neck to mark the end of the three-masted schooner Nellie W. Howlett. The body of Capt. George H. Adams, of the Georgia, washed ashore Saturday night, seven miles south of Sea Tack life saving station, and is now at that station. The body of George Peters, the colored seaman, of the same vessel, has not been recovered. The rescue of the remaining members of the crew by surfman Wam Capps, was one of the most heroic acts in the history of the surfmen of the Virginia coast.

Capps, while two miles from any other being and patrolling his stretch between the stations, saw one Negro over 100 yards off shore, in the roaring surf. Without a moment's consideration of the peril he was facing, he stripped and plunged into the sea that was already a seething mass of wreckage from the barges, and after a half hour battle, single handed and alone, brought the unconscious man ashore. He had not recovered his breath before he discerned through a rift in the pume another form, and once more he went into the surf. This time, by reason of his exhaustion, his struggle was a harder one, but he eventually succeeded in saving the Negro. Placing both men under the lea of a cliff, he started back to the station to give the alarm when he saw the third Negro in the waves and for a third time plunged in and brought an unconscious man ashore. Capps did not cease his work until all three men had been cared for at the station, and at midnight he resumed his regular trick at patrolling the storm swept coast.

While nothing new is reported in the way of wrecks on the coast there is absolutely no method of securing information from points more than six miles south of Virginia Beach. The entire coast telegraph system is prostrated and it will be some days before communication can be restored.

A DISASTROUS FLOOD.

Damage to Property in Paterson, N. J., Will Exceed $2,000,000.

A Large Part of the City in the Valley on Either Side of the Passaic River Is Still Inundated.

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 12.—With the waters of the Passaic river falling at the rate of an inch an hour above the falls, and at double that rate below them, the apprehension of further great disaster to the city from the flood has almost disappeared, the sole question being whether Spruce street hill, the narrow embankment which holds the water above the falls, can continue to withstand the strain until the river recedes to its normal proportions. At the height of the flood this hill, standing between the river basin above the falls and the lower valley, was rapidly caving away into the gorge below the falls.

Below the falls a large part of the city situated in the valley on either side of the river was still inundated Sunday night, but the waters were receding rapidly, having fallen 28 inches from flood height at 6 p. m., though still several inches above the maximum height of the flood of 1902.

It will be impossible to closely estimate the loss until the flood subsides but it will exceed $2,000,000. But three bridges and part of a fourth of the seven below the falls remain and the cost to the county to replace those destroyed will be at least $500,000. The three bridges standing are on substantial concrete. They are completely covered by water. Only three fatalities have been reported.

Five persons were rescued from a floating house in the Delsware river Sunday in sight of hundreds of onlookers.

Ocean City, Md., Oct. 12.—This city was practically desolated Sunday night. Owing to the hurricane and high tides the greater part of the city has been submerged since Thursday night and many of the residents have sought shelter on higher ground. In addition to the damage reported in Saturday night's dispatch another section of the front of Congress Hall, a leading hotel, about 100 feet in extent, was torn away Sunday. The entire ocean front of the Windsor hotel collapsed. A large number of cottages were also either washed from their foundations or destroyed.

Burlington, N. J., Oct. 12.—This town is suffering from the worst flood in its history, approximately fourfifths of the place being under water, caused by the tremendous flood in the Delaware river. The highest point of the town is only three feet above the flood in some of the streets and as the river is still rising it is feared that the situation will become more serious. The southern section of the town is flooded to a depth of from two to six feet and much of the surrounding country is also under water. In East Burlington it is estimated that 90 per cent. of the houses are inundated.

Passaic, N. J., Oct. 12.—Twenty mills in this city alone are under water and 3,000 workers are out of employment. Ten thousand persons have left their homes. Eight hundred houses are flooded to the eaves, and in all 1,000 acres are covered with water from a depth of a few inches to 20 feet. Several million feet of lumber and 23 frame houses have gone floating down the Passaic river. As far as can be estimated the loss of the city property, real estate and buildings, is $2,000,000.

TORRENTIAL RAINS.

An Unprecedented Precipitation in New York and Vicinity.

New York, Oct. 10.—Torrential rain, commencing early Thursday morning and continuing with scarcely any intermission until late Friday afternoon, during which time the unprecedented precipitation of 10.04 inches was recorded at the local weather bureau, laid New York city and all the surrounding country under a flood Friday, causing damage that will amount to many hundred thousands of dollars. Friday night the rain had ceased, but a coast storm was reported to be approaching and a threatened hurricane renders it unsafe for vessels of any class to leave port.

Along all the river front and in many sections of Brooklyn cellars were flooded and an enormous amount of damage done. A great portion of the subway was badly flooded.

Suburban steam and trolley lines, with hardly an exception, were crippled by floods and washouts and in the early morning rush hours thousands of suburban residents were unable to reach their offices in this city. Those who were fortunate enough to cross the ferries found further progress blocked by the submerged condition of the water front streets, across which they were ferried in trucks and wagons.

Reports of extensive floods and serious damage to property and interruptions of traffic came from almost all sections of New Jersey and Long Island, in Newark, Passaic and other large manufacturing centers, many factories were closed down owing to the flooding of engine rooms. In many places electric lights and power plants were shut down for the same reason. A dam on the Ramapo river and Pompton broke, flooding the valley for ten miles, but causing no loss of life.

Paterson was one of the worst sufferers and for a time Friday afternoon there was grave danger of a repetition of the terrible disaster of last February. Friday night the flood was subsiding and all danger was believed to be over.

A great part of the city was laid under water and scores of great plants, including those of the Rogers locomotive works and the Passaic Steel Co., were flooded and shut down, involving a loss estimated at fully $1,000,000.

Only one life was reported lost, that of a girl drowned by the carrying away of a bridge. Thousands of New Jersey commuters slept in New York Friday night, being unable to return to their homes.

STATE NEWS PICK-UPS

GAME IN BRACKEN COUNTY.

There Is More Than the Usual Amount This Season.

Brooksville, Ky., Oct. 12. — Our "sports" are now beginning to cast an anxious eye at the friendly quail and fat bunny as they venture out on the pikes and byways. Much interest is now manifested in the stacks of shells displayed in our merchants' windows, and the great amount of interest is only a forerunner of the winter's sport. That there is more than the usual amount of game in the country hills is an undisputed fact, as only a casual skirmish in the woods will prove beyond any doubt. The spring months were dry and healthy, suitable for a successful raising of all the young. These suitable conditions for a large supply of the young birds and rabbits have caused a general belief that more than the usual amount of sport awaits our "sharpshooters." Squirrels are not very abundant, but some of our "best sports" carry a few tails to tell of their superior marksmanship. One wolf is known to habit a heavy woods two miles north of Brooksville, and no little hope is entertained that the winter snows will aid in tracking him.

A Negro in Cold Blood Killed a White Boy.

Paducah, Ky., Oct. 12.—The shooting of a white boy by a Negro at Keville, a station on the Paducah-Cairo branch of the I. C., Sunday night, may precipitate a race war. Crockett Childress, an 18-year-old white boy, stepped on the platform with another young man when a crowd of about 25 Negro railroad hands ran them away. The Negroes had alresdy driven a number of white people, including women, off the platform. The boys again went on the platform, when a Negro pulled a pistol and fired six shots at them. One ball took effect, passing under the heart. The other boy was not hurt. The Negroes disappeared. At last reports an attempt was being made to organize a white mob to run down the blacks and kill them. Childress is fatally injured.

KENTUCKY FUTURITY.

Sadie Mac, Smathers' Racing Purchase, Won the $14,000 Event.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 9.—Sadie Mac, E. E. Smathers' recent purchase, won the historic Kentucky Futurity for 3-year-olds, purse $14,000, with ease and without apparent effort in three straight heats, going the last mile in 2:12¾, which is two seconds short of the record made by Fresno Belle years ago, and going the first heat of the first mile in 2:08. She won by several lengths in each heat and only at one time was her contention for the crown in danger and that was in the first seven-eighths of the first mile, when Ethel's Pride kept nose to nose with her. Ethel's Pride, however, broke and finished last in all three heats. The two mares made the first quarter in 32 seconds.

Among the 5,000 people who saw Sadie Mac take the first money was Mr. Johnson, of Calais, Me., who sold her as a yearling for $4,000. Her driver, A. McDonald, sold her to Mr. Smathers Tuesday for $20,000.

THE CALEB POWERS CASE.

His Attorneys Filed Their Bill of Exceptions.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 9.—The attorneys in the case of Caleb Powers after several hours work in the special term of court convened by Special Judge Robbins for the purpose, filed Thursday afternoon their bill of exceptions in order to get the case before the Kentucky court of appeals. The 60 day limit gives the defense attorneys until December 8, and as the court of appeals adjourns December 18 for the holidays, the Powers case will probably not be up for decision before the term in January, 1904.

MURDER OR SUICIDE.

An Aged Farmer Found Hanging in His Barn.

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 10.—E. F. Thompson, a farmer, aged 52 years, was found hanging in his barn Friday. When found life had been extinct for several hours. The dead man's hands were tied behind him. This was the only evidence of foul play. The coroner's jury returned a non-committal verdict, and an investigation will be made. Belief in the neighborhood is that it is a case of suicide, as Thompson was in bad health.

Made An Appropriation of $200.

Richmond, Ky., Oct. 10.—The Madison county fiscal court made an appropriation of $200 to supplement the private subscriptions from this county to the fund being raised by the Kentucky Exhibit association for the state's representation at the World's fair in St. Louis next year.

Fine Farm For Sale.

I withdraw from sale my farm of 255 acres at Hebron at the price named in a recent notice. The farm is for sale at a bargain if sold soon, but not at that price. The conditions and circumstances and opportunities existing when that offer was made, do not exist now—hence the withdrawal. This is a magnificent farm, finely located and elegantly improved. The land and improvements are all in splendid condition. This plantation and its improvements were planned, constructed, developed and finished for a superb country home, for a country gentleman, and only a man of that character can appreciate it. The whole farm is as beautiful as a city park. It is for sale at a bargain if sold soon. If not sold soon it will be for rent to good and careful men.

The record-breaking crop of wheat is promised for this year. A new record was made last year in winter wheat, the aggregate reaching 411,000,000 bushels. But the present prospect is wholly unprecedented. There are two million more acres in wheat this year than there was last and the condition of the crop is remarkably high. On the first of April that condition 97.3, as against 78.7 a year ago, when a great crop was produced. The average condition of the wheat crop on the first of April for the last ten years has been 2.1. On the present acreage and condition, a crop of 590,000,000 bushels is confidently counted on. With a winter wheat crop amounting to 590,000,000 bushels, an average yield of spring wheat will carry a grand total of wheat production of 709,000,000 bushels or more. The best crop ever grown was that of 1901, when the aggregate reached 748,629,573 bushels. The average of the last ten years has barely exceeded 500,000,000 bushels. We should last year no less than 155,000,000 bushels of wheat receiving for it about $13,000,000. It is practically certain that we have quite as much wheat to spare.

Confession of a Priest,

Rev. S. Cox, of Wake, Ark. writes: "For 2 years I suffered from Dyspepsia, I consulted a number of doctors and tried all sorts of medicine, got no relief. Then I used Electric Bitters and was entirely cured of a disease that had a grasp for 12 years." Unequaled medicine for Liver, Kidneys, Blood, stomach disorders, Debility, get Electric Bitters. Prof. and Mrs. Hughes had Columbus Day exercises at their school last Monday afternoon. The school rooms were decorated with flags for the occasion, and the exercises consisted of patriotic speeches and songs. It was a new departure, and very much enjoyed by the pupils. Some of the patrons were present to witness the exercises.

Mrs. Cyrus Kelly, who died at Bellevue last Sunday, was Miss Mary Griffith, of Ghent, Carroll county. She was born in 1851 and was married to Cyrus Kelly in 1873. To them were born four children, two sons and two daughters, both of the latter being dead, one of them dying when young, and the other when about grown. The two sons are grown. Mrs. Kelly had been in poor health for a long time—in fact she had never recovered from the shock caused by the death of her older daughter. The remains were interred yesterday in the Kelly cemetery in Waterloo neighborhood.

Some Fine Cattle.

F. A. Utz and J. M. Conner bought of J. C. Hughes, of Richwood, last week, 21 fancy, heavy cattle for Eastern slaughters, to be weighed at Central Covington Stock Yards, at $4 85 per 100 pounds. This lot of cattle is said to be far the best in this county. The price paid is a consumptive one, as no speculator could afford to take such a chance owing to lower prices existing in all markets, home and abroad. This drove of cattle is a great credit to Mr. Hughes as a feeder. One year ago last August their average weight was 1,000 pounds. Last May they averaged 1,405 pounds. It is believed that they will now weigh over 1,600. While they are well finished Mr. Hughes says that he can see that they continue to improve, and that they are the best drove of cattle he has handled in many years, and he has been one of the largest handlers in the county.

When the American farmer rises early in the morning it is to look over broad and fertile acres that are his own. When he goes forth it is to fields that no human being can lawfully step upon without his consent. When he gathers and garners the harvest he stores up what, in a vast majority of cases, no greedy and rapacious landlord can take from him. It is all his. The proceeds of it are to clothe and feed him and his family and educate his children; to be support of his old age and the heritage of his prosperity. Looked at from every point of view, it is doubtful if there is another human being under the heavens who has more cause for carrying a light heart and a contented mind, for regarding the past with satisfaction and the future with hope than the American farmer.

I have had occasion to use your Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine and am pleased to say that I never used anything for stock that gave half as good satisfaction. I heartily recommend it to all owners of stock.

J. B. BELSHER, St. Louis, Mo.

Sick stock or poultry should not eat cheap stock food any more than sick persons should expect to be cured by food. When your stock and poultry are sick give them medicine. Don't stuff them with worthless stock foods. Unload the bowels and stir up the torpid liver and the animal will be cured, if it be possible to cure it. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine unloads the bowels and stirs up the torpid liver. It cures every malady of stock if taken in time. Secure a 25-cent can of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine and it will pay for itself ten times over. Horses work better. Cows give more milk. Hogs gain flesh. And hens lay more eggs. It solves the problem of making as much blood, flesh and energy as possible out of the smallest amount of food consumed. Buy a can from your dealer.

God may create kings to order, but it takes the chumps of voters with a little boodle thrown in to make a president, congressman, state or county officer. Of course candidates don't partake, except for their stomach's oft infirmities.

Supt. Snyder visited Miss Mary Gaines' school, at the Cason school house, last Saturday, and was well pleased with the manner in which the school is conducted and the progress the pupils are making. The trustees were present and the Superintendent delivered a nice address.

Rabbit Hash, as we are specially called on to solve your problem of last week, we desire you to state to what part of the barn the horse is tied and to which end of the horse the rope is tied, and how much of the rope is taken up in making the ties. This statement is necessary to a correct solution of your problem.

There was to have been a play party, or "gumsuck," at James Nettles', last Saturday night, but it failed because there was not a sufficient number of ladies present to make it interesting, but those present were entertained with excellent music, and a pleasant and profitable time was had by all.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that, "Good deeds are better than real estate deeds—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say: "My good friend, cheer up." A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold, and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by All Druggists. Trial bottles free.

BELLEVIEW.

One more frost and rabbits will be ripe.

Fannie Clore visited Mrs. Lou Ryle Thursday.

A JOINT BANQUET.

Armies of the Tennessee, Cumberland, Ohio and Potomac Meet.

Washington, Oct. 17.—With a joint banquet of the societies of the armies of the Tennessee, the Cumberland, the Ohio and the Potomac the social functions incident to the unveiling of the Sherman statue were brought to a close Friday night. Plates were laid for 500 in the Arlington hotel banquet room which was elaborately decorated with flags and flowers.

The only invited guests were the president, the admiral of the navy, Lieut. Gen. Young, chief of the general staff of the army; Gen. Miles and the members of the cabinet. Of this number Gen. Young was the only one present. Five addresses were made, the speakers being Mrs. John A. Logan and one representative from each of the four societies. The invocation was delivered by Archbishop Ireland.

Maj. Gen. John E. Brooke, who represented the society of the army of the Potomac, gave an account of the part played by that army in the civil war.

Capt. John J. McCook, on behalf of the army of the Cumberland, paid an eloquent tribute to Gen. Sherman and to the record of the army of the Cumberland. Capt. McCook is, with one exception, the youngest member of the society of that army.

John McElroy recounted the deeds of the army of the Ohio. He declared that in the 1,045 days of its existence more combatants fell before its rifles than were slain in any previous war, and its losses were greater than those of all the armies of the United States in the revolution or the Mexican wars.

Prolonged applause greeted Rev. Thomas Sherman, a son of Gen. Sherman, as he arose to speak on behalf of the army of the Tennessee. Rev. Sherman's address was a splendid tribute to the record of that army and the memory of the men who made its name famous.

Reference to the quarrel between Gen. John A. Logan and Gen. Sherman was the feature of the speech of Mrs. John A. Logan, the subject of whose address was "Sherman." Of this incident Mrs. Logan said:

"It may not be inappropriate for me on this occasion to say that whatever of misunderstanding and estrangement may have existed between the two great commanders of the army of the Tennessee at one time was wholly obliterated by Gen. Logan's tribute to Gen. Sherman at a notable banquet given by Col. Corkhill to Gen. Sherman on his retirement as general of the army. When Gen. Logan finished Gen. Sherman arose, went around to Gen. Logan, put his arm about his neck and shook hands cordially while the tears ran down his cheeks. His emotions were too great for words."

Unveiled in Presence of Distinguished Gathering.

The President the Principal Speaker—Drapery Drawn Aside by William Tecumseh Sherman Thorndyke, Grandson of the General.

Washington, Oct. 16.—With impressive ceremonies, an equestrian statue of William Tecumseh Sherman was unveiled here Thursday afternoon in the presence of official Washington, the president at its head, and thousands of veterans, members of societies of the armies of the Tennessee, the Cumberland, the Ohio and the Potomac. As the two large flags enveloping the statue were drawn aside by William Tecumseh Sherman Thorndyke, the 9-year-old grandson of the dead chieftain, the cannon of the Fourth artillery boomed a salute and the Marine band struck up the "Star Spangled Banner."

Before the unveiling of the statue the president and Lieut. Gen. Young, chief of the general staff of the army, received the troops participating in the dedication parade from the stand opposite the statue. The president delivered the address of the day. A representative from each of the societies of the four armies followed in eulogies of Gen. Sherman.

Promptly at 2:30 o'clock the president, under the escort of a detachment of minute men, walked from the white house to the statue, which faces the south front of the treasury. The president walked alone, preceded by Capt. W. S. Cowles and Col. T. W. Symons, his naval military aides. Following the president were Secretary Hay, Postmaster General Payne, Secretary Cortelyou, Acting Secretary of War Oliver and Secretary Loeb. The president was received at the reviewing stand by the members of the Sherman statue commission.

With the arrival of the president began the review of the troops. Lieut. Gen. Young was chief marshal and with his staff headed the procession. Following came the Second cavalry, the engineer battalion from Washington barracks, headed by the engineer band, two battalions of coast artillery from Forts Washington, Hunt and Monroe, the Fourth field battery of artillery from Fort Myer, a company of the hospital corps, a detachment of marines and two battalions of seamen.

The second division of the parade consisted of the various organizations of the District national guard under command of Brig. Gen. Geo. H. Harris.

Balking of a horse hitched to a gun of one of the artillery companies of the national guard caused an embarrassing halt in the parade. The president was greatly amused at the antics of the animal and applauded the men who came to the rescue by practically carrying the gun past the reviewing stand, horse and all.

The unveiling ceremonies began with music by the Marine band. The invocation was offered by Rev. Dr. D. J. Stafford. Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, president of the statue commission, gave a brief description of the statue and then introduced William Tecumseh Sherman Thorndyke, who, from the base of the pedestal pulled a cord, and two immense national flags slowly parted, unveiling the statue of his grandfather. Attached to the cord was a bunch of flowers which the little fellow carried to the stand and presented to the president, who congratulated him warmly.

The president was introduced by Gen. Dodge. As he arose the veterans gave him round after round of cheers.

THE SHERMAN STATUE AT WASHINGTON.

It is a magnificent work of art which has been in course of construction for several years. The design was by Carl Rohl-Smith, but he died before the statue was completed, and it was finished under the direction of his wife. The statue stands just south of the treasury building, and is visible the whole length of Pennsylvania avenue, the most conspicuous site in Washington.

TILLMAN NOT GUILTY.

Such the Verdict of Jury After Deliberating 20 Hours.

Lexington, S. C., Oct. 16.—The jury in the case of J. H. Tillman Thursday found him not guilty of the murder of Editor Gonzales. The jury announced at 10:45 that a verdict had been agreed upon. The defendant and attorneys were sent for and the jury then filed into the court room and the verdict was read. A demonstration followed the announcement, friends of the defendant giving vent to their feelings in a shout. The court, previous to the reading of the verdict, had admonished the spectators to refrain from any demonstration. Counsel for defense moved the defendant's discharge from the sheriff's custody. No objections being made by the state, the court made the order. The jury was out about 20 hours before returning a verdict. The defendant shook hands with the judge and members of the jury and left the court room, accompanied by his friends and counsel. There was great uncertainty when court convened, as to whether a verdict should be reached.

It is understood one or two jurors favored a verdict for manslaughter and held out till Thursday for a short term of imprisonment, but came over to the majority on the last ballot rather than fail to make a verdict.

The charge on which Ex-Lieut. Gov. James H. Tillman was tried was for the alleged murder of Editor Gonzales. Tillman, while not as prominent in politics as his uncle, Senator Tillman, was quite active, and his course was a subject of comment in the State, the paper edited by Gonzales. Tillman claimed he was unjustly assailed, and had blood was known to exist between the two men. On January 15 last the men met on the street, and Tillman shot down Gonzales, he dying soon after. Tillman, on his trial, claimed self-defense. He said he noticed the editor eyeing him intently, that he had his hands in his overcoat pockets, and he believed he was waiting for an opportunity to draw a revolver. Tillman also said that a message was brought to him that Gonzales had said that he had made him (Tillman) show the white feather twice, and would do so again. The prosecution, on its side, asserted that the killing was premeditated and without adequate excuse.

DAN PATCH'S MILE.

He Broke World's Pacing Record to a Wagon.

No Wind Shields or Any Other Speed Accelerators Were Used—The Time By Quarters Was :30 1-4; :59 1-2; 1:29; 1:59 1-4.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 17.—Dan Patch, 1:59, Friday broke the world's pacing record to a wagon and came within a quarter of a second of equaling his own sulky record. The previous pacing record to a wagon was 2:01½, made by Little Boy on the Memphis track. Dan Patch clipped two and one-quarter seconds off this record Friday and went the mile in 1:59¼. The champion stallion was accompanied by two runners driven by Hudson and McGuire, but no wind shields or any other speed accelerators were used. His time by quarters was :30½; :59½; 1:29; 1:59¼. His third quarter was made in 29½ seconds.

Dan Patch had been advertised to go against the world's wagon record or his own sulky record for several days, but owing to the weather conditions the exhibition was postponed. The track has been in lightning fast condition all week and the weather conditions Friday were perfect. Four thousand people saw the record broken and cheered Driver McHenry lustily as he went under the wire. Dan Patch is owned by M. W. Savage, of Minneapolis. The world's trotting record to a wagon was broken and twice established last Saturday, Major Delmar reducing it from 2:04½ to 2:03¾.

Five minutes later Lou Dillon again held the world's record at 2:01¾.

The 31st annual meeting of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' association came to a close Friday. The Kentucky stake of $2,000 for 3-year-old trotters was won by Sadie Mac in two straight heats. The second heat was made in 2:11½ and equaled the fastest record of the year for 3-year-old trotters, which was held by Sadie Mac herself.

GIRLS IN A RIOT.

Several of Them Were Stabbed, One Seriously, But May Recover.

New York, Oct. 17.—In a riot Friday night the result of a strike at a rag factory in First street several girls were stabbed, one of them so seriously that she had to be taken to a hospital.

The employes, about 50 in number, recently organized under the name of Clip Sorters' union.

Demands were made upon the firm, which were refused, and a strike was declared. To carry on their business the firm engaged a number of Italians. Then the new union proceeded to station pickets near the factory. Friday night when the Italians came out of the factory a free fight occurred and the Italians, it is said, used knives to defend themselves. In the affray Lena Schwartz was stabbed in the neck. At the hospital it was said she would probably recover.

Three other girls were slightly hurt and they were taken to their homes. Two Italians were arrested and held on charges of felonious assault.

THE CIVIC FEDERATION.

Questions of Disputes of Employers and Employes Discussed.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—Although questions of dispute and of great interest to the wage earner and the employer, such as the "open" shop, methods of paying wages, piece work and bonus, came up before the conference of the National Civic Federation Friday, no action has yet been decided upon that will improve the relations of the principals in the controversy. However, it is not considered improbable that before the session is brought to a close some action that will aid in bringing labor and capital closer together may be taken.

Hard To Bear.

J. W. Walls, Superintendent of Streets of Lebanon, Kentucky, living on East Main Street in that city, says:

"With my nightly rest broken, owing to irregularities of the kidneys, suffering intensely from severe pains in the small of my back and through the kidneys, and annoyed by painful passages of abnormal secretions, life was anything but pleasant for me. No amount of doctoring relieved this condition, and for the reason that nothing seemed to give me even temporary relief, I became about discouraged. One day I noticed in the newspapers the case of a man who was afflicted as I was and was cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. His words of praise for this remedy were so sincere that on the strength of his statement I went to the Hugh Murrey Drug Co.'s store and got a box. I found that the medicine was exactly as powerful a kidney remedy as represented. I experienced quick and lasting relief. Doan's Kidney pills will prove a blessing to all sufferers from kidney disorders who will give them a fair trial."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Walls will be mailed to any part of the United States on application. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price 50 cents per box.

CRUISE IN CLOUDLAND.

An Airship Sailed Over San Francisco For Two Hours.

The Balloon is Cigar-Shaped With a Capacity of, 80,000 Feet of Gas, With a Lifting Capacity of 1,800 to 2,000 Pounds.

San Francisco, Oct. 19.—Dr. August Greth, who for a year past has been unostentatiously working on an airship, Sunday surprised the residents of San Francisco by sailing over their heads for two hours, directing his machine almost at will and demonstrating that in many essentials he has solved the problem of aerial navigation. Dr. Greth had previously tested his airship by making ascensions with the balloon held captive by a long rope, but Sunday was the first time that he had gone skyward free. The ascension was made from a lot almost in the heart of the city, and Dr. Greth attempted to encircle a towering newspaper building about a mile eastward, but found the high currents too strong for his power and then turned in an opposite direction. The winds carried him seaward and for a time he hovered over the vicinity of the Golden Gate, making various successful trials of his steering gear.

The currents threatened to take him out over the Pacific, and he decided to make a landing on the parade grounds of the Presidio military reservation, but made the mistake of letting out too much gas and he landed in the bay about 200 feet from shore. The crew of the life saving station rescued the aeronaut and his flying machine, which was little damaged by the unfortunate termination of the voyage. The balloon of Greth is cigar-shaped and has a capacity of 50,000 feet of gas with a lifting capacity of 1,800 to 2,000 pounds. The car is similar in construction to that used by Santos Dumont, and weighs about 800 pounds.

The engine is a 12-horse power gasoline motor and the total weight carried skyward, including that of the inventor and 260 pounds of ballast, was about 1,400 pounds. For some inexplicable reason the motor would not develop more than six horse and Dr. Greth found considerable difficulty in making head way against the current.

He expects to make another ascension in a few days when he will have repaired the minor damage caused by the salt water bath and remedied the minor defects brought out by his two hours cruise in cloudland.

THROUGH A DRAW.

A Railway Accident on the Long Bridge Near Washington.

Washington, Oct. 19.—The Chesapeake & Ohio passenger train which left here at 11:22 o'clock Sunday night for Cincinnati, met with a serious accident on the long bridge which spans the Potomac river and connects Washington with the Virginia shore. About one-third of a mile from the Washington end of the bridge is a draw 150 feet in length. Sunday night as the train was passing over this draw the northern half of it gave way and precipitated the tender and a dead baggage car immediately following it into the water. A huge girder which formed part of the draw fortunately jammed up against the mail car following the dead baggage car and helped to keep it and the remaining cars of the train from going into the river. No one was killed, but Fireman John Woods, of Charlotte, N. C., received a severe gash in the face. Nearly all the cars on the train had come through from New York, including the combination car, the day coach and two sleepers. The accident delayed travel for some time.

JURY FAILED TO AGREE.

No Verdict in the Miller-Johne Conspiracy Case.

Cincinnati, Oct. 19.—At 11:45 Saturday night the jury in the Miller-Johns alleged bribery trial reported that no agreement could be reached and was discharged by Judge Thompson. The case went to the jury shortly after 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The long wait for the verdict was declared by the accused men and their friends to be the most trying part of the ordeal to them.

The report was that the jury stood seven to five for conviction. One point on which they disagreed was as to whether there had been proof enough to show that Miller was in the conspiracy by sharing in the money that was derived from the transaction with Ryan.

The government officers were considerably disappointed at the result.

THE ALASKA BOUNDARY.

The American Contentions Are Sustained By the Commission.

London, Oct. 19.—The Alaskan boundary commission reached an agreement whereby all the American contentions are sustained, with the exception of those in relation to the Portland canal, which Canada wins.

Few of the morning newspapers publish editorial articles on the decision of the Alaskan boundary tribunal. The Daily Telegraph expresses extreme satisfaction that an agreement has been reached because of the failure would have dealt a blow to the policy, still in its frail and tender infancy, of referring differences of this character to arbitration. The paper hopes that no attempt will be made on either side to reckon up scores or claim a victory, but that the decision will be accepted in good faith. It adds that the Canadians must abide by the decision.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 19.—Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, who was the chairman of the American contingent of the British and United States joint high commission that met in 1898 in Quebec to take up the Alaskan boundary question, is well pleased with the decision reported in the dispatches from London.

In commenting on the decision Senator Fairbanks said:

"The decision of the Alaskan boundary commission is eminently satisfactory. It sustains substantially the entire American claim and is essentially a complete justification of the position taken by the American members of the United State and British joint high commission, which met in Quebec in 1898. The United States will now be permitted to hold all the territory in Alaska purchased of Russia in 1867 without further dispute. Our title, which was never disputed until within the last few years, since the gold discoveries, is now quieted.

"The press report sent from London indicates that the two small islands at the mouth of the Portland canal are conceded to Great Britain; and that the boundary line will run along the northwest side of the islands and not along the canal at the southeast side. This is a matter about which there was some reasonbale ground of dispute. The islands are small and are known as Wales and Pearse islands. They are of no great commercial importance. They were originally claimed by the United States, but if by conceding them the more important contentions of the American commissioners are granted I feel that the United States has every cause for satisfaction over the terms of the settlement."

"ELIJAH THE RESTORER."

John Alexander Dowie Faces His First New York Audience.

New York, Oct. 19.—John Alexander Dowie, who calls himself "Elijah the Restorer," faced his first New York audiences Sunday, and, although Madison Square garden was thronged at the afternoon and evening meetings and thousands were turned away from the doors, he found himself confronted with what he called a new experience when thousands, having evidently satisfied their curiosity, threw the meetings into confusion by their sudden exodus before the ceremonies had more than fairly begun.

Commands to close the doors and prevent exodus were unavailing and the prophet gave vent to displays of considerable petulance on finding that it was one thing to gather a great New York crowd, but quite another affair to command its interest after the first demands of curiosity had been satisfied. The house to house visitations by the hosts of Zion and the regular series of crusade meetings will be inaugurated Monday.

EASTERN QUESTION.

British Minister Mediating Between Russia and Japan.

Russia to Withdrew All Her Troops From Manchuria With the Exception of the Guards For the Railway.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 19.—A newspaper published at Port Dalny is authority for the report that the British minister to Japan, Sir Claude MacDonald, has undertaken to mediate between Russia and Japan, and, having secured Japan's consent to certain proposals, is now negotiating with Russia. These proposals are that Russia shall restore Manchuria to China, and that the principal Manchurian towns be opened to foreign trade; that Russia withdraw all her troops from Manchuria with the exception of the railway guards; that she renounce her forestry concessions on both sides of the Yatsu river, as well as the Yonganipho concession and that the whole country south of the Yatu river be admitted as belonging to Japan.

A special commission, under the presidency of the czar, has been formed to consider affairs in the far east. It includes the ministers of the interior, finance, foreign affairs, war and of the navy, and Viceroy Alexieff; other members will be nominated by the czar. The commission will consider budget proposals, measures to develeop trade and industry and proposed alterations in the laws.

Paris, Oct. 19.—Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador to the United States, has been interviewed on the far eastern question. The ambassador said that the danger of a conflict, which was real a few days back, seemed to have been averted, and that if ever a conflict came it would not be provoked by Russia. Continuing, Count Cassini said:

"Our rights in Manchuria are undeniable. We made the country, which until quite recently was a mere haunt for baudits. We now have a vigilant police there, and, moreover, we have built the railroad. This does not mean that we intend to annex Manchuria, but having incurred enormous expenditures and possessing immense interests there, we insist that these be safeguarded, and we expect to reap our legitimate benefits. The powers understand this so well that none except possibly Japan seriously contemplated insisting that the evacuation be effected October 8. Russia can not evacuate Manchuria before obtaining the guarantee to which she has a right from China and all Europe, including even Great Britain, recognizing that their interests are united with those of Russia."

RUSSIAN FOREIGN MINISTER.

He Is in Favor of An Amicable Settlement With Japan.

London, Oct. 19.—In a dispatch from St. Petersburg the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph asserts that Count Lamsdorff, the Russian foreign minister, is strongly in favor of an amicable settlement with Japan. The correspondent says also that Count Lamsdorff emphasizes the danger of external complications and the eagerness of the United States to profit by a favorable opportunity to insist upon the fulfillment of Russia's pledges respecting Manchuria.

A CONFLAGRATION.

Ten Business Blocks Burned and Four Lives Lost at Aberdeen, Wash.

Aberdeen, Wash., Oct. 17.—Fire that burned from 9 Friday morning until 2 o'clock Friday afternoon caused four deaths and destroyed property valued at approximately one million dollars. It practically wiped out the main business street of this town. Forty business houses, including both of the bank buildings, the Pacific hotel and the Crescent hotel, two Grays Harbor hospitals and many residences were destroyed.

The fire started in the rear of the Mack building, occupied as a lodging house, though its cause is not known. The wind carried it across the larger part of the business section and among the residences. The town is composed almost entirely of wooden structures and nothing impeded the passage of the flames.

The loss is probably one million dollars. No more than one-half of the loss is covered by insurance, for the reason that the insurance companies have refused to carry any greater risk on account of the inflammable material of which practically all the buildings in Aberdeen are constructed. Every business man in the city is a loser either by fire, water, breakage, removal or loss by theft.

In order to stop the further progress of the flames dynamite was used on several of the buildings which the flames were advancing. Telephone messages brought the fire department of Hoquiam and Montesano to the scene and they did effective work.

When the fire had reached the Pullman saloon several men were hurt by a wall giving way. Among the injured was Fire Chief Koehler, who was rendered unconscious, but later returned to his duties. Colis McKenzie was caught under the falling walls of the Eagle dance hall. His back was broken and he died in a short time.

The other fatalities were at the McKenzie building where Charles Rolfs, a one legged man, was cremated. When the flames had completely enveloped the building the spectators were horrified by seeing Daniel Webster, a well-known character, appear at one of the windows. Before a ladder could be raised to him he jumped. Almost every bone in his body was broken and he died after being taken to the hospital. An unknown man was killed by a falling wall.

CENTRAL ALASKA.

It Will Soon Be Open to Daily Communication Throughout the Year.

Washington, Oct. 17.—John E. Balaine, chairman of the finance committee of the Alaskan Central railway, who has been before the departments the last week on work connected with the construction of the road, has been successful in his efforts. The projected railroad will extend from Seward, on the southern coast of Alaska, north to the Tanana river, 420 miles, and will open, when completed, all of Central Alaska to daily communication throughout the year. It is being built at the rate of 125 miles a year. The post office department established a post office at Seward, the ocean terminus, the treasury department ordered immediate action taken looking to the designating of Seward as a subport of entry and the war department promised to include in its estimae for the extension of the government cable along the southern coast of Alaska an appropriation sufficient to make Seward one of the cable's objective points.

BOONE CO. RECORDER

Wednesday, - - Oct. 21, 1903.

W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

THE election is two weeks from yesterday.

IN another column will be found the Democratic ticket to be voted for at the election next month.

THE Indianapolis people elected a mixed ticket for city officials last week. The Mayor-elect is a Democrat.

THE Rising Sun Local of September 16th arrived at this office last Thursday, having made the trip in the remarkable time of one month.

BOOKER WASHINGTON says the condition of the negroes in this country is much better than that of the poorer classes in Europe, of which he has recently made a tour.

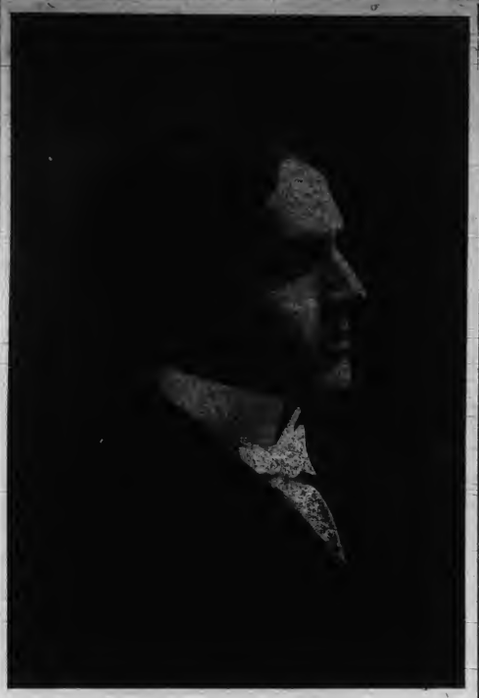
THE big registration of votes in several of the cities in this State is a puzzle to the politicians. The face of the registration indicates an old time majority for the Democrats in November.

IF reports be true, Senator Tom Platt, of New York, had been flirting with several of the girls recently, and the old man may have some trouble trying to reconcile them to his marriage with Mrs. Janeway.

IT seems that Hon. A. E. Wilson, of Louisville, had forgotten the name of the Republican candidate for Governor of Kentucky, when he made his first speech in the campaign. If he had not, he, in cold blood, refused to mention his name.

THERE are several Democrats in the counties of Boone, Grant, Gallatin, Carroll and Trimble who have congressional aspirations, and three or four of them may be in the next contest for the nomination, which will put the whole push out of the question.

GOV. TAFT has gotten into trouble with the officeseekers over in the Philippines. He has not enough offices to meet the demand and his occasional appointment to office of a qualified Filipino, has caused the American Board of trade to take a hand in the trouble and denounce the Governor.



"How old is Ann?" is a question that is annoying the whole United States, and Congress will not be allowed to convene again until Ann's age is known. Here is data for making the calculation: "Mary is 24 years old. Mary is twice as old as Ann was when Mary was as old as Ann is now. How old is Ann?"

J. E. Cahill, of Mason county, who raised an acre of tobacco under canvas, also concluded to experiment with growing tomatoes under canvas, and found it a success far beyond all anticipations. Those raised under canvas matured much earlier and were at least twice as large as those on the outside, and superior in every respect.

THE women who led the movement which drove Representative Roberts out of the house at Washington are entering upon the campaign to drive the Hon. Reed Smoot out of the United States Senate. Their corporate name, somewhat formidable, is the interdenominational council of women for Christian and patriotic service.

THE convention held at Walton, last week, will put a crimp in the congressional aspirants of some of the rural politicians in this district. When they go to Gallatin county with the old song, the country should stand together, she will say, "I asked for bread and ye gave me a stone," referring to the race for Commonwealth's Attorney decided last week.

BECAUSE of their pride of race, the Chickahominy Indians, of King William county, Virginia, have disfranchised themselves, and not one of them can vote under the new constitution of Virginia. The new organic law provides for only two classes, and as the Indians could not be registered under the class for whites, they refused to be classed with the negroes, and as a consequence refused to be registered at all. Their pride of birth will cost them their votes, and they have no redress, as the number of Indians in the state is so small that it was not thought necessary to provide a special class for them under the franchise clause of the new constitution.

HON. FRANK C. GREENE.
(Democratic Nominee for Commonwealth's Attorney.)

MR. MCINERNY had to go a long way around to get before the public a denial of his alleged statement that he would vote the Republican ticket this fall. Possibly there are some who will be glad to learn that he intends to return to the Democratic fold in November, and possible there are others who do not care how he votes, as his acts are the most hurtful.

IT comes from Prof. James W. Bradshaw, of Iowa City, Iowa, who claims to be a close friend of Hon. W. J. Bryan, that Mr. Bryan said to him that "while still believing that free silver would be a good thing for the country, the nations of the world have settled down to a gold basis to such an extent that it would be practically impossible to substitute anything for the gold standard. He thinks that free silver will not be considered in the Democratic Convention of 1904, and, moreover, that it will never again be an issue."

The exact location of the Cullom's Riffle Dam in the Ohio river will be at the Goff farm, near Fernbank. An order from Washington directing District Attorney McPherson to at once secure the Goff farm by condemnation disclosed the fact. Preliminary plans for the construction of the dam have already been considered by Government engineers, and it is estimated that $3,000,000 will be spent on the dam. The structure when completed, will give a 9-foot stage of water for a distance of 25 miles up the Ohio river the year round, making navigation possible throughout the period of low water stages.

Mr. J. B. Hudson, of New Orleans, after a two months trip through the principal stock raising states, says that at no time during all the forty years he has been in the live stock business did he ever see such a scarcity of mules as there is at present. The British army took 100,000 mules out of this country for use in South Africa, and in fact, depleted the American market of a certain class of mules. Just before the British came over to buy, mules were so cheap all over the mule-raising States that farmers gave up the business as unprofitable. Large demands have been made lately by Hawaii, Cuba and the West Indies, and altogether this has brought an unprecedented scarcity of mules.

When corn is fed to pigs it will bring nearly twice as much as when sold by the bushel. Nothing should be sold off the farm that can be turned into something more valuable, or which can be marketed in a more concentrated form. It is transportation charges that largely reduce the profit.

THE Republicans are having their troubles up in the Eleventh Congressional district, where Dr. Hunter and D. C. Edwards each is claiming to be the party's nominee for Congress, while the crested jayhawker, John D. White, is raising hades as an independent candidate.

The per capita circulation has been increased 33 per cent during the last seven years. The gentlemen who were loudest in declaring in 1896 that we did not need more money nearly so badly as we needed "confidence" are the same gentlemen who are now deploring the scarcity of money and figuring on rushing through an Aldrich and a Fowler bill.

Rochester (Ind.) Sentinel: Senator Beveridge told the state bankers' association at South Bend, that there will be "no radical financial legislation next term of congress." Why any legislation at all. Didn't the republicans settle the money question for all time when they passed the single gold standard law? They said they did, and why are they talking of changes so soon?

A cannon of the revolutionary war has been discovered buried on the farm of Ephraim Hauffman, near Warwick, Chester county, says a Reading Pa., correspondent of the Baltimore Sun. The cannon weighs 4,550 pounds and is of cast iron. The letters "P. W. F." cut on it are taken to mean that it was made at the Pennsylvania Warwick Furnace, which operated during the revolution. The furnace made cannons for Washington's army.

Tobacco Growers' Meeting.

THE tobacco growers of Boone county, who are members of The Burley Tobbacco Growers Association will meet in Burlington at 1 p. m., Thursday, October 22d, 1903, for the purpose of selecting a County Chairman and Secretary and selecting three members of the County Board of Control, and for the further purpose of recommending a suitable person to act as inspector. All subscribers are voters, L. H. VOSHELL, County Executive Committeeman.

As a grand finale to Gov. Beckham's campaigning tour of the State, he will in the last few days of the week preceding the election make a swing about the State on a special train, speaking at forty places which he has been unable to reach through lack of time. The Governor's speeches and the great outburst of enthusiasm which has greeted him everywhere have aroused the Democrats all over the State and so great has been the demand for his presence that the State Campaign Committee has determined to engage a special train on which he will make a flying trip, beginning Tuesday, October 27, and traveling all week, making his fortieth and last speech of the trip at Lagrange, Saturday afternoon.

No one who desires to protect his crops against insects should object to birds getting a small share. A young robin consumes 40 per cent. of animal food more than its own weight in 12 hours in its first stages. A pair of robins having a nest of young ones would perform a vast amount of work in a season, as each pair will sometimes raise two broods.

Suppose the farmers of this country should decide to stop the plow and hang up the hoe for a year, what would be the result? Misers may hoard their money and create a panic, the miners may go out on a strike and produce a coal famine; the manufacturer may close his factory and cut short the supply of some important article of commerce, the oil king may plug the oil wells of the United States and of the world, and in spite of all these calamities the people would find some way to get along. But let the farmers of this country go on a strike for a year and see what would happen.

The Guttman Bros. of New York, operating under the name of "The Union Shell and Button Company," through Leo Guttman and Joseph Weber, on Monday last effected the lease of the old spoke factory building in Newtown with Victor Obertin, and will at once install fifty (50) machines for the manufacture of pearl buttons. In addition to the fifty persons required to operate the machines a dozen other employes will be needed about the plant, to say nothing of the men engaged in fishing for shells in the Ohio and transporting them to the manufactory. The plant will be ready for operation by December 1st.—Lawrenceburg Register.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I noticed in your paper some reference to the old Middle Creek (now Belleview) church. As to the first house of worship, I will give you a brief extract from the record of the first business meeting held after the organization. This meeting was held April 16, 1803:

"The church then proceeded to appoint trustees to superintend the finishing of the meeting house, and Brethren Sebree, Hawkins and Rogers were appointed thereto. The house to be finished in the following manner, (viz): The plank for the floor to be seasoned, jointed and pinned down. The seats to be a foot wide, two inches thick, dressed on both edges and top, with plank legs of the same dimensions. With a door and three windows. The house to be underpinned, chinked and crammed. The whole to be paid for in property at such prices as the said trustees shall fix upon."

The house above mentioned was a little log house which was used by the church for 9 years, when, on June the 13, 1812, it was agreed to build a frame house, and on September the 10, 1814, the trustees reported the completion of the new house.

In January, 1830, a committee was appointed to draft plans for a new house of worship, and raise a subscription to pay for same with instructions to have the house completed by the following August. Then, after the destruction of the above named house (which was a brick) the first meeting house was built at Belleview in 1877 or 1878. This was supplanted the present year by the modern house which now adorns the little town of Belleview.

As to the pastorate of Bro. C. S. Carter, I can, nowhere find that he ever served as pastor. I find in the 40's that during the pastorate of Robert Kirtley, sr., who preached only one Sunday in each month, Bro. Carter was invited by the church to preach for them regularly on each 4th Sunday.

This custom of having other ministers to labor in conjunction with the regular pastor prevailed in those days. On account of the limited space I did not bring out these and many other interesting facts connected with the early history of the church.

Base Ball.

The Boones and the Belleview team hooked up for a game here last Saturday afternoon, notwithstanding the cold wind that swept the country from the northwest. Not a very large crowd was on hand, but all present had a great deal of fun trying to keep from freezing and watching the game. The Boones were at the bat in the fifth inning and two men were out, when Mrs. Brady became so ill that it was necessary for Hubert to go to her bedside in Burlington and the game was called; the score standing 9 to 4 in favor of the Boones. Struck out—By Brady 5, by Hughes 7. Base Hits—Souther, Clutterbuck, Slayback, Bullock, Hogan, Luck, Brady, John Ryle, Kelly. Three Base Hit—Bullock.

Umpires—Hawes and Presser.

The Aurora base ball people rejoiced all last week because of their victory over the Lawrenceburg team but they were put to grief last Sunday by the Petersburg team which defeated them 15 to 3. It was the first time the Aurora team had done business with a team that is the real thing, and it got an awful fall. The Hoosier terrors could not connect with Houston's slants, drops and curves, and he mowed them down with ease. Petersburg knocked four Aurora pitchers out of the box, making 24 hits in the game, while Houston let his opponents down with four. Aurora should do a good deal of practice work before she tackles a sure-enough ball club again.

Revival services will commence at Bullittsburg church, Monday evening, Oct. 26th, at 1 o'clock. The pastor will be assisted by Rev. Hugh T. Searcy, pastor of Ghent, Ky., Baptist church. Everybody is urged to attend these meetings. Mr. Searcy comes highly recommended as a fine preacher, and has had good success in evangelistic services.

John G. Saxton, brother of Mrs. Annabell Kirkpatrick, of this place, was killed in Oregon a few days ago while attempting to arrest a desperado. One of his comrades was killed also. The desperado did the shooting from a second story window, after which he made his escape. Mr. Saxon was born in Burlington on the 9th day of December, 1858. He lived for many years in central Indiana, being educated at Danville. He graduated in law in 1895, and located in Oregon in 1897. Walter Garnett's sale was well attended, last Monday, extra prices prevailed. Corn brought from 65 to 75 cents a bushel, cows as high as $50. Hogs brought out-of-sight prices.

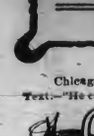
GOD'S CARE FOR HIS CHILDREN



It Is Constant and Bestowed in All Wisdom and Love

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1905, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, .

Text:—"He careth for you."—1 Peter, 5-7.

GOD'S WORD declares that God careth for His children. Is there a Christian who doubts the general theoretical truth of our text? We cannot conceive of one who is truly a child of God by the process of regeneration through faith in the cleansing and saving power of Jesus' blood who does not believe that God careth for him in a peculiar and intimate way. As surely as the Lord knoweth them that are His, so surely does He extend to them special care and protection. The Christian believes that God cares for him, and yet that belief is perhaps more often theoretical than practical; it is more of an abstract conception than it is concrete; it is more general in its relation to the affairs of life than it is specific. It is good Christian doctrine, and affords a fruitful topic for prayer-meeting talks, but it is more difficult and rare to have the truth lived out in a practical way in the daily life. When the way is smooth, and the sun shines; when the worshipful and devotional spirit floods our souls with thoughts of God, we say: "God careth for us." But when the hard places are encountered and the sun's face is hid behind the cloud of adversity; when instead of the exultation of the mountain top, we feel the depression of the valley of despondency, then our troubled souls cry out: "Lord, carest Thou not?" And yet God never intended that this text should be chiefly a fair-weather text; that it should flash forth its light and mingle it only with the sunshine; that it should be the sweet strain of the soul only when the way was smooth and easy; but God has hung this blessed truth on the bright pages of His Book so that the Christian might rest upon it when all else seemed to fail; that it might be to him a bright star of hope shining through the dark clouds of adversity; that it might be sweet music swelling in the soul during the black night of deep sorrow. It should displace doubt with confidence, fear with calm trust, discouragement with encouragement.

IN THE latter part of the fourth chapter of Mark's gospel we find an incident which illustrates most clearly and forcibly this common Christian weakness. Jesus with His disciples is sailing over the lake of Galilee. During the night, the storm suddenly sweeps down upon them. With that quickness which is peculiar to the lake of Galilee, the waters are soon lashed to a raging foam, and the great waves roll in upon the boat, so that even those hardy fishermen feared for the safety of the boat, and believed that they were all about to perish. Jesus, weary after a long, hard day of teaching the multitudes, has sought rest in sleep in the stern of the boat. All unconscious of the storm and the distress of the disciples, trusting in God, His Father, He calmly lies in deep sleep. With fear and doubt filling their hearts they hasten to the Master's side and awaken Him. Then with impatience, and half petulantly, they exclaim: "Master, carest Thou not that we perish?" "And He arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, 'Peace, be still.' " And the howling wind fell until it was but a gentle whispering breeze fanning their pale and affrighted faces, and the great dashing waves dropped to rest in the bosom of the placid sea. There was a great calm, broken only by the tender, chiding tones of the Master, as He said unto them: "Why are ye so fearful? How is it that ye have no faith?" And a new kind of fear seized hold upon the hearts of the disciples. Instead of the human fear in the face of physical peril, there came the exceeding fear of the sinful heart as it realizes that it is in the presence of God. And there is much in this incident to instruct and help the Christian.

WHO is this God whose thought is towards man and Who cares for every detail and circumstance which affects him? It was failure to recognize who Jesus was; it was failure to remember what was His power over all human conditions, and His faithfulness towards them, which caused the disciples to fall into the terrible fear of that hour of storm and danger. It was because faith's eye was dim, and their sinful hearts hard and unresponsive to the Divine presence, that they dared to chide Jesus with the cry: "Master, carest Thou not that we perish?" And it is failure always on the part of the Christian to realize Who and what God is that makes him forget that God careth for him. It is blindness of unbelief and hardness of heart which bring the Christian to dare to question and doubt God, and to charge Him with lack of care for His children. How often is forced from Christian lips the cry: "Master, carest Thou not that I perish?" With the storm comes the doubt that God cares. Adversity, affliction, difficulty, trouble, shut God out of the horizon of life, and we fail to remember that He cares. It is because we do not know our God. The One Who our text declares cares for us is the All-Knowing God, He is the All-Powerful God, He is the Ever-Present God, He is the All-Loving God. Ignorance begets doubt and fear, but to know our God and Father in all His wisdom, in all His power, in all His faithfulness, in all His love, begets confidence and abiding trust. "Let us draw near with a true heart" and seek to learn more perfectly Who and what God is.

HE IS omniscient—an All-Knowing God. He knows how the planets roll in their orbits, and He knows the way you take. He knows the secrets of His universe, and He knows the secrets of your life and heart. He knows the tiny creatures which the most powerful microscope of man is hardly able to discover, and He knows the poorest, weakest and smallest of His children. He knows the very number of the hairs of your head, and if His eye follows the humble, despised sparrow as it falls to the ground, will not His ever-watchful eye behold you as you stumble and fall? He knows all about you, and He will care for you, for are ye not of much more value than the sparrow? God is not so busy with the control of the universe that He has not time to know every detail of your life. His eye runs to and fro through all the earth, and His children must remember: "Thou God seest me." He knows when the sunshine floods our pathway. He knows when darkness is round about us and the face of the sun is hid. And it is enough to know that God knows. Abraham went out from the homeland, his friends and kindred, "not knowing whither he went," but he knew that it was all right, for God knew. God knows your pathway leads through many a dark valley, through suffering, and trouble, and trial, and because God knows, you do not have to know. And God can look way beyond the dark clouds and see the glory of the resplendent sun. He knows the end of man from the beginning, and He knows that beyond the trial is the triumph, beyond the storm is the calm, beyond the affliction is the blessing. And because God knows it all, the Christian can trust, and wait and hope. Oh, if it is but meet to realize and remember that our God is an All-Knowing God!

BUT not only must the Christian realize that God is all-knowing, but he must know God as the omnipotent God—the All-Powerful God. Of what help or encouragement would it be to me to know that God was omniscient, if to that fact was not coupled the knowledge that God was omnipotent. Not only do I need a God Who knows all about me, but I must have a God Who can help me. And the Christian's God is not only omniscient, but omnipotent. It is the mighty, All-Powerful God Who has made the earth and all the wonderful vast universe. It is His power which keeps the planets rolling steadily in space. It is His power which operates through the mighty forces of nature and makes this earth of ours a place on which man may dwell. It is the All-Powerful God Who is ruling over every human condition and circumstance. It is He Who can still the waves and hush the winds, if need be, when His children cry. Oh, if we will only realize that we are resting in the hollow of His hand and that no harm can come nigh to us save that which He permits and which works out in us His glory, we will not be fearful of heart when the storms of life sweep down upon us, and we feel that we are about to be engulfed in the mad waters. What is it that gives those Hebrew captives that sublime courage, that radiant peace which rests upon their faces like a halo, as they stand before the enraged king, whose image they have refused to fall down and worship. The furnace heated to an intensity that deals swift death to the king's strongest servants is yawning to receive them. Why is it that they are not filled with fear and agony of impending doom? It is because they know that the God Who cares for them is the All-Powerful God, Who can deliver, if need be, Who can save for glory if the body is destroyed. Listen as they answer the king: "Our God, Whom we serve, is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace; and He will deliver us out of thine hand, O king." And He did, and not even the smell of smoke was upon their garments. The Christian must know God as the All-Powerful God Who is able to deliver. He may let you pass through the fire of affliction, or persecution, or trouble, but He is able to deliver, and when His perfect work is done in you, He will deliver, "for He careth for you."

AND the God Who cares for us is an Ever-Present God. He is not far off that He cannot hear us or deliver when danger threatens. During the Indian days when straggling bands of the red-skinned warriors threatened the safety of the settlers, and swooped down upon the women and children when the men were not about, many and many a time were the women thrown upon their own resources to protect themselves and the home. Behind doors and windows bolted and barred have they stood on the defensive, with shotgun in hand, and prayed that father and the boys might come home and save them from their peril. Oh, if they were only near so that they could deliver, but they had gone off to the mill in the morning, never dreaming that Indians lurked in the vicinity. And they are away off now, 10 to 20 miles; and now, in the hour of danger, and when they are so much needed, they are not present to fight for their loved ones and protect them from harm. Who can realize the agony of such an hour? Mother and the children in peril, father and the boys far away and unable to help! When the human friend is most needed, when the distress is greatest, he cannot help, he cannot protect and deliver, because he is far away. But it is not so with our God. He is ever-present. Nothing but sin can separate from Him. After going through all manner of difficulties and trials, sufferings and hardships, persecutions and dangers, Paul exclaims: "I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Jesus was with His disciples in the boat, why need they have been so filled with terror why need they have chided Him with neglect? With Jesus in the boat they could not perish. And with God and His Christ near the Christian at all times, what has he to fear?

THIS story is told of a certain Capt. D——, who commanded a sailing vessel from Liverpool to New York. On one voyage he had all his family on board the ship. One night, when all were quietly asleep, there arose a sudden squall of wind which came sweeping over the waters until it struck the vessel and instantly threw her on her side, tumbling and crashing everything that was movable and awaking the passengers to a consciousness that they were in imminent peril. Every one on board was alarmed and uneasy, and some sprang from their berths and began to dress, that they might be ready for the worst. Capt. D—— had a little girl on board, just eight years old, who, of course, awoke with the rest.

"What's the matter?" asked the frightened child.

They told her a squall had struck the ship.

"Is father on deck?" she asked.

"Yes, father's on deck."

And with that assurance the little one dropped herself on her pillow again without a fear and in a few moments was sleeping sweetly again in spite of winds or waves. It was enough for her to know that her father was in charge. And when the Christian knows that God is present at all times and is charge of their welfare and safety how it ought to reassure and bring that peace in the heart which passeth understanding.

AND the God Who cares for us is an All-Loving God. We know how the love of father and mother surrounds and protects the little babe that makes glad the home. That little, helpless thing lives in an atmosphere of love. The mother who so gently and faithfully cares for that tiny babe from day to day does it in sweetest, fullest love. And how infinitely fuller, and better, and more constant, is the love of God for His children. Love is the very nature and essence of God. He Who careth for you, does it in love. There may be chastening, but "whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth." As the earthly parent cares for its child in love through the ministry of discipline, so does the Lord care for His children. Trials of all kinds come into the life, but God says, "count it all joy," when they come, for He does not permit anything to come to His children but that it has its blessed ministry to perform in the life. Oh, if we can only try to understand the love of God, we will realize more clearly that He careth for us when the cloud is hovering over us as well as when our skies are bright and we are sailing over a smooth and unruffled sea. And because God loves us He is watching over us and caring for us when we are unconscious of it.

AND this is the God of Whom it is said: "He careth for you." The All-Knowing, All-Powerful, All-Loving, Ever-Present God. How can we doubt Him? How can we fret and chafe under His discipline? How dare we chide Him with having forgotten us? He careth for us, and because He is all-knowing and all-wise, He knows what is best for us.

"I need oil," said an ancient monk. So he planted him an olive sapling. "Lord," he prayed, "it needs rain that its roots may drink and swell. Send gentle showers." And the Lord sent a gentle shower.

"Lord," prayed the monk, "my tree needs sun. Send sun, I pray thee." And the sun shone, gilding the dripping clouds.

"Now, frost, my Lord, to brace its tissues," said the monk, and, behold, the little tree stood sparkling with frost. But at evensong it died. Then the monk sought the cell of a brother monk, and told his strange experience.

"I, too, have planted a little tree," he said; "and see, it thrives well. But I entrusted my little tree to its God. He who made it knows better what it needs than a man like me. I laid no conditions. I fixed not ways nor means. 'Lord, send it what it needs,' I prayed—'storm or sunshine, wind, rain or frost. Thou hast made it, and Thou dost know.' "

And oh, if the Christian could learn this lesson that the God Who cares for him knows best and doeth all things well! How our songs ought to arise in the dark hours of the night, how they ought to still the murmur of complaint, how they ought to make us forget the pain and the suffering, for we have a God Who cares. The beautiful lines of Frances E. Townsley come to me:

"When the stars in my Heavens grow dim and die,
And alone in the blackness I seem to lie,
When the arms I leaned on are breaking reeds,
And my bitter prayer echoes bitterer needs,
When wrongs oppress and injustice tears,
I bless Him to know I've a God Who cares."

Largest Cross in England.

The Church of St. Alban, in Holborn, has a cross over 25 feet in height, which is supposed to be the largest in England. It was given by the duke of Newcastle.

TRICK OF INDIAN MAGICIAN.

One That Mystified the Late Lord Lytton and One That Didn't Work.

The following story of Indian magic was told me by the person to whom it was told by the late Lord Lytton. I give it in my own words, for the excellent, though humiliating, reason that I have mislaid the manuscript, says a writer in Longman's Magazine.

When in India Lord Lytton often sought out conjurors, but never saw any but the usual feats, such as the mango tree trick and the basket trick. The method in each case is known, or, at all events, plausible explanations have been given by Mr. Maskelyne and other experts. On one occasion Lord Lytton liked something in the looks of the conjuror who was performing in an open space before his house. After the ordinary exhibition, his lordship asked the magician if he could not do something more out of the common way. The man said he would try, and asked for a ring, which Lord Lytton gave him. He then requested an officer to take in either hand a handful of seeds; one sort was sesame, the name of the other sort my informant did not know. Holding these seeds and having the ring between his finger and thumb, the officer was to go to a well in the corner of the compound. He was to dispose of the seeds in a certain way—I think on the low wall round the well, into the depth of which he was to throw the ring. All this was done, and then the magician asked Lord Lytton where he would like the ring to reappear. He answered "in my despatch box," of which the key was attached to his watch chain, or, at all events, he had it with him on the spot. The despatch box was brought out. Lord Lytton opened it, and there was the ring.

This trick would be easy if the British officer was a confederate of the juggler's, and if he possessed a duplicate key to the despatch box. In that case he would not throw the ring into the well, but would take it into the house, open the box and insert the ring. But this explanation involves enormous improbabilities, while it is unlikely, again, that the conjuror managed to insert a duplicate ring into the despatch box beforehand. Lord Lytton then asked the juggler if he could repeat the trick. He answered in the affirmative, and a lady lent another ring. Another officer took it, with the seeds, as before, and dropped the ring into the well. The countenance of the juggler altered in the pause which followed. Something, he said, had gone wrong, and he seemed agitated. Turning to the second officer he said: "Did you arrange the seeds as I bade you?" "No," said the officer, "I thought that was nonsense, and I threw them away." The juggler seemed horrified. "Do you think I do this by myself?" he said, and, packing up, he departed.

The well was carefully dragged, and at last the lady's ring was brought to the surface. That ring, at least, had certainly been in the water. But had the first ring been as faithfully consigned to the depths? Experts will be of various opinions as to that, yet the hypothesis of confederacy and of a duplicate key to the despatch box is difficult.

DECIDED DISTINCTION.

His Effort Was Not to Be Termed So Cheaply as a Mere "Speech."

The Elderly Falsifier was favoring with some of his wholly apocryphal reminiscences. According to himself, he had been the guide, counselor, and friend of all our giants of a past generation, relates the New York Times. It was therefore natural to ask:

"And what was the proudest moment in your life, colonel?"

"The proudest? Um-m-m. Le-emme see," soliloquized the Elderly Falsifier, carefully scanning his past glories with a critically selective eye. "The proudest? That's a hard question, young man. The proudest? Hum-hum. Was it when President Lincoln sent for me to consult about the emancl-ah, um-um? No. Hum. Was it when Secretary of State Seward followed my advice about intervening in Mexico? Um-m—ah—no. Or when Chief Justice Chase besought me to give him the benefit of my opinion concerning the constitutionality of the —um-m—ah—hump. No, no! The proudest? Ah, I have it. It was when I stood upon the platform of Cooper Union, with Gen. Grant upon my right hand and Horatio Seymour upon my left."

"And you made a speech?"

"Speech?" cried the Elderly Falsifier, with fervid contempt. "Speech? Sir, speech be ——! It was an or-r-r-r-ration, Sir—an or-r-r-ration."

Higher Education in Siberia.

The University of Tomsk is well supplied with buildings, including a very large one for clinics. The museum is amply stocked in every department, being specially rich in its archaeological relics and its anatomical specimens. The library, of over 100,000 volumes received at the outset a most valuable collection of books, engravings and original designs and sketches, contributed by Count Stroganoff. Some of these volumes would be counted rare treasurers in any European capital. The chemical and physical laboratories are specially fitted up to meet the demands of the numerous mining industries of the region, while the botanical garden is scarcely excelled in Europe in the variety and completeness of its collections.—Chautauquan.

Visiting Nurses.

Visiting nurses for patients suffering with contagious diseases are the latest and one of the most important branches of work taken up by the New York board of health in its public nursing service.

"A LIVING EXAMPLE OF PROTECTION."

INVESTIGATE? SURE!

Post Office and Other Departments Will Get Their Dose of Whitewash.

The republican leaders have decided that there must be a republican investigation by congress of the post office department "to spoil a lot of democratic thunder." That means, of course, a whitewash and a majority report that all the scandals have been investigated and all the thieves indicted. One great trouble with this kind of an investigation is that it is partisan and intended to cover up graft and give a clean bill of health to the greater rascals. Who ever heard of a partisan committee reporting unfavorably to its own party? Who will compose the committee of investigation that the speaker of the house of representatives will name? The great majority will be the most extreme partisan republicans that can be found willing to apply the whitewash with liberal hand. The investigation by the department officials has by order of President Roosevelt not extended to those who are accused of malfeasance in office three years ago, as the statute of limitations in the District of Columbia runs after that time. Yet it is more important that the people of the United States should know all those that have conspired to defraud the government than a few minor officials should be indicted.

The only way the voter can be protected from a repetition of similar frauds is to know all who have been guilty of them, so that they can remember them for popular disapproval if they appear as candidates for public office. No congressional investigation that does not cover all the post office frauds will satisfy the voters.

Then there are other departments of the government that would seem to require investigation quite as much as the post office. The interior department stands charged with rottenness in both the Indian bureau and general land offices and specific charges of malfeasance in office are on file in the courts against the Dawes commission. Perhaps the lack of energy shown in the land frauds investigation is to allow another set of grafters to cover their tracks by the convenient route of the statute of limitations.

There is no doubt that an honest committee of investigation of all the government departments would be kept busy until the end of the coming session of congress, but there is no hope that such will be appointed.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

——The silence at Washington respecting the case of Miss Huldah Todd, the postmistress in Delaware who was removed to make room for a supporter of J. Edward Addicks, betokens a purpose to let the subject "die out." But it is still reverberating in the columns of the press.—N. Y. Post (ind.).

——"When fraud and bribery charges were heard, Postmaster General Payne was able to encounter them with glib assurance," remarks the republican Pittsburg Dispatch. "But when a heartless civil service commissioner asserted that 70,000 fourth-class postmasters are under the civil service rules he declared himself to be amazed and thunderstruck." The people are curious to know what will be the president's decision on this important question. It is up to Mr. Roosevelt.—Buffalo Courier.

——Our American type of protection is of an adult, not to say, a senile kind. The lusty youth and vigor of our "infant industries" have given way to the lean and slippered pantaloon of Dingleyism. The sole hope of the latter is that it may be able to withstand in the evil day of tariff agitation, and having done all, to stand—pat. It has thus come about that something of the picturesqueness of antiquity softens the jutting asperities of our customs frontier. We are somewhat at a loss to distinguish the crumbling ruin from the mantling ivy. —N. Y. Post.

——Heretofore our organs and champions of protectionism have exulted mightily over every indication that the British people were inclined to go back to protection. But now we see no more of that. Our protectionists are badly frightened now that there seems to be some dangerous reaction. And no wonder. They see our export trade, especially in agricultural products, seriously threatened, and no doubt they are deeply anxious about the way our farmers, whom they have fooled so long, will take it. They have reason to be.—Chicago Chronicle.

——President Roosevelt's alleged loquacity does not get the better of him, in the Huldah Todd incident.—Albany Argus.

——The republicans of Massachusetts have also got away from the perfection theory of tariff. Headway is made slowly, very slowly, but it is made steadily in the right direction.—Indianapolis News (ind.).

——Mark Hanna may put much less stress on the stand-pat policy when the consumer wakes up to the fact that the protected producers are also standing pat in the maintenance of high prices.—Chicago Daily News (ind.).

"A DIFFICULT FEAT."

RESCUED BY SHAW.

Desperate Measures Resorted To Because of the Approaching Panic.

Secretary Shaw for political reasons wants to stave off a panic as long as possible, and at the Maryland and Washington bankers' meeting at Old Point Comfort he declared that "the time has come when either more government bonds must be issued as a basis for bank circulation, or some other system must be adopted." This report of what Secretary Shaw said was published in the Washington Post, September 26, and shows the administration intends to use its influence for the asset currency plan, for it is impossible to believe that even the present administration would issue more bonds just to aid Wall street in the panic that seems imminent.

When Secretary Shaw says there is no danger of a money panic, but at the same time advises the bankers that the conditions are so desperate that, either more bonds must be issued, or some other system of issuing currency must be adopted, the wise man can read between the lines and see there are troublous times ahead. The break may come soon, or it may be postponed for a time, but speculation that has run riot for some years is certainly exhausted, and much business and many people are drawing in their horns preparing for a rainy day. Opening the treasury strong boxes to the banks and overriding the law that governs the government deposits and bank reserves will only stay the tide awhile; the evil is too deep rooted to be cured by a few millions, more or less, that the treasury has to loan the banks.

The very fact of the desperate measures that the republican administration is taking will cause more deposits to be withdrawn than the dollars the treasury holds that are available to be used to help the banks.

The chief trouble is the lack of confidence, and that barometer of the financial world—Wall street—is already experiencing a thorough house cleaning of the watered stocks that it has been the main effort of Secretary Shaw to bolster up. The effect of this will soon be apparent in the country, the depression depending on the soundness with which the local banks have managed their business.

THE PRESIDENT'S PICKLE.

Shocking State of Affairs Confronts the People in the Delaware-Addicks Deal.

The statement of Postmaster General Payne that President Roosevelt was fully aware of the deal that had been made for the division of the spoils of office in Delaware is rather hard on a civil service reformer as President Roosevelt professes to be. It must be especially disheartening to those republicans who were hopeful that their party would not be disgraced by complicity with the attempt of Addicks to purchase the Delaware senatorship. That Mr. Payne should have given the Addicks faction their share of the political spoils was to be expected, but that the president acquiesced in supporting the notorious Addicks, is a shock to all patriots who demand decent government.

The offense that Miss Todd had committed and for which her dismissal was requested, was that she opposed the Addicks faction and that alone is why Mr. Payne, as official headsman, chopped off her head. There was no word against her personal or official conduct, no petition from patrons of the office for her removal, but she and her family were opposed to Addicks. That was crime enough for Mr. Payne.

A fellow feeling made him wondrous kind to Addicks and his ambition to represent Delaware in the United States senate. The respectable faction of the republican party in Delaware have been trying to stem the tide of corruption and have denounced Addicks as a debaucher of the voters of the state, but Postmaster General Payne has evidently determined to aid him.

What will President Roosevelt do? Will he reinstate Miss Todd or stand by the action of his postmaster general?

President Roosevelt can afford to be independent of the Addicks faction, for in any event they can but send a contesting delegation to the next national convention, and their claim for recognition will be settled by that body where the will of the president, from the present outlook, will be omnipotent. But the voters of Delaware and the whole country will hold him responsible and expect him to carry out his own declaration that "words are good only when backed by deeds."

——Did President McKinley say anything about "standing pat" or "letting well enough alone?" — Philadelphia Ledger (ind.).

——Mr. Roosevelt may talk on divorces and may talk on forever. But the "door-of-hope" issue did not work and the closed-door issue will be tried.—St. Louis Republic.

——The fact that your Uncle Hanna deems it necessary to expend his energies, depleted by illness, in active participation in the Buckeye campaign, serves to indicate that he is standing pat on a pretty poor hand.—Binghamton Leader.

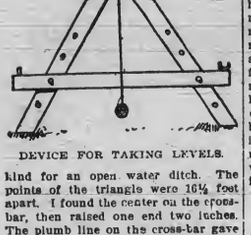
A USEFUL IMPLEMENT.



Simple Device for Taking Levels for Tile Draining or Making Ditches for Irrigating.

I send you a drawing and description of my device for tile draining or making ditches for irrigating.

Take three pieces of thin board, say two or three inches wide, two of them about seven feet long, one for cross-bar of triangle, near five feet long, nailed across two and a half feet from base parallel points of triangle. Hang a plummet and line from top to just below cross-bar. Get the center on the cross-bar by reversing the triangle, and make a groove or fine cut in cross-bar for center, so there will be no mistake. Raise one end of triangle one-half an inch, make a fine mark where the plumb line then hangs; that will show a grade of one inch to the rod where the points of triangle are eight feet and three inches apart. For a grade of two inches to rod raise one end one inch. A spirit level glass imbedded in the top edge of cross-bar at the center will be handy to have when the wind blows too much for the plumb line.

To ascertain the fall or average grade of a drain, place the triangle on the surface of the ground at the outlet of proposed drain, sight lengthwise on cross-bar to an object two and a half feet from ground at upper end of drain. Where the plumb line hangs on the cross-bar will show the grade regardless of distance. After the ditch is dug place the triangle in the bottom. Moving it along will show by the hanging of the plumb across the bar the uneven places and grade.

More than 40 years ago near Nevada City, Cal., I used a triangle of this kind for an open water ditch. The points of the triangle were 16½ feet apart. I found the center on the cross-bar, then raised one end two inches. The plumb line on the cross-bar gave me a grade mark. I started on the upper side of intended reservoir and outflow of ditch. I moved the front end up or down hill until the plumb line hung with the grade mark; drove a small stake, then moved the back end where the front end was and so continued around the side hill and ravines for more than a mile, which was done in one day. The ground was thrown out from upper side of stakes to lower side. The water ran freely the entire distance. The same thing can be done on many farms for irrigating, and I often see places as I pass through the country where water from springs and small streams could be conveyed with a small expense to higher ground than its present channel, and stored in reservoirs for irrigating, and not lost as it now is by running off in the creek beds. In sandy, porous soils, puddling the water with clay will form a coating to prevent the water from soaking away so fast.—J. J. Shearer, in Ohio Farmer.

Linseed Meal for Poultry.

Linseed meal is an excellent addition to the general variety of foods for poultry, as it is highly nitrogenous, and it is much superior to cotton-seed meal, as the seeds from which it is made are fully matured, which is not the case with the ground cotton seed. Linseed meal may be fed at all seasons. Even when grain is allowed it will pay to feed linseed meal, and when given linseed meal the hens will lay more eggs. It is richer in the essential elements of growth and production than many other concentrated foods, and greatly enriches the manure. About one gill of linseed meal may be added to every quart of ground grain used. The linseed meal is rich in mineral and nitrogenous materials, and serves to balance the grain, the mixture with half a pound of ground meat making one of the best egg-producing foods. It should not be used oftener than once a day.—Farm and Fireside.

What Makes Stunted Pigs.

Sometimes these are caused by an inherited disability to make use of the food given them, but probably more often by conditions after birth. If they are watched it will be found that the other pigs are driving them from the teats and later from the trough. Having once become weakened they are less able than the other pigs to fight for their food and have to be satisfied with short rations. It is evidently a part of the plan of Nature to eliminate the weakling as a breeder. However, these same pigs, if given a chance at the teats and the trough, often develop into good sized hogs and prove profitable. We would not, however, advise using such an animal as a breeder. The hint that Nature has given us should be taken. We agree with her in wanting for breeders only the most vigorous.—Farmers' Review.

It is said that deep plowing in England has doubled the yield of wheat, oats and other crops. They plow as deep as 20 inches. Steam plows are used.

HANDY ROPE HALTER.

It Consists of Half-inch Cotton Rope, 10 or 12 Feet Long, with Ring in Each End.

We use it for a bridle, a halter, and to ring hogs with. In using it for a bridle or halter, we approach the horse on the left hand and take the ring in our right hand; throw it up over the horse's neck by putting it under and over the neck from the right side, as at a, in Fig. 2, draw the ring down under the jaw at c, double the rope and put it through the ring as shown at b in Fig. 1, turn the loop one-half over so the rope crosses where it goes through the ring and put the loop in the horse's mouth for a bridle and around the nose at d in Fig. 2, for halter. As a bridle it is one of the nicest things to teach a colt to lead. The operation is always to pull the colt sidewise so as to be sure to move him. In pulling on the rope it pulls to some extent through the colt's mouth and cuts and hurts, and the instant the rope is loosened it quits hurting, and we do not have to make very many side pulls until the colt will follow you at your command. As a halter it can be used for horse, cow, calf, sheep, etc. It is very handy to carry; can be put in the pocket. It comes in good use to get the horses out of the pasture in the morning. We can make a halter with each ring and lead two horses. The halter will fit any kind and sized animal.

It is just the thing to ring an old sow with. Loop it around the upper jaw and tie her to a post or fence, as in Fig. 3, and she will just stand and pull back her best, and squeal, and hold perfectly still for one to put the ring in, or fill her nose full for that matter. It is easy to get it off of the nose, for as soon as the rope is untied and let loose the sow can throw it off, for it will not stick on account of the ring. It is also the same way with the horse. As soon as the loop is taken out of the mouth or from over the nose, by holding to the rope it will unfasten itself, the loop running through the ring. It is the handiest cheap thing we have on the farm.—A. S. Forsman, in Ohio Farmer.

SHEEP AND FERTILITY.

With Ovine Assistance Run-Down Farms Can Be Restored to High State of Productiveness.

A good flock of sheep will do any land good and is the best of property for a run down farm. A Michigan authority on sheep says: "Land that could not be cropped profitably, owing to wheat raising, is now yielding larger crops than when it was virgin soil. Great opportunities have been presented in building up these run-down farms, which could be purchased for half what they proved to be worth when restored. Michigan soil recuperates rapidly when given an opportunity. My land is worth double what I paid for it seven years ago. I ripped up some clover sod and planted it in corn June 27 last. The crop yielded 100 bushels of grain. Another field yielded 125 bushels of ear corn. Yet all this land was so badly run down a few years ago that it would not raise enough to justify planting it. These run-down wheat lands, when built up, grow as good corn as I ever saw in Iowa or Illinois; in fact, it is the best corn land, owing to its warmth in early spring. The Michigan feeder has two sources of profit, one from the gain of his stock and another by the addition of the fertility to his farm, which, in the course of a few years doubles its value. All these opportunities are not gone by any means. Plenty of run-down farms are yet to be had, and the task of building them up is by no means formidable, with ovine assistance. In five to seven years values may be doubled and feeding operations are bound to pay during that period, admitting the possibility of one or two bad years."

ALL AROUND THE FARM.

The cheapest work is that made by the wise use of clover pasture.

A neat appearance of the farm adds dollars to the market value of each acre.

The squeaking wheel and the squealing pig show a loose spoke in the farming rig.

One of the ways to "keep cool" while working out in the sunlight is to avoid fretting.

Do not refuse to make an allowance for your wife, if you expect her to make allowances for you.

Cowpeas are grown in favor both for hay and for a manure. They are a sure crop. Such a thing as failure seldom occurs.

A farming community is judged by its roads, its fences and is buildings as well as by the crops. Have some neighborhood pride.

When the ground is too wet to plow, turn to the orchard, mend the fences, cut wood. Anthing is better than to go to town and do nothing.

The best managers on the farm are not those who work all the time, but those who find some time every day for a little rest. A man will wear longer and better if he does.—Midland Farmer

PRAYER RESTORES HER SIGHT.

A Remarkable Cure of an Afflicted Woman Is Reported from Oregon.

Dr. L. W. Brown, of Eugene, Ore., relates a most peculiar circumstance. He was called to Cottage Grove the other night to assist in an operation to remove an eye from a woman who had been blind in one eye for 35 years and it was deemed advisable to remove the useless member. The operation was to be performed the next morning, and the woman was placed on the operating table and the attending surgeons got their instruments in readiness for the operation, when the woman shouted that the Lord had restored her sight.

Those in attendance were greatly surprised at the outburst, but the good eye was closed and she was shown several articles and could see them plainly with the eye that had been blind for years and called the articles by name. There were half a dozen witnesses of the occurrence and all were dumfounded.

The woman had spent several hours in prayer previous to the time for the operation, and just before going on the operating table offered a final prayer to God to restore her sight. She naturally feels that her prayer was answered.

WOMAN BLOCKS A RAILWAY.

Great Enterprise in Mexico Forced to Halt Because of Prior Concession.

Recent advices from Topolobampo, Mexico, say the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient railroad, promoted by A. E. Stillwell, of Kansas City, has been forced to suspend construction work in Mexico owing to disputes over important concessions involved in its route. Mrs. Owens, wife of a man who secured Mexican concessions years ago in furtherance of a huge colonization scheme that was never matured, discovered that the old concessions had not expired and they were placed in her name. It is believed that the Mexican Central assisted her in developing her rights, two solicitors of that company having had her affairs in charge. Recently the supreme court of Mexico sustained her rights to the concessions. Previously she is said to have offered to compromise with Stillwell for $2,000,000.

About 220 miles of the railroad has been built in Mexico, out of Chihuahua and Fort Stillwell, formerly Topolobampo, on the Pacific coast. The route includes Kansas City, Oklahoma and Texas before reaching Mexico, when it traverses the republic and finds an outlet on the Pacific coast.

SAW REMAINS OF WASHINGTON

Claim of a New York Man Who Applies for Admission to Almshouse at the Age of 106.

After reaching the age of 106 years Edward R. Norris, of Rochester, N. Y., has applied to the county superintendent of poor for admittance to the county almshouse. Norris says he was born in 1797 at the town now known as Unity Springs, N. H. Clippings and other documents that he produced seem to bear out his claim to great age. He has spent most of his life in Kansas, but recently has been living on a farm near here. Norris claims that he viewed the remains of George Washington at the time of the funeral, but he was then only two years old. He attributes his great age to the fact that he never married.

CHAIN OF SUGGESTION.

One Barber After the Other Had an Idea to Offer the Pertinacious Customer.

"A man up in my country had a melancholy experience," declared Senator Frye, of Maine. "This man determined to get a shave every other day and to let every barber cut his hair who suggested it. At the end of a week three different barbers had intimated that the hair needed trimming and were told to 'go ahead and trim.' As the hair was now beyond the trimming stage, the fourth barber's advice, 'that clipping would be beneficial,' was accepted. 'Now,' thought the man, 'the next barber will be satisfied that when I say "shave," I mean "shave" and nothing more. Yet when the fifth barber mentioned singeing he permitted his closely-cropped hair to be singed. The sixth night was on a Saturday. He went to still another barber, now satisfied that when he said 'shave' no barber would have the temerity to hint at an attempt to reduce the length of his hair.

"'Did you ever try Dr. Comeup's hair restorer?' questioned the barber as he took up a bottle.

"The Indians had a quicker way of getting at a man's scalp than these barbers," commented Senator Chandler.

"Yes," said the Maine statesman, "but we are living under modern, not ancient barbarism."

For a Bad Back.

Sabra, Montana, Oct. 19th.—A great many men in this neighborhood used to complain of pains in the back, but now scarcely one can be found who has any such trouble.

Mr. Gottlieb Mill is largely responsible for the improvement, for it was he who first of all found the remedy for this backache. He has recommended it to all his friends and neighbors, and in every case it has had wonderful success.

Mr. Mill says:—

"For many years I had been troubled with my Kidneys and pains in the small of my back. I tried many medicines but did not derive any benefit until last fall, when I bought a dozen boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. After using them a few days I began to improve, my back quit aching and I felt better and stronger all around.

"I will keep them in the house right along, for in my opinion they are the best medicine in the world today, and if my back should bother me again, I will use nothing else."

Never Again.

Biway—Use an alarm clock nowadays? Higsby—No; never tried one but once.

"How was that?"

"Well, you see, the first time it went off I didn't exactly know what it was, and so I said: 'O, for heaven's sake, Maria, shut up!' Maria happened to be awake, and well, that is how it was."—Stray Stories.

Mrs. Anderson, a prominent society woman of Jacksonville, Fla., daughter of Recorder of Deeds, West, who witnessed her signature to the following letter, praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—There are but few wives and mothers who have not at times endured agonies and such pain as only women know. I wish such women knew the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a remarkable medicine, different in action from any I ever knew and thoroughly reliable.

"I have seen cases where women doctored for years without permanent benefit, who were cured in less than three months after taking your Vegetable Compound, while others who were chronic and incurable came out cured, happy, and in perfect health after a thorough treatment with this medicine. I have never used it myself without gaining great benefit. A few doses restores my strength and appetite, and tones up the entire system. Your medicine has been tried and found true, hence I fully endorse it."—Mrs. R. A. ANDERSON, 225 Washington St., Jacksonville, Fla.

Mrs. Reed, 2425 E. Cumberland St., Philadelphia, Pa., says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and tell you the good I have received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I have been a great sufferer with female trouble, trying different doctors and medicines with no benefit. Two years ago I went under an operation, and it left me in a very weak condition. I had stomach trouble, backache, headache, palpitation of the heart, and was very nervous; in fact, I ached all over. I find yours is the only medicine that reaches such troubles, and would cheerfully recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all suffering women."

When women are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

The experience and testimony of some of the most noted women of America go to prove, beyond a question, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all such trouble at once by removing the cause and restoring the organs to a healthy and normal condition. If in doubt, write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass, as thousands do. Her advice is free and helpful.

No other medicine for women in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Refuse to buy any substitute.

George W. Popham, who resides over on Gunpowder plains, was in town last Friday, as sprightly, fat and frisky as ever, and he bids fair to enjoy the wind blowing through his whiskers for many more winters to come.

A. B. Rouse left Burlington about 6 a. m., last Thursday, and went to Williamstown, Cincinnati and Covington and was back at home in Burlington at 2 p. m. the same day. That was getting over the country pretty rapidly.

The work of putting on the steel ceiling in the circuit court room was finished yesterday at noon. When the ceiling is painted and the remainder of the work is completed, the room will look as handsome as a parlor.

There does not appear to be much hustling in this county on the part of either of the political parties, and yet the election is only a few days in the future.

Fine Farm For Sale.

I withdraw from sale my farm of 255 acres at Hebron at the price named in a recent notice. The farm is for sale at a bargain if sold soon, but not at that price. The conditions and circumstances and opportunities existing when that offer was made, do not exist now—hence the withdrawal. This is a magnificent farm, finely located and elegantly improved. The land and improvements are all in splendid condition. This plantation and its improvements were planned, constructed, developed and finished for a superb country home, for a country gentleman, and only a man of that character can appreciate it. The whole farm is as beautiful as a city park. It is for sale at a bargain if sold soon. If not sold soon it will be for rent to good and careful men.

WALTON.

The Teachers' Association, District No. 5, met at Walton, October 24th. Superintendent Snyder being absent, the meeting was called to order by Pro. Dickey. Exercises opened by song, "Old Kentucky Home," after which the President lead in prayer.

First subject on the Program, Music in the Public Schools, an essay by Miss Anne Lee Wolfe, clearly portrayed the pleasure, mental and moral benefits derived from music.

Discussion called for. Pro. Newman from Henry county, thinks music does not fill the soul alone with life and happiness, but it is a strong incentive to promote attendance, and a means of bringing the entire community into sympathy with the school work. We were glad when, in a nice way, he brought into his talk the value of monthly examinations, and also the morals and manners of teachers as an example to pupils.

Dinner was announced for all present. And such a feast as it was. The table was decorated with the rarest flowers of the season, and the repast in quantity, variety and dainty preparation, servered in that hospitable way, characteristic of the ladies of Walton, could not fail to make every participant feel full, grateful and happy.

At 1 p. m. the Association was again called to order.

Mr. Tomlin gave an interesting talk on the progress of the schools in Boone county since 1884, when, through his energetic influence, the first district tax was levied. "Ever since then he has been advocating tax for public institutions of all kinds, as the only right way." As an example, he spoke of the success of the Walton school. They have an attractive and substantial school building, an intelligent corps of teachers, and their school is prosperous. The unwilling taxpayers have become the willing, and everybody is happy and all work in harmony." "Boone county is able to have the same system all over the county if we will do what we are able to do, and what we must do if we keep up with the march." "We can not have graded schools until we have good roads, fewer districts, and longer terms. The only way to accomplish this is by taxation."

Mr. Dickey spoke of the advantages of a graded school course. "Children know that they can only advance by their own industry and close application; there can be no favorites; but each must go up on his own merits. Thus the parents know it is necessary that every child should be there on every day, and more regular attendance is secured.

Miss Chambers read an essay, Friday Afternoon Exercises, giving some fine suggestions from her own experience. "The selections should be made up of such material that the preparation will fill the mind with the power of research; the rendering of the program should be exercises in culture and grace that will fit the pupil to appear well on any occasion. One suggestion was an evening devoted to one minute exercises about some author. Another, the old fashion spelling, or ciphering bee. These exercises are the means of drawing parents into the schoolroom, where we may make their acquintauce, when we might not be able to do so in anyother way. Miss Hoffman, on the same subject, dwelt also on the importance of a well arranged program. She would introduce exercises in Geography, History and Biography. "Lives of Great Men all remind us," &c. "The questions of the day and debates." Exercise which bring out strength and beauty of expression." Such exercises afford an opportunity of finding out the thoughts and tasts of our pupils and gives them a strength of character not artificial but pure.

Talks on this subject were concluded by a reading, "Our Friday Afternoon Exercises," by Little Miss Estella Rausler, one of Miss Chambers' pupils.

We were so much entertained and encouraged by talk from Boone county's own Miss Mary Thompson. "She enjoyed the meeting." She looks upon work in the school room, as a work for eternity. "It is the grandest work and perhaps the hardest work." We must sow the seed of morality, ever remembering that while the good is never lost, neither is the evil." The primary department is the most important. If the foundation is good, the structure will be be good. Lay a good foundation. Influence is the teacher's strong point.

A most enjoyable feature of the afternoon exercises was the music rendered by Miss Nellie DeMarque, of Ludlow.

Miss Bedinger gave us an entertaining paper, The Value of Libraries in the Public Schools. The American people are readers. The the taste for good reading must begin in childhood. Our text books bring out the hard, dry facts which must be met and mastered; but reading clothes them in new life and beauty. Give children good books and we give them pure, true friends."

After a talk by Mr. Newman, of Boone county, on the school course, as planned by our County Superintendent, for the use of the teachers of this county, an adjournment was called for, to meet again October 31st, at the place appointed for the next meeting.

A WONDERFUL HORSE.

Dan Patch Breaks the World's Pacing Record.

His Admirers Predict That He Will Still Further Lower the Record Should He Start Again Under Favorable Conditions.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 23.—The third day of the harness racing at the Memphis Trotting association's track was made memorable by the magnificent performance of Dan Patch in a trial against time. The handsome son of Joe Patchen made the mile in 1:56¼, clipping three-fourths of a second from the world's record of 1:57, held by Prince Alert, and lowered his own record by two and three-quarter seconds. The mile was paced without a wind shield and at the finish Dan Patch seemed as fresh and vigorous as at the start. The demonstration that greeted the new world's pacing champion as he flashed under the wire was a memorable one. Horse owners who stood about the track before the starter's stand had caught the time with their own watches and before the official time was flashed out across the track they set up a mighty shout and threw hats and caps high in to the air. The shout was caught up by the people in the grand stand and the space before it.

The quarter was reached in 29 seconds, the half in 58 and the three quarters pole in 1:27¼. As the horse swung into the stretch Dan Patch was pushing the forward runner so closely that scarcely a hand's breadth intervened between his nose and the back of the driver in the forward sulky.

The performance of Dan Patch Thursday in setting a new world's record was a surprise to even his most ardent admirers. The betting on the trial was 6 to 5 that he would beat his own record of 1:59, and 4 to 5 that he would not make better time than 1:59. Scarcely any one had displayed sufficient enthusiasm in the bay son of Joe Patchen to suggest that he might equal the record of champion Prince Alert and certainly no one had predicted that he would excel this wonderful mark of 1:57. But he went the mile with so little apparent exertion that Thursday night his admirers are predicting that he will still further lower the world's record should he start against it with weather and track conditions as favorable as they were when he made his wonderful mile Thursday.

ALLEGED ANARCHIST.

John Turner, An Englishman, Placed Under Arrest at New York.

New York, Oct. 24.—Armed with a warrant sworn out by Secretary Cortelyou, of the department of commerce and labor, four immigration inspectors with several secret service detectives and a number of policemen went to Murray Hill Lyceum Friday night and arrested John Turner, an Englishman, on a charge of inciting and promoting anarchy, in violation of the alien labor laws.

Turner had just finished a lecture on "Trade Unionism of the General Strike, and the hall, which was crowded, was in an uproar when the arrest was made, but the police were too numerous for the crowd to do more than shout their disapproval. Turner was put aboard a revenue cutter and taken to Ellis island, where he was locked up.

Immigration Commissioner Williams has had a warrant for Turner's arrest for the past five weeks.

The federal officials allege that he had been going from city to city preaching anarchy, and though trailed by a number of secret service detectives, he was not apprehended until Friday night. Emma Goldman sat on the platform with Turner and announced his arrest but urged the crowd to leave the hall without making a demonstration.

The police confiscated a lot of anarchistic circulars and cards which had been distributed announcing that "John Turner, chief organizer of the National Shop Assistants (Retail) Clerks' union of England, a member of the executive committee of the London Trades Council, would deliver a series of lectures on October 27, November 1, 8, 9 and 10."

Turner will be arraigned before a United States commissioner.

OFFICERS AND NEGROES CLASH.

One Man Dead, One Mortally and Three Others Seriously Hurt.

Wheeling, W. Va., Oct. 24.—Marshal John G. Elliott is dead, a Negro is dying and three others are seriously wounded as the result of a clash between officers and a mob of angry Negro laborers and foreigners at Flushing, O.

The battle took place in the tunnel of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at Flushing Friday night.

About 10 o'clock Friday night Marshal Elliott was called to quell a disturbance in the streets caused by the Negroes. The officer, cautioning them that a repetition would mean arrest, and two of the men assaulted him. Marshal Elliott ran for reinforcements and when he returned the men had disappeared, but were tracked to the tunnel where they had fortified themselves. Marshal Elliott led an attack and fought the gang hand to hand but a bullet pierced his heart and he fell dead in his tracks. The deputies removed his body from the tunnel and succeeded in capturing three of the men against whom feeling is intense.

More deputies were sworn in and the officers were joined by a posse of citizens, but when they reached the tunnel no trace of the men could be found. The posse took up the chase and located three men, two blacks and one a foreigner in a lonely cabin at midnight Friday night.

The men resisted arrest and after the house had been surrounded one member of the posse advanced to the door and commanded the men to surrender. His shout was met with a volley of lead and he retreated.

IMMIGRATION REPORT.

A Large Increase Over the Last Fiscal Year.

Of the Total There Came From Europe 814,507 Immigrants, From Asia 29,966, and From All Other Sources 12,573.

Washington, Oct. 24.—The annual report of Commissioner General Frank P. Sargent, of the bureau of immigration, shows a large increase of steerage immigration over that of the preceding year, the aggregate for the fiscal year of 1903 being 857,066, an excess over that of last year of 208,303, or 32 per cent. The statistics show an increase in immigration from all foreign sources, suggesting as the chief cause of the influx of aliens into the United States during the year the inducements offered to settlers here rather than any special causes of discontent in their own countries. Of the total steerage immigration, there came from Europe 814,507, from Asia 29,966 and from all other sources 12,573. If these figures are added those representing the total arrivals of alien cabin passengers, 64,269, the result will show that the total immigration of aliens to the United States during the year aggregated 921,315, or 105,043 more than the greatest number heretofore reported for any one year.

The greatest number of immigrants, 230,622, came from Italy, an increase of 52,247 over last year; while Austria-Hungary furnished 206,011, an increase of 34,022; Russia, 136,093, an increase of 28,746; Germany, 40,886, an increase of 11,782; Sweden, 46,028, an increase of 15,134; Ireland, 35,310, an increase of 6,172, and England, 26,219, an increase of 12,644. Of the Oriental countries Japan was foremost with 19,968, an increase of 5,698; while China contributed 2,209, an increase of 560 over last year.

Of the total number of steerage aliens 613,146 were males and 243,900 were females, of whom 102,431 were less than 14 years of age. There were of these 3,341 who could read but could not write, and 185,667 who could neither read nor write, leaving a balance able both to read and to write of 668,038. The total amount of money brought by them into the United States was $16,117,513.

Exclusive of those denied admission at the land boundaries of the United States 8,769 alien immigrants were rejected for various causes, the number of rejections being double those of the preceding year. Of these 5,812 were paupers; 1,773 were afflicted with disease, and 1,086 were contract laborers. Concerning these figures, Commissioner Sargent says:

"The most noteworthy features in this statement are those in relation to the repections of alien contract laborers and persons suffering with dangerous contagious diseases. With respect to the former, it may fairly be assumed that the extra vigilance of the officers charged with the enforcement of the law has resulted in the detection and exclusion of the large number given, 1,086, which is in excess of the number excluded any previous fiscal year since the establishment of the bureau."

ITCHING NOSE A PERIL.

Victim of Road Agents Wanted to Scratch, But Was Made to Smell of a Gun.

Ex-Congressman Bell used to tell a story of a time when he once got into grave peril on account of his nose. He was going to Leadville in the early days on a stage coach which was held up by highwaymen. The passengers were ranged in a row outside with their hands up, the familiar attitude being enforced by a gun in the hands of one of the gentlemen of the road, while the other went through the various pockets at his leisure.

In the midst of the ceremony Mr. Bell's nose began to itch with that maddening persistency calculated to drive to insanity or the grave if not relieved. Involuntarily his right hand began to lower itself to the seat of troubles.

"Hands up there!" called the man behind the gun, sternly.

His hand shot back into place, but in a moment began to lower itself again.

"What's the matter with you?" inquired the bandit. "Are you anxious to become a load mine?"

"My nose itches so I can't stand it any longer," said Mr. Bell. "I've simply got to scratch it."

"No, you hain't," replied the agent, "because I'll do it for you."

With which he proceeded to scratch the prospective congressional nose with the muzzle of his shotgun.

IT WOULDN'T COME OFF.

He Had a Face That Indelibly Impressed All Who Got a Glimpse of It.

A Duluth attorney recently went east to visit his old home, and the first Sunday he was there he attended church, relates the Duluth News-Tribune. After service he visited the Sunday school and saw many familiar faces among the pupils, although they had all grown considerably during the years he had been away.

At the request of the superintendent the visitor addressed the school, and in opening he asked if there were any present who remembered him—who had ever seen him before.

The hand of a little fellow in the front row immediately went up "I do—I do!" he said.

A satisfied smile crept over the face of the visitor. He was glad that the children remembered him.

"Now, where was it you saw me before?" he asked the boy who had raised his hand.

"You was the clown in the circus last summer!" replied the youth, enthusiastically. "I'd never forget your face."

The McBride Case Again.

St. John, Kan., Oct. 26.—Mr. and Mrs William McBride and Jesse L. Limes, M. D., have gone before Mr. George E. Moore, Notary Public, and have sworn and subscribed to written statements confirming the story of the awful illness and subsequent cure of the little son of Mr. and Mrs. McBride.

Dr. Limes is particularly emphatic in his statement, and there does not now seem to be any room for doubt as to the fact that Dodd's Kidney Pills, and nothing else, saved the little boy.

He was so bad that he had Epileptic spells which seized him with increasing frequency. He was semi-paralyzed in the right side, and his mind was badly affected.

In their sworn statement, Mr. and Mrs. McBride say:

"The very day we began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills our boy had twenty-seven of these Epileptic spells or fits. In less than a week he ceased having them entirely."

The cure has caused a great sensation in the neighborhood. The sworn statements have confirmed the whole story.

"True," replied the fox, "but he is apt to be an awful flatterer."

The following week I read an advertisement in the paper of your Vegetable Compound in such an emergency, and so I decided to try it. Great was my joy to find that I actually improved after taking two bottles, so I kept taking it for ten weeks, and at the end of that time I was cured. TEN WORKMEN KILLED.

A Cave-In in a Subway Tunnel in New York.

Superintendent Hunt and General Foreman Beyers Were Arrested and Placed Under $10,000 Bail Each For a Hearing.

New York, Oct. 26.—Ten lives were cut by the cave-in of the roof and walls of the subway tunnel at 195th street, and four persons were badly injured. All of the dead and injured were workmen, and most of them Italians.

At the point where the cave-in occurred a gang of 20 men were at work in the tunnel, which is about 110 feet below the surface. Rufus C. Hunt, general superintendent of the tunnel work, said Sunday that two converging seams had appeared in the roof of the tunnel during the day work on Saturday. The presence of these seams, however, was not believed to indicate any more dangerous character of the rock than had previously been encountered, although it was thought necessary to prop the roof with a number of upright timber braces.

The tunnel was being bored by opening a perpendicular embrasure in the face of the hore, and blasting the sides to the right and left of this embrasure. Three blasts were arranged by the drillers, the holes being charged well toward the roof. The drillers then withdrew and the three blasts were set off in rapid succession by electricity, loosening large quantities of earth and rock. The drillers say that about ten minutes elapsed to allow the esmoke to clear away before Timothy Sullivan, the foreman, and Electrician Sochuett advanced, the latter intending to strike wires and hang electric lamps to light the way. They were followed by sixteen workmen. The vanguard of the gang had reached the broken stono when a rumbling sound was heard. It was great in volume with lightning-like rapidity. Those in the rear had just time to turn about and run when, with a deafening crash, hundreds of tons of rock fell on the men at the face of the horing.

The drillers and two or three Italians who were out of reach of the deluge of rock were knocked flat on their faces by the rush of wind through the tunnel.

When the roar had ceased the cries of injured workmen echoed through the tunnel. Two Negroes, in charge of a tram car which they were puahing along the track to be loaded with the blasted rock, rusbed to the opening at 200th street and to the Speedway livery stables, a block away, and there telephoned an alarm to police headquarters. Reserves were immediately ordered to the scene, while ambulances were sent from several hospitals.

Rufus C. Hunt, superintendent, and Richard Beyers, general foreman for John B. McDonald, the contractor, who is building the tunnel, were arrested as soon as they reached the scene of the disaster, but being experts in tunnel work and blasting, were permitted to direct the work of rescue. Later, a magistrate remanded them to the coroner, who held them in $10,000 bail each.

Coroner Jackson said he believed the accident was caused by criminal negligence. The seams which appeared Saturday are believed to have been about the great rock which fell directly in the center of the excavation. As soon as this boulder, acting as a keystone, was released, the stones on both sides which had been crushed loose followed it. The fall of stone continued some minutes until all the dislodged pieces had fallen into the tunnel.

From men who worked in the tunnel it was learned that props had been used to hold up the roof. The heavy timbers, 12x12 inches, were crumbled like toothpicks beneath the tremendous weight of the cave-in.

IRISH EMIGRATION.

John Redmond Says It Is Time to Start a Campaign Against It.

London, Oct. 26.—Speaking at Killarney Sunday John Redmond, the Irish leader, declared the time had arrived to start a campaign against emigration. One cause of emigration that ought to be removed, he said, was the exaggerated prospect held out to Irish boys and girls if they went to America. He criticised Andrew Carnegie's recent speech at Waterford and said the poorest laborer in Kerry was happier than the majority of Irish workingmen in the United States.

ARE TALKING WAR.

Believed a Conflict Between Japan and Russia Is Imminent.

Liverpool, Oct. 26.—Believing that war between Russia and Japan can not long be delayed, the marine underwriters decline to accept war risks on Japanese steamers even at the tempting price of 25 guineas per cent.

London, Oct. 26.—According to reports received here the conference held Saturday at Tokio between cabinet ministers and the elder statesmen of Japan did not result in any final decision. It is understood that Baron von Rosen, Russian minister to Japan, has received instructions from his government and was to have had another conference with Foreign Minister Komura Sunday. It is said that a majority of the Japanese elders favored adherence to the country's past policy, insisting that Russia should fulfill her pledges with regard to Manchuria on the ground that any compromise would only postpone and not avert a conflict.

Special dispatches from St. Petersburg represent a growing ill feeling in Russia against both England and the United States in consequence of the supposed sympathy of these countries for Japan. This feeling finds expression in the Novoe Vremya, which in commenting on the decision of the Alaska boundary tribunal, says it hopes that Canada will now sever the ties connecting it with Great Britain.

The Oyan Novikral maintains a bellicose attitude, expressing the opinion that neither Great Britain nor the United States will interfere and Russia was never better prepared for war. This paper urges that Japan had better be crushed without delay.

RUNAWAY ELECTRIC CAR.

One Man Killed, a House Demolished and the Car Splintered.

Joliet, Ill., Oct. 26.—A runaway electric car on the Cicago and Joliet line Sunday killed a man, demolished a house and reduced itself to splinters after a terrific plunge down a steep incline in this city.

Just as the car began to descend the steep hill Motorman Bouray fell in a faint and rolled from the platform. Miss Anna Westborg, the solitary passenger saw her peril and jumped from the car, escaping with some painful bruises. The car bounded forward, going down the hill at terrific speed.

At the foot of the hill, where there is a sharp curve, Peter Sharp, 18, was waiting for the car. He had not noticed that it was running away. When the car struck the curve it jumped the track, scooping up young Sharp on the fender and crashed into Charles Hollsten's dwelling. Sharp's brains were battered out against the stone foundation. The side walls of the house were crushed in and the entire structure wrecked. Mrs. Hollstein was alone in the house at the time and escaped without injury, climbing out through a window.

CRESCEUS INJURED.

The Great Trotting Stallion Was in a Railway Wreck.

Sapulpa, I. T., Oct. 26.—The great trotting stallion Cresceus, who only a few days ago beat the two-minute mark, had a close call from death on the rail. The horse was caught in a railroad accident, and is quite lame as the result.

The accident happened while a baggage car hauling Cresceus was being switched in the Frisco yards here. The horse was thrown down and his legs were injured. He will probably be lame for some time to come. Cresceus was going from Oklahoma City to Ft. Scott, Kan.

KILLED HIS TWO SONS.

Terrible Tragedy Enacted Near Frankfort, Ind.

The Man Says He Killed the Children Because His Wife Had Left Him and Refused to See Him.

Marion, Ind., Oct. 26.—Jesse McClure, a farm hand, murdered his two sons, aged 5 and 7 years, Sunday afternoon, leaving their bodies in a fence corner. While a mob was forming to capture and lynch him, McClure drove on a run to this city and gave himself up. He has been secreted by the authorities who fear attempted violence.

McClure lived near Frankton and had separated from his wife a year ago, she refusing to live with him and reurning with her children to her father's home.

At noon Sunday McClure hired a rig at Elwood and drove to the Kilgore farm, the owner being Mrs. McClure's father. He found the children playing in the front yard and induced them with candy to take a ride with him. He drove a mile up the road, carried the children to a fence corner and shot them with a revolver. The older one was found dead a few minutes later and the younger was dying, a piece of the candy being still in his mouth. McClure fled and was pursued by a crowd of young farmers hent on deadly vengeance. The alarm was given and from all surrounding towns armed pursuers started. McClure succeeded in reaching the jail here without being stopped and the authorities have hidden him away.

To the jail turnkey McClure admitted the murder of his two children, and said he had killed them because his wife had left him and refused to see him. Said he:

"When she refused to see me I decided to be revenged and drove down the road to a little clump of small trees. My two children were asleep in the buggy. When I stopped the jolt awoke my little boy, Dee. He looked up to me and said: 'Papa, what are you going to do?'

"I put my hand over his eyes and took my gun from my pocket and shot him in the forehead, killing him instantly. The shot awoke little Homer and I took him by the shoulder and fired a shot into his head. They both fell to the bottom of the huggy. I drove the horse to the side of the road and lifted both bodies out and laid them on the withered grass. I then drove directly to Marion to the jail and am here to give myself up.

"The neighbors will lynch me when they find out what I have done. I do not care what you do with me. I am ready to die and expect to hang for this crime. All that I ask is to see my dear little ones buried."

Late Sunday evening it was learned that a mob was being formed to come to Marion Sunday night and lynch McClure. Deputy Sheriff Williams spirited the murderer away from the jail and started with him to Indianapolis.

MOTHER'S TERRIBLE DEED.

Murdered Her Three Children and Attempted the Life of the Fourth.

Monterey, Cal., Oct. 26.—While temporarily deranged, Mrs. Louis Iverson, wife of a Salinas machinist, murdered three of her children at Pacific Grove at the dictation, she said later, of a supreme power. She first strangled her eldest daughter Louisa, 12. She then attempted the life of her eldest son, 11, but he boy broke away from her and took a train for his home in Salinas. She then strangled her son Haroid, 6, and securing an ax struck him a blow on the head. Later in the evening she killed her 7-months-old baby Maria by strangling.

The murder of her children was related by Mrs. Iverson to Sheriff Nesbitt Sunday.

The boy who escaped reported to his father that the eldest girl was ill and bad been lying on the bed, but said nothing of his mother's attack on him. The father telephoned to a Pacific Grove physician to call at the house and see the child. The doctor did so and was met at the door by Mrs. Iverson who said there was no one sick in the house.

Early Sunday morning Mr. Iverson himself drove to Pacific Grove. He knocked at the front door of the cottage where his wife and family had been living and was told to go around to the back door.

He did so, and entering the house was about to kiss his wife when she said: "Don't touch me. Don't put your hands on me. Go and look at your children."

With that he opened the door of the adjoining room where lay the bodies of the three children, the boy on one bed and the two girls on another. The house was in disorder and indications were plentiful that the two older children had struggled hard against their death. Mrs. Iverson had been ill for several months and had shown signs of mental derangement.

NEW BRITISH AMBASSADOR.

Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, Now at Madrid, Has Been Selected.

London, Oct. 26.—Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, the British ambassador at Madrid, has been selected as British ambassador to the United States to succeed the late Sir Michael Herbert. The king will formally sign his commission Monday.

Extended sketches of Sir Henry Mortimer's career were published in the London papers Monday morning and satisfaction is expressed that such an accomplished diplomat, with his rich and varied experiences, should have been chosen for the Washington post.

The Standard says it supposes that Foreign Secretary Lansdowne has been guided in this choice by the personal knowledge he gained in India of the ambassador's qualifications and adds that the United States certainly could not complain that his majesty's government does not select the best talent at its disposal for Washington.

He seemed to fall asleep but when his wife made efforts to rouse him she found him unconscious and he died before a physician could be summoned. Heart disease was the cause of death. He had been in apparent good health and spirits and had just returned from a brisk walk.

Policeman Shot Down By An Art Dealer at Savannah, Ga.

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 24.—Policeman Charles A. Collins was shot down in the mayor's office by Henry G. Green, an art dealer, and was probably mortally wounded. Green, who was recently arrested by Collins, was prosecuting a charge of false arrest against the officer and when a certain question was asked by the policeman reflecting on his character, Green suddenly drew a revolver and shot Collins through the breast. The mayor's office was crowded at the time with city officials and citizens who were interested in the case.

Five Cottages Burned at Norfolk, Va.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 26.—But for the heroic work of the crews from three life saving stations, the entire summer resort of Virginia Beach, with its two large hotels and half a hundred or more costly homes, would Sunday night probably be a mass of charred timber and ashes. DR. GODFREY HUNTER.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 23.—Dr. Godfrey Hunter has requested Chairman C. M. Barnett to call a meeting of the republican state central committee to decide whether he or D. C. Edwards is the republican nominee for congress in the Eleventh district. Dr. Hunter claims that the Eleventh district congressional committee has no power to act in the case. Dr. Hunter, it is said, is the power behind the throne and the state central committee will declare him nominee.

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 23.—The Hunter-Edwards fight in the Eleventh district took a new turn Thursday, when Secretary of State Hill received an affidavit from C. M. Barnett, of Louisville, chairman of the republican state central committee, that Sherman Cooper, as chairman of the Eleventh district committee, is the governing authority of the party in that district, and entitled to pass upon and settle all disputes and contests that may arise in that district.

Secretary Hill notified Judge Pryor, one of Hunter's attorneys, and will hear both sides again if the Edwards people wish to argue.

"I am going to bring my horses home. There is little sport in having horses that one is unable to see and besides," he added with a smile, "my trainor, John Huggins, is getting old." He said, however, that Americans ought to feel proud of the showing their horses have made on the English turf. A Football Game Broken Up Without Either Side Scoring.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 24.—An incipient riot resulted in a football game between the second teams of State college and Kentucky university on the latter's field, breaking up the game without either side scoring.

Fully 300 students, including the first teams of both colleges, were mixed up in the affray. A dozen boys received black eyes and abrasures of the skin, but beyond that no damage was done. No knives or pistols were drawn, but several clubs were used. Partisan enthusiasts not connected directly with the colleges drove through the fighting crowds on the gridiron striking right and left with their buggy whips. Professors and cooler heads among the older students finally separated the belligerents.

A meeting of the faculty of Kentucky university was held Friday night. Upon testimony of members of the faculty who attended the game the Kentucky university students were held not blameworthy. President Burris A. Jenkins, of Kentucky university, witnessed the riot and assisted in quelling it.

THE man who does not go to the polls and vote does not assist the candidates he is for a little bit.

IF a full vote is polled in this county next Tuesday, the Democrats will have a majority of one thousand five hundred.

SNOW fell Monday in several of the Eastern States. In New Hampshire and Vermont the fall was two inches in depth.

IT is very strange that in so many of the Republicans speechs made in Louisville, Col. Belknap's home, there is a failure to mention his name. There is evidently trouble in his camp.

IT is said that the Continental Tobacco Company will move its manufacturing plant to Louisville, which will make that city the largest manufacturer of tobacco in the world. It is now the largest tobacco market in the world.

IT is stated in Washington that the Bristow report reflects so seriously upon former First Assistant Postmaster General Heath that the President will not care to have him act as secretary of the Republican National Committee next year.

IF the Democrats want to continue in control of the State Government they must turn out and vote next Tuesday. Let no Democrat reconcile himself with the belief that there will be enough votes without his to carry the ticket through.

THE one dollar bill and the two dollar bill are a long way from being the most popular of the paper currency, as they are generally supposed to be. There are $464,734,000 in outstanding ten dollar bills, $354,228,000 in five-dollar bills, $349,882,000 in twenty-dollar bills, $93,267,000 in one hundred-dollar bills, and even $87,850,000 in ten-thousand-dollar bills, while there are only $80,217,000 in one-dollar and $46,996,000 in two-dollar bills. The one-thousand-dollar bills outstanding amount to $73,753,000. Total outstanding paper currency at the present time, 1,662,000,000.

WITH the election less than one week off the Democrats of Kentucky are more confident of victory than ever before in the history of the party. The organization is superb and not a precinct has been overlooked and reports from everywhere indicate an increase in the Democratic vote. A glimpse at the State Campaign Headquarters in Louisville makes it apparent at once the amount of work that is being done there. Nearly forty stenographers are working night and day and a force of men is kept engaged constantly in sending out campaign literature and seeing to the mailing of thousands of letters every day. Various committees are also at work at headquarters. Some have to do with organization, others with the assignment of speakers and others with the answering of the mail. In fact the Democrats have done more work in this campaign than in any previous political contest in the State. Much of the credit of the splendid organization which has been made is due to "the boys in the trenches" and the men who make up the organization in the county precincts. In this campaign they have been faithful and active and should not cease in their work until the polls close on election day.

One of the greatest mistakes which country people make is that of allowing the district school board to hire their teacher with reference merely to the amount of salary stipulated for. A "cheap" teacher is generally an inexperienced one, to say the least, and country children are thereby robbed of the benefit they have a right to demand from the money spent for their instruction. The country school, in too many instances, seems to be given over to the "prentice hand" of young inexperienced boys and girls, who should themselves be going to school, and the money apportioned for the maintenance of the school in thus worse than frittered away, because of the careless, unscholarly way in which the school work is carried on.

Country children have, at best, but limited schooling, and should therefore have the advantage of good teachers. It is a matter of regret that the country population is so generally illiterate, but one ceases to wonder at it, when it is known that, in some parts of the country, the "board" itself is not particularly required to be able to read. It is, of course, preferred that its members should have some acquaintance with the reader and speller; but ignorance of those branches does not always disqualify them for holding the office. In many instances the school is given to the one who will take it for the least money, regardless of fitness for the place, when the additional tax of a few cents for each taxpayer will give a sum that would hire a teacher who would not only be a blessing in the school room, but a power for untold good among the young people of the neighborhood.—Commoner.

The Philadelphia lawyer has long been synonymous with great penetration and foresight, but here is a story from the Philadelphia Ledger proving that he may be fallible on even these points: A certain judge, well known to the present generation of Philadelphia lawyers, was recently invited to deliver an address before the graduating class of a southern law school. As he entered the Commencement hall he read on the swinging door the word "push," he said to himself, as he related the story afterward. He began his remarks something like this: "Gentlemen of the Graduating Class: As I entered this beautiful hall a word met my eye which I would wish you all to take as a motto in your professional careers." Everyone instinctively turned to glace at the door, the orator among the rest. There, on the inside, in letters easily read, was the inscription "Pull." "It was a clean give-away," said the judge later; "I'd let the cat out of the bag then and there, and there was'nt a thing to do but to confess.

The Kansas City Journal says: "Two years ago a valuable horse belonging to Fred Gosney, of Moberly, got caught in a barbed wire fence and pulled a hoof off. Mr. Gosney refused to kill it, and it has since grown a complete new hoof, and is as good an animal as the day it was hurt. Mr. Gosney had the new hoof shod last week for the first time.

Nelson Morris' buyer in Montgomery has bought about 400 head of export cattle, averaging from 1,350 to 1,500 pounds, and paid from $4.60 to $5.

[Written by His Sister, Ethel]

'Tis just three months ago since Eddie's spirit fled, and oh! how sad it is to know that our dear brother is dead. No bitter tears had he to weep, no sins to be forgiven; yet how oft we ask our aching heart, why we weep for him, who is in heaven? Our lives are dreary and lonely, our hearts are weary and sad. It was his presence always that made our spirit glad. Oh when the heart is filled with pain, and sinking neath the blow, 'tis hard for human lips to say, 'tis better so. The midnight stars are glimmering upon his silent grave, now sleepeth without dreaming the brother we could not save. Cut off from earth in the bloom of youth, like the flowers that strew your grave, softly sleep dear, Eddie, with angels watching o'er your lone grave. In this dark world of sin and pain we only meet to part again; but when we reach the heavenly shore, we there shall meet to part no more. Like the dew upon the roses, the tears upon my brow, do not blame me for weeping, for I have no brother now.

The question of moisture conservation is also one of the most important problems the farmer has to deal with. The average annual precipitation is abundant, but it must be husbanded at times, and as no one can foretell when, it must be conserved at all times. Less than half our rainfall is sufficient to produce maximum crops with moisture to spare—if it falls at exactly the right time and in the right quantity. But it does neither. The farmer must on that account, manage his land with a view of conserving moisture, which necessitates occasional cultivated crops, destruction of weeds and thorough tillage.

As a rule just when a man gets hold of enough money to enable him to do an immense amount of good he loses all desire to do it.

About all the capital has been subscribed for a deposit bank at Florence. Miss Edith Lancaster, daughter of William Lancaster, of Richwood neighborhood, is to be the cashier. A Mr. Blackburn, of Grant county, has worked the bank up. The location of the bank in the town has not been decided upon, but it will be central. Boone will soon have her quota of banks.

W. M. Rogers, agent for the Farmers' Insurance Company, has been in every neighborhood in the county during the last month, and he says the Walton, Verona and Beaver neighborhoods, have fine corn, while the remainder of the county is considerably below an average, except an occasional field. Walton, Verona and Beaver had fine rains throughout the corn growing season.

To the voters of Burlington District: We have the question to vote on at the next November election, "for or against cattle running at large in the Burlington voting District." The word "cattle," in law, means cattle, horses, hogs, sheep and all other kinds of stock. After voting your party ticket, or for such men on the various tickets as you wish, and for or against the constitutional amendment, then you will find two columns, one for and the other against cattle running at large in Burlington voting district. If you wish stock of all kinds to continue to run at large in said district, stamp your cross in the circle opposite the word FOR, if you desire to have stock kept up, you will stamp in the circle opposite the word AGAINST.

At a meeting of farmers, one day last week, they were relating their experience as producers of corn, and farmer O. W. Gaines, of Bullittsville, told of how he was fooled by his 1901 crop. He said he planted 75 acres of good land, early that spring and cultivated it well, and everything indicated an excellent yield up to the time when it began tasseling. It was then that the drought struck it, and when he gathered the field in the fall the entire crop was 250 bushels. Farmer Geo. Ossman, of Beaver, said he was an early bird that spring, and had every indication of a splendid crop of corn until the drought got in its work, and that fall when he gathered his corn they would take the wagon into the field early on Monday morning, and if no rainy days interfered they could husk a wagon full of corn by Saturday night. The wagon was allowed to remain in the field night after night until loaded. It was then decided that this subject was exhausted.

TOBACCO GROWERS MEET.

County Organization Perfected.—Several Speeches Made By Interested Parties.

Quite a good crowd of tobacco growers responded to the call to meet here last Thursday afternoon for the purpose of effecting a county organization of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association. Several of those present are large growers and are enthusiastic advocates of the Association.

The meeting was called to order by L. H. Voshell, county committeeman, who stated its object, and read the call of President Hawkins.

The county organization was then effected by the election of L. H. Voshell county chairman, and Mosby Allen, secretary. Joseph Cleek, a large grower of Beaver neighborhood, was elected member of the Board of Control for the southern end of the county. Mr. Cleek made a very nice little speech in accepting the position. T. G. Willis, of Bullittsville, was chosen member of the Board of Control for the northern, and Hubert Brady, of Rabbit Hash, member for the central, part of the county.

The matter of selecting an inspector was the next to come before the meeting. Benjamin Allen thought one inspector could not do all the work for the county, and that more than one should be selected, but the meeting had no authority to elect more than one. John. G. Kennedy, a large tobacco dealer and grower, of Verona, and James L. Riley, of Bullittsville, who is also an extensive dealer and grower, were put in nomination for inspector. Mr. Kennedy was elected.

County Chairman Voshell then produced the stock books, to give anyone who desired an opportunity to take stock.

Joseph Cleek, of Beaver addressed the meeting, urging the taking of stock, stating that a grower could take one-fourth of the value of his crop in stock, and then realize as much on the remaining three-fourths as he can get for his entire crop at present prices.

Hon. N. S. Walton followed Mr. Cleek in a speech urging the growers to take stock, and not permit the Association to fail after all the efforts heretofore made. He said it was understood that $10,000,000 would be required to handle the present crop of burley, but the county chairman was of the opinion that only $4,000,000 would be necessary. Mr. Walton made a strong argument in favor of the organization.

Several shares of stock were subscribed and the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the county chairman.

Base Ball.

Sorry that the Boones disappointed the Petersburg team in not playing ball there last Saturday afternoon. It is true they were on hand according to appointment, but if they played ball, nobody saw them while at it, and the Petersburg team made runs until they got ashamed of themselves. It was a Waterloo for the Boones, a defeat the like of which they did not anticipate this season, but life is full of disappointments, especially for base ballists and the rooters. Following is the score, which tells, in a measure, how it was done.

Petersburg	5	2	5	2	2	1	0	5	—	22

Hughes—Struck out 2; gave 7 men bases on balls, and hit 2.

Gordon—Struck out 5; gave 2 men bases on balls, and hit 3.

The Boones have played 22 games this year. Of these they won 13, lost 8 and tied 1.

So little interest was manifested by the educators of the State in the School Teachers' Popularity Contest conducted by the Kentucky Exhibit Association that it has decided to withdraw the same and return the money that has come to the fund from this source to those who voted it. For the information of the teachers who displayed interest in the contest, it may be said that less than $100 from the entire State was sent to the Association headquarters in votes.

I shall hold examinations for diploma at Burlington and Beaver in order to accommodate those who desire to apply. I desire to make this portion of our work one of the most interesting as well as the most valuable means of promoting the Common School interest. THE CREAKING WHEEL.

Find the Passenger.

A Coachman hearing one of the wheels of his coach make a great noise, and perceiving that it was one of the worst one of the four, asked it how it came to take such a liberty. The Wheel answered that, from the beginning of time, creaking had always been the privilege of the weak.

Moral—Though we naturally desire to give vent to the fulness of our heart, when it is charged with grief, and though by uttering our complaints we may happen to move the compassion of those that hear us, yet, every thing considered, it is best to repress and keep them to ourselves; or, if we must let our sorrow speak, to take care that it is done in solitude and retirement.

HOW A TREE LIVES.

Tear Their Clothes Just Like Rude Boys in a Crowd and Have to Mend Them.

Trees, like animals, eat, drink, sleep, grow, and die. Everyone knows this, yet not everyone could put it in the interesting manner of Julia Ellen Rogers in her book, "From Among Green Trees."

Trees tear their clothes, and have to mend them. They jostle each other, like rude boys in a crowd, and the strong conquer the weak. Disease besets them. Accident breaks their limbs. The varying weather checks their growth or coaxes them to flourish.

Kin of the woodchuck and the bear, they put on warm coats in winter and wait for spring. When the weather is warm, a tree goes to sleep at sundown, and in the morning wakes again. A cloudy sky makes the tree drowsy. Rain puts it to sleep. So the only days of prosperity and tree-activity are the clear days.

In sleep the leaves of many trees fold together and droop. The closing of the leaves checks the cooling process of evaporation and maintains bodily heat. All young and tender foliage tends thus to curl up to sleep when the weather is bad, or night is in the sky. Older and stiffer leaves go to sleep sitting up, as father does in his armchair.

The breathing of the tree is as necessary as the breathing of animals. All life consists of a continuous building up and tearing down of cells. The material for building new cells is made of food taken in and elaborated—made over—by intricate chemical processes. The oxygen in the air is one of the chemical ingredients both in destroying and building the cells of animals and trees. The leaves are the lungs, which inhale carbon dioxide and exhale pure oxygen.

The wood of the tree and the bark are not alive. The living part is the lining between the wood and the bark, called the cambium, and the leaves, which are an extension of the cambium. Raw material drawn up through the roots flows to the leaves. The air strikes it. Light and heat come through the transparent upper skin of the leaf. Then one of nature's mysterious laboratory processes recombines the elements of the crude material and produces cell food, largely starch in solution, which trickles down through the inner bark, and rebuilds the constantly disintegrating cells.

So a tree eats and breathes and grows. A full-grown tree does not become any higher, but it lays on each year a new thickness of woody tissue and one of bark. The outer bark wears off as the cuticle scales from an animal.

Theoretically, a tree might live forever, and so, theoretically, might an animal go on living, for there seems to be no reason why cells should cease to build. Our manner of wearing out is not like that of a machine. But men and trees alike are subjected to decay and disease and accident. Although some trees live to be thousands of years old, every tree accumulates infirmities with years. If the soil is dry beneath it, it starves to death. Insects eat its foliage. Plant-lice suck its juices. Beetles tunnel under the bark. Winds break off the branches and fungus spores attack the wounds. Decay then hollows the shell until a strong wind snaps off the old fellow, and we see the diseased and porous stump.

Sailors Fond of Sweets.

Sailors are very fond of sweet things, and to one who knows little about them it is surprising to learn the quantity of candy they consume. In the ship's store are kept buckets of this article, which is one of the chief commodities in exchange for which a sailor parts with his pocket money. On large ships, several thousand pounds of candy are frequently consumed on a cruise.—From "How Uncle Sam Feeds His Sailors," by Mrs. George M. Stackhouse, in Gunton's Magazine.

MONTANA'S BISON HERD.

Considerable Success Has Been Achieved in Building It Up from Small Beginnings.

The University of Montana, Missoula maintains a biological station near Flathead lake, in the northwestern part of the state. Prof. Morton J. Elrod, director of the station, describes in "A Biological Reconnoissance," published last year by the university, the herd of 220 buffaloes on the Flathead Indian reservation. The herd, derived from 36 animals purchased in 1884 by Charles Allard and Michael Pablo, has in 20 years increased to more than 350, or ten times the original number. Many of the animals have been sold to show enterprises and to eastern cities for parks and zoological gardens. The conditions here are more favorable for buffalo than in Yellowstone park. The animals are constantly attended by a herder, and therefore are not afraid of man, while the Yellowstone park herd is rarely seen.

The park herd also ranges at a high altitude, over 7,000 feet, where snows are deep and winters are long and severe; but the Flathead herd ranges at an altitude below 3,000 feet, where deep snows do not occur, and hay or grain may be taken to the animals in a few hours. Their range does not exceed 70 to 100 square miles, and the animals might be maintained on a much smaller range. The cows do not bear calves until they are four or five years old, and about half of them produce every year. The fertility of the herd is not decreasing. The herder keeps note of the increase, looks after the calves, and, in fact, the animals are much more carefully attended than the range cattle among which they graze.

Prof. Elrod is of the opinion that the success of this private enterprise should stimulate congress to increase its efforts to save the buffalo from extinction. An appropriation of $8,000 would buy as large a herd as Allard and Pablo purchased in the beginning. With the same care the herd should increase to between 400 and 500 in 20 years. If a tract of land containing from 50 to 100 square miles were set apart for a buffalo range, with an appropriation at the start of $15,000 and an annual appropriation of $2,000 there would be no difficulty in developing a herd that would be a credit to the nation. The care of the herd should be placed under the jurisdiction of the biological survey of the department of agriculture. It is hardly to be expected that the animals will thrive in Yellowstone park, where the winters are long and severe, the summers short, and protection is afforded to wild animals which prey upon the calves.—Bulletin of the American Geographical Society.

THE BEST FED SAILORS.

Uncle Sam's Jackies Have the Best Food to Be Found in the Market.

The navy ration is of course provided by law, and the daily diet of the enlisted man must conform in some degree, to this prescribed regime; but infinite is the variety, and ample is the dietary resim of Jack the Sailor, writes Mrs. George M. Stackhouse, in Gunton's Magazine. As compared with the daily bill of fare of the working man on shore, the odds are greatly in favor of the sailor. Should he be inclined to grumble at his daily fare, it must be from caprice of appetite; for what laboring man enjoys better and more wholesome food? His food must be well cooked, for no bad cooks are allowed in the navy. Where a cook is incompetent, he is reported, for Jack Tar's stomach must be kept in a healthy condition, if our ships are to be manned by a sturdy lot of sailors. His food must be of the best quality, for it is no secret that Uncle Sam demands the best article in the market, and gets it.

QUESTIONS FOR REPUBLICANS.

Applicable Alike to Ohio and Other Places Where the Spellbinders Are at Work.

Our civil service reform administration is about to take the war path in Ohio and big chief Shaw is preparing his feather headgear and coloring up his lineaments to strike terror into the hearts of the Ohio democrats. The stress to which Senator Hanna and his cohorts are put must be extraordinary, for the republican state committee has engaged, it is said, 1,800 spellbinders to withstand the onslaught of the democrats, and yet there seems to be but two champions of democracy to meet them on the oratorical field. It is like David with his sling, and his combat with the brass protected Goliah, and the result may be as disastrous to the stronger side. It will be if right and justice prevail.

There is much questioning of the candidates and speakers at the meetings in Ohio. Many of the voters are striving to arrive at a just conclusion of the contention of the two parties in this strenuous campaign. As the republicans are endeavoring to confine the issues to national affairs, and as President Roosevelt's secretary of the treasury will doubtless confine his remarks to the great affairs of state, of finance and taxation, perhaps some democrat or independent republican may wish to question Mr. Shaw, or, as the New York World suggests:

"If Mr. Shaw is short of texts for his speeches, or if he really desires to enlighten the voters upon the subjects of most vital interest to them, he might be respectfully invited to answer these questions:

"Would it not be better, as well as more equitable, to leave the money not required for the expenses of the government in the pockets of the people who earn it, rather than to deposit it in favored banks without interest?

"Why should not congress at the coming session repeal or reduce the duties on steel and other trust-made products that are manufactured cheaper here than they can be abroad, and are actually sold in foreign markets at prices lower than to our own consumers?

"When will the republican party repeal or reduce duties that are no longer needed for either revenue or protection, but that, in the language of the Iowa republicans, 'shelter monopoly?' Does the secretary think the day after never a satisfactory date? Or is it his opinion that the time and the character of tariff revision should be fixed by the monopolies that benefit by the duties?"

To answer these questions in a candid manner, without the quibbling and shuffling that the secretary has used on other occasions will open the eyes of thousands of voters to the iniquities of the republican system of finance and taxation that are robbing the masses to enrich the few. It may be unpleasant for the secretary of the treasury to own up that he has strained the law to the breaking point, to help his friends, the Wall street and other gamblers, tide over their difficulties and to try to prevent the stock gamblers from suffering a greater reverse than has already overtaken them, but there is only one answer to the question, if honestly given.

Secretary Shaw may answer another of the questions by saying that the sale of trust products to foreigners at a lower rate than to our own people keeps the mills running and gives employment to workingmen that would otherwise be idle. But what satisfactory answer can he give to the voters that are taxed by the tariff and the trusts with high prices while the untaxed foreigners get the advantage. If there are any favors to be shown, should not our own people be the recipients. Secretary Shaw will also have to explain to the workingmen how it is that during the past month a number of Ohio furnaces and other factories have shut down or are running on short time. The Iron Age for October 8, gives a list of a large number of iron mills that have shut down. Amongst them there are in Ohio: The Allentown Rolling mill, both of its furnaces; the furnace of the Allentown Iron works, and two furnaces controlled by the Empire Iron and Steel company and the Macunnie furnace has also ceased work. Other shut downs have been reported during the present month, amongst them the large furnace controlled by the American Steel company at Columbus, employing over 1,000 men. The Hocking Valley miners also are only employed one-third of their time. How can Secretary Shaw answer these men and the others thrown out of employment when the protective tariff, that the secretary so ardently believes in, does not protect them, and the boasted high wages that they have no chance to earn cannot pay the vastly increased cost of living which the republican system entails?

The question that the republican spellbinders will say no to with a shout and a will, if it is not time to turn the rascals out? must be answered by the voters.

——The protected billion-dollar steel trust taxes the average family $8 a year. You pay your share. It figures in your bills for rent, fuel, groceries and hardware.

——President Roosevelt is said to be shocked at the extent of the postal scandal, and especially at the proof of the truth of the Tulloch charges, which Postmaster General Payne and ex-Postmaster General Smith called "hot air." The country shares his feeling to such an extent that a sweeping and drastic investigation is likely to be demended at the hands of congress.—Chicago Chronicle.

LEGISLATION ON CURRENCY.

Republicans Fear to Push It Before the Election—Helping the Banks.

The Aldrich bill, backed by the Rockefellers, will perhaps not be pushed to a vote in the coming congress. The republican leaders know that such legislation is unpopular and will postpone the bill until after the national election. The same course will also be followed with the asset currency Fowler bill, and for the same reason. If the democrats carry the next national election, those two bills will never more be heard of, for both are entirely at variance with democratic ideas of finance.

The Aldrich bill proposes to loan to the banks the surplus money in the treasury at a low rate of interest, which the banks will loan to the people at a high rate of interest. The most obnoxious result of the passage of such a measure would be that the banks would constantly be the champions of high taxation. The more taxes collected from the people, the larger the surplus and the greater amount of cheap money the banks would get.

The democrats would reverse the proposition by reducing taxes, the tariff, and only collect enough taxes to run the government honestly administered. The national banks now have over $165,000,000 of the surplus and the administration is continually increasing the amount. The banks are crying for more, as well they may, for it costs them nothing and there is great doubt if they will ever repay what they now have. The reason for this is simple one, for banks are unlike individuals, it is almost impossible to make them pay their debts to the government if they don't want to. If the present secretary of the treasury or any future secretary should demand from these favored banks the money that has been deposited with them, they would declare that to repay it would bring on a panic. The banks have loaned this vast sum to the stock brokers and others with railroad and trust stock as collateral and it would require the calling of these loans—that is, the payment by the stock brokers and others—and this they could not do unless they should be able to borrow a similar amount elsewhere. If these borrowers of the banks could not pay when called on, the collateral would be sold and forced sales of this character are pretty sure to reduce the market price of the stock sold and thus inaugurate a panic. There is another provision in the Aldrich bill that the banks are anxious to accomplish, The law now requires that United States bonds shall be deposited with the United States treasury for these loans and the bill provides that other security may be taken in place of the bonds. Secretary Shaw has disregarded the law and in making recent loans to the banks has been taken other security. The intention of the law was that all loans—deposits—should be secured by United States bonds, so that no loss could ever occur. It is unlikely that United States bonds will go below par, but railroad and other bonds and stocks might depreciate far below the 75 per cent. of their face value that is the requirement at present.

The asset currency bill is hardly likely to be pushed at the coming congress, but its principal provision is to allow the banks to issue their notes without any security, other than the general assets of the banks, to an amount equal to their capital stock. Such an inflation of the currency of the country would result in keeping up prices and might lead to a serious loss to the government if many banks should fail, in a prolonged panic.

It is possible that some provision for an elastic currency may be devised that will be safe to the people and profitable to the banks, but the Fowler bill is not to be regarded.

The democrats will oppose any bill that favors the banks at the expense of the people and it will be well for voters to question their representatives on their position on this important question.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——The people and not the trusts should rule.

——Tariff food is great for trusts, but how do you like trust prices and high cost of living?

——"Wait until after the presidential election,"—the trusts don't want the tariff reformed yet.

——The most prosperous decade in our history was from 1850 to 1860. Cause—low tariff duties.

——"Stand pat;" don't disturb the trusts! Let them alone while they work their tariff film-flam game.

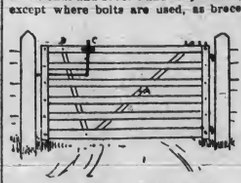
——"We oppose militarism. It means conquest abroad and intimidation and oppression at home."—Democratic platform, 1900.

——"Let well enough alone," says Senator Hanna, who declines to ask the trusts to take their hands out of your pockets.

——The net profits of the protected steel trust last year were $133,000,000, or $5 per family. Every good American points with pride to this trust.

——"Stand pat" means many un-American things, but the republican party is no longer American—it is the Hannaized party of money, monopolies, trusts, subsidies and defiance of the constitution. It is for these things the people are advised to "stand pat."—Atlanta Constitution.

——"We favor the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people and direct legislation wherever practicable."—Democratic platform, 1900.



——Sixty thousand employes of the anthracite coal companies are now working little more than half time in order to restrict the output and keep up prices. It is estimated that by November 1 the normal production will have been restricted 1,300,000 tons. The men will lose $1,000,000 in wages and the public will pay top-notch prices for coal. This reminds us that the consumer is still "it."—Detroit Free Press.

AN INGENIOUS GATE.

It Is the Invention of a Missouri Man Who Considers It the Best Thing Ever Devised.

My gate is made of one by four boards for ends and braces a and b, and one by six for the body of the gate. The ends, one by four, and braces, are double, or one on either side of body boards, and are put together with a three-eighths bolt at each corner, and at each end of brace b, as shown by small circle. A 20 spike is driven through the center of the ends and brace b and body boards, except where bolts are used, as brace a, shown by heavy dots. It has a three-eighths bolt through lower end and bottom board, then bolt through brace and bottom board in center and also one in upper end above top board.

The gate is then hung in position. By lifting the front end of gate, brace a will be raised a couple of feet or so from ground. Now on top of top board of gate, set in several iron pins at the top of bolt of brace a and hook bolt of brace a over whichever pin will make gate swing clear of ground.

If post ever gives and lets gate sag, lift on front of gate and hook brace a up a pin or so till clear of ground again. If a big snow comes along, hook the gate up till it swings almost clear. If you want hogs or sheep or small calves to pass through and restrain larger stock, just hook your gate up in front till high enough to allow the animals to pass, then let it down again, when not needed in that way. The gate is kept closed by a common swing latch, as shown. Try it, brother farmers, and I think you will say it is the best gate you ever used.—J. W. Stevens, in Farm and Home.

OLD POLITICAL ISSUE.

Nation's Legislative History Proves That Government Can Assist in Road Building.

In the early days of our national history, whether the general government should take a hand in making internal improvements became one of the great political issues. The matter was fought out in congress and in political campaigns, and finally settled in the affirmative. Among the improvements discussed, the building of roads was probably the most important. Plans were made for connecting the different parts of the country by national highways. The national pike was built from Cumberland, Md., to the Ohio river, and then on westward. The plan was to build on to St. Louis, but before that point was reached the building of steam railroads had begun, and the people lost interest in the road question.

In these days when river and harbor bills are looked upon as a matter of course, and national aid to road improvement is considered a novel proposition, it is interesting to recall that the question of road building by the nation was a great and burning issue long before river and harbor bills were ever heard of. It is also worth noting that presidents were vetoing river and harbor bills as unconstitutional long after national aid to road improvement had become a settled policy.

It does not seem probable that the question of constitutionality will ever be seriously raised against such legislation as that proposed in the Brownlow bill for national aid in the building of roads. It can be defended as strongly as river and harbor legislation under those clauses of the constitution which authorize the federal government "to promote the general welfare," and to "regulate commerce between the states." But in addition to these, it finds its strongest warrant in the authority conferred upon congress "to establish post-roads," a provision that is growing in practical importance every year with the extension of the rural free delivery system.

FALL ORCHARD NOTES.

Put up fruit for sale in neat, attractive packages, if top prices are wanted.

Mow all weeds in orchard and berry patch, if you can't take time to pull by hand. If dry, burn.

Well kept grapes ought to fetch a good price; fresh fruit, with exception of apples, is in limited supply.

Cut out all old wood in raspberry and blackberry patches before winter sets in. Cut back the new growth so it will ripen well and not freeze back.

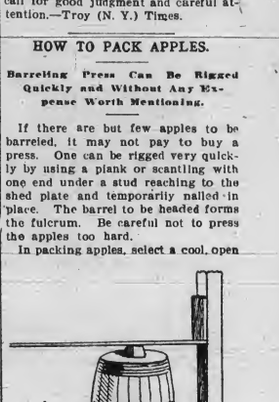
Oyster shell bark louse may now be destroyed on fruit trees by spraying with whitewash. Two applications are necessary to insure all limbs being covered. San Jose scale is too tough to be affected by this treatment.—Farm and Home.

Dry the Sweet Potatoes.

Sweet potatoes should be exposed to the sun for a few hours at least after they are dug. It is best to have them attached to the vine until cured out, which may be done by letting them remain in the open air for a few days, after being dug if weather is fair, or by piling them on a board floor under cover to the depth of not over a foot.

RAISE ONLY THE BEST.

In the Production of Fruits Success Depends on Quality Rather Than Quantity.



The value of a crop of fruit depends more upon its quality than quantity. No matter how large the general fruit crop may be, or how heavily the markets may be glutted, good fruit will always sell readily and at fair prices. Nor can there be a surplus grown. If not sold immediately the crops may be dried, evaporated or canned, for there will arrive a time when such will be in demand. Too much fruit has not yet been produced during any season. When the blackberry was made a cultivated crop it was predicted that, as the fence corners and abandoned locations had always afforded a supply, the introduction of large quantities of the cultivated kinds would render prices too low to realize profits; but as the crops were increased the berries were improved, and a demand was created that grew with the supply, the consequence being that although carloads are shipped to our large cities during the fruit season, the prices have been higher than at any other previous time, when the crop grew wild. The same rule applies to other fruit crops. As the supply increases the fruit growers endeavor to advance prices by improving the size and quality of the fruit. There are many ways open for preserving the crops. Such crops as apples, pears, peaches, plums and cherries may be evaporated and stored, while cider, wine and vinegar are also products, to say nothing of the various methods of canning and preserving the different kinds of fruit. In venturing upon fruit growing the varieties selected should be the best adapted to the climate in which they are to be grown, proficiency, hardiness and quality being the chief considerations. And it must not be overlooked that some varieties require special cultivation, while the character of the soil is also an important factor. In marketing fruit something depends upon the mode of shipment, while the manner of harvesting and the proper time for so doing largely affects the keeping qualities. Like every other pursuit, labor is necessary. Preventing insect depredations and pruning at the right moment call for good judgment and careful attention.—Troy (N. Y.) Times.

HOW TO PACK APPLES.

Barreling Press Can Be Rigged Quickly and Without Any Expense Worth Mentioning.

If there are but few apples to be barreled, it may not pay to buy a press. One can be rigged very quickly by using a plank or scantling with one end under a stud reaching to the shed plate and temporarily nailed in place. The barrel to be headed forms the fulcrum. Be careful not to press the apples too hard.

In packing apples, select a cool, open shed or the shade of a tree. Apples should be cooled as much as possible before putting them into barrels. If stored hot they are very liable to decay before the mass becomes cooled through. Always pick with the stems on. Avoid bruises, and do not handle more than necessary; the natural bloom should be left on. Two layers of fruit should be placed in the bottom, with stems down and as close together as possible. These will form the facing, for this end will be the top when opened. Fill in with the same grade, shake often, and when near the top put in two more layers with stems up, letting the last layer stand a full inch above the chime of barrel. Now put on lid and press slowly into place, shaking the barrel in the meantime.—Farm Journal.

Birds as Tree Planters.

An old-time Arizona woodchopper says the blue jays have planted thousands of the trees now growing all over Arizona. He says these birds have a habit of burying small seeds in the ground with their beaks, and that they frequent pinon trees and bury large numbers of the small pine nuts in the ground, many of which sprout and grow. He was walking through the pines with a man from the east a short time ago when one of these birds flew from a tree to the ground, stuck his bill into the earth and quickly flew away. When told what had happened the eastern man was skeptical; but the two went to the spot, and, with a knife blade, dug out a sound pine nut from a depth of about an inch and a half. Thus it will be seen that nature has her own plan for forest perpetuation.—Indianapolis News.

How to Preserve Seed.

Peas and beans intended for seed should be treated with bisulphide of carbon before they are stored. Put them into a tight box or vessel. Saturate a bunch of cotton thoroughly, place it on top of seeds put on lid and the work is done, provided there are no open spaces. A gill is sufficient for a bushel.

It gives pigs an unthrifty habit to keep them as store animals without continued improvement. Two-thirds of the whole ration is used to meet the demands of the system.

Jesus and the Leper

Incident Which Reveals the Sinner's Need and Jesus' Power to Save

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Oct. 25, 1903.
Text:—"And He put forth His hand and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean. And immediately the leprosy departed from him."—Luke 5:13.

THE incident from which our text is taken is one of the few which is found in all three of the synoptic Gospels. It reveals the depth of human need and the fullness of the mercy and power of God to meet that need. It was during Jesus' first Galilean ministry, and when His fame as a healer had spread even to the secluded retreats where the lepers were forced to abide in solitary misery, that one day while Jesus was in a "certain city, behold, a man full of leprosy" came and threw himself at the feet of Jesus and besought Him for cleansing from his loathsome disease. He was "full of leprosy" and must have been a fearful sight. The stringent Jewish law required that the leper live outside the towns and villages separated from his fellow-men, and that he should cry: "Unclean, unclean," so that the wayside traveler might be warned and might keep at a safe distance to prevent defilement and avoid contagion. But this leper "seeing Jesus" seemingly forgot the restrictions which bound him as a leper and, rushing past the disciples and those surrounding Jesus, threw himself at His feet. Doubtless all but Jesus were disconcerted and amazed. No doubt but that the crowds and even the disciples themselves hastily withdrew to a safe distance and gave the leper the full command of Jesus' presence. As they watch those two—the one bowed with his face to the ground and pleading for help, the other standing in calm confidence with compassionate face beaming upon the piteous object before Him (for Mark tells us that Jesus was moved with compassion), they see something which startles them even more than the coming of the leper had done. Jesus "put forth His hand and touched him." This under the Jewish law meant defilement. It was abhorrent to the Jews, but their astonishment and even indignation are forgotten in the transformation which takes place before their eyes. The ghastly white blotches upon the leper's hands and face take on the clean rosy hue of healthy flesh. The cavities in the face, eaten out by the progress of the disease, are filled out with new flesh and bone. The fingers, which at the joints were decayed and fallen away, were made strong and complete under the cleansing, transforming power of God. And as the leper feels the transformation which has been wrought in his body, he raises his voice in wild exultation of praise to God. But what a voice! The sharp, thin, distressing tones of the leper have given place to the full, deep, strong voice of restored health and manhood. What a scene that was! How dramatic! How glorious!

BUT the glory of that scene is exceeded by the glory which is revealed when the sinner is cleansed and saved, for the leprosy of sin is more terrible, more deadly, and more universal. The leprosy of the body can work the destruction of the physical man, but the leprosy of sin in the soul is able to compass the ruin of the soul and cast it into hell. Physical leprosy is operative only during time, but leprosy of the soul continues through eternity. The creative power of God could root out the disease of leprosy and restore the body to its normal condition and functions, but it took a Christ on the cross, it took His precious blood shed for the sins of the world, to cleanse from the leprosy of sin. And this incident which occurred nearly nineteen hundred years ago has its vital message for the world to-day. It is suggestive of the condition and need of the people of the world and it reveals Jesus' attitude towards the sinner, His power to cleanse and save, and His tender, quick response to the appeal for mercy and help. And first of all let us consider the leper and what his condition involved.

HE was "full of leprosy," so says the physician-evangelist Luke. Terrible, you say, and so it was, but sin is more terrible in its effects and more widespread. This man was probably in the last stages of the disease. From his head to his feet there were evidences of the terrible ravages which leprosy had made upon him. The description which Gen. Lew Wallace gives in Ben Hur of the lepers of Jesus' day gives some idea of the probable condition of this man who was "full of leprosy." But when the disease started it was only a small blotch upon his body. He could cover it up. He could hide it from the eyes of others. But notwithstanding how small and insignificant the indications of the disease at the start it had within it the possibilities of the condition which we see realized in the man who was "full of leprosy." It was only a question of time when the one with the leprous spot would become the one "full of leprosy," forced to hide his hideous face behind the cloth mantle, and cry "unclean, unclean." And this is the way it is with the leprosy of sin. It is so little, so small, so innocent-looking at the start, one would scarcely realize the connection between it and the finished product of sin, but it is there. Oh, the exceeding sinfulness of sin, whether it is the big sin or the little sin, the sin clothed in the garments of respectability, or the sin which reeks with the foulness of lust and passionate desire. Sin is sin in God's sight, and "when it is finished, it bringeth forth death," for "the wages of sin is death."

THIS man needed not to be told that he was a leper. He knew it. But not all are willing to admit that they are sinners, notwithstanding that God says: "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." "There is none that doeth good, no not one." And "if we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us." All, then, are sin lepers.

And if sin lepers we need cleansing and healing as much as did the leper referred to in our text. The latter realized that no human help could save him, but it is not so easy to lead the sinner to see that there is no hope for him save in the Great Physician, Jesus Christ. He may be willing to admit that man is a sinner, but he will not be so ready to concede the point that there is no hope for him in himself. But as surely as no leper ever healed himself of the terrible disease, so surely has no soul ever been freed from the leprosy of sin by its own efforts or other human aid. But Jesus could cure the leper, and he can cure the sin leper. "He is able to save unto the uttermost." The most desperate case of leprosy had to yield to His Divine power, and the worst case of sin leprosy can be cured by the same marvelous touch. No leper need have gone without healing in Palestine during Jesus' ministry, and no sinner need go without cleansing and salvation to-day. Jesus' power was not exhausted when this poor man was restored to health and home and friends, and Jesus is as mighty to save to-day from the consequences and power of sin as He was when He met the chiefest of sinners on the road to Damascus and delivered him from the power of the devil which was driving him through the land like a mad man.

ANOTHER thing about this man's leprosy: It separated him from everything in this life worth having—home, friends, loved ones, and active useful share in life's activities. And turning to the sin leper we find that his sin shuts him away from God. Sin, like a thick cloud, rises between the soul and its Creator, and shuts out the brightness of eternal hope; it shuts out the joy of real abiding happiness; it blinds the soul to that real success in life which makes God its center and its ultimate aim. Sin separates from God. The sense of that separation may not be present in the soul in this life, but what that separation will mean throughout eternity, only eternity will reveal. The rich man in hell, of whom Jesus gives us a glimpse in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, realized what separation from God meant as the torments of the damned laid hold upon his soul, but while he sat within his sumptuous palace and Lazarus lay at his gate, he was utterly unconscious of that separation and indifferent as to its consequences. But the days of self-ease and gratification were soon ended, and his soul was at last forced to realize what separation from God meant. And the sinner, like the foul leper, is an outcast. His soul is separated from all its highest and best possibilities. It is feeding on the husks of the world when God made it with a capacity for things spiritual, things eternal and Heavenly. Jesus was glad to heal the leper and restore him to his home, his family and his friends, and it gives Him unspeakable joy to cleanse the sinner and restore him to right relations with God and the world, for that is what He came into the world to do.

IT WAS not long-distance or absent treatment which Jesus gave to this man. "He put forth His hand and touched him." Ah, what a picture we have here of our Saviour! The foulest leper upon appeal to Him could feel the touch of His gracious, loving hand, and the vilest sinner may cry with the publican in the Temple: "God, be merciful to me, a sinner!" and the arms of the Saviour are at once thrown around the penitent, and the blood of Jesus cleanses from all guilt. "He put forth His hand and touched him." F. B. Meyer says: "No one else would have dared to do as much. To touch that flesh, according to the Levitical code, would induce uncleanness. But Jesus shrank not. On the one hand, He knew that the ceremonial restrictions were abolished in Himself; on the other, He desired to teach that sin cannot defile the Divine holiness of the Saviour. Whatever he the sories of sin that are breatbed into His ear; whatever the bruises and putrefying sores which are opened to His touch; whatever the sights and scenes with which He has to cope—none of these can leave a taint of evil in His sinless heart. It would be as impossible for sin to soil Christ as for a plague to contaminate flame. And He will heal tbee. Dare to claim it!"

TWO things are noteworthy in connection with Jesus' touching and healing of this leper. He came and threw himself at Jesus' feet, and besought Him for the healing which he knew Jesus was able to bestow. If this leper had remained in his lazaretto or retreat, if he bad not made bold to violate the Levitical restrictions, be would not have felt the touch of Jesus' hand. And the sinner cannot feel the touch of Jesus' nail-pierced hands while he stays in the haunts where sin has drawn him. He must will to see Jesus, and, leaving the desires of his own sinful beart, he must come and find Jesus. And how Jesus draws the sinner who is sick of sin and willing to turn from it! What compassion Jesus has upon the one who realizes bis sinful condition; how ready He is to receive and heal the moral outcast, the wreck from sin, the man full of sin! This is strikingly and beautifully brought out in the incident before us, when it is remembered that the leper came with such confidence and boldness to Jesus, but dared not approach a Jewish rabbi, the religious teacher and leader of his day. It was the latter who pronounced him a leper; it was the rabbi who banished him heartlessly to the deserted places outside of the town, and then forgot all about him. But when Jesus, Rabbi, Master, came He drew the lepers, the poor and weak and halt and blind to Him. And it is the same loving, compassionate Jesus who is drawing all sinners unto Him, as His disciples hold Him up to the world and cry:

"There is life for a look at the Crucified One,
There is life at this moment for thee;
Then look! sinner look! unto Him and be saved,
Unto Him who was nailed to the tree."

BUT the leper not only came where Jesus was, but he threw himself upon his face at His feet and poured his poor, afflicted soul out in earnest prayer. A good many people never obtain salvation because they are too proud to kneel. They want salvation, but they want to get it in what they call a dignified way. But the soul that wants deliverance from the consequences and power of sin must want it bad enough to get right down in the dust of humiliation and self-surrender in order to get it. Mr. Moody used to tell the story of a boy who was used to Methodist ways and who, after a revival meeting, went home to his mother and said: "Mother, John So-and-so is under conviction and seeking peace, but he will not find it to-night, mother." "Why, William?" said she. "Because he is only down on one knee, mother, and he will never get peace until he gets down on both knees." And until conviction of sin brings us down on both knees before the Saviour, until we are prostrated in the dust of humiliation, we cannot obtain from Jesus pardon and salvation. But hear the prayer of the poor leper: "Lord, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean." There was faith, there was perfect submission. No doubt as to Jesus' power. Willingness to rest his case in His hands and receive from Him what was best. And the sinner who is not willing to place himself unreservedly in the hands of Jesus does not know what real faith and submission are. Perhaps there was some doubt as to what Jesus might do in the case of the leper, but in the case of the sinner there is no doubt, for Jesus came into the world to save sinners. He is able and willing this moment to save.

BUT HOW long will He keep the sinner waiting? Ah, how long did Jesus keep the poor, wretched leper in the dust at His feet? As quickly as that gracious hand could he raised and stretched forth and laid upon that foul leper, that quickly was it done. And as the hand touched, the voice spake: "I will; be thou clean." And immediately the leprosy departed from him. Even as the Gospel invitation is in the present, so is the promise of forgiveness and salvation. God never deals in futures with the sinner. God never says to the sinner: "To-morrow is the day of salvation." And He never says to the sinner when he comes: "To-morrow I will consider your case, and grant your prayer." We cannot conceive of the Lord doing that way. But God calls to the sinner to-day, and to-day Jesus stands ready with cleansing touch and forgiving word to deliver the sinner. What if the leper had waited to present his case to Jesus? Suppose he had reasoned that to-morrow he would be better prepared to meet Him? Perhaps Jesus never passed that way again, and if he had missed his opportunity that day it would have been gone forever. And so it is with the sinner. There is danger in delay.

The story is told of a certain woman who had a case of litigation which she delayed putting in the hands of her lawyer. He, of all others, was able to handle her case successfully. His abilities and his knowledge of her case made it almost necessary that he act for her. But she kept putting the matter off, until at last one day, when delay was no longer possible, she sought this lawyer out, and asked him to become her attorney. "Madam," he said, "it is too late. I cannot now be your advocate and plead your case. You have put it off too long. I am now a judge." Some day Jesus, who stands waiting to receive the sinner and is ready to forgive and save, will become Judge and then it will be too late to submit the case into His hands, but as Judge He will be forced to condemn us for having neglected the day of salvation. Jesus is waiting to save, but He will not keep the sinner waiting. As soon as the cry goes up to Him: "Lord, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean," His hand is outstretched to save, and His voice speaks the words: "I will; be thou clean." And immediately the redemptive work is done and the sinner is sent away, not with the cry, "unclean, unclean," but with the song of praise in his mouth because of the wonderful Saviour and salvation received. Oh, that the world might turn from its sin and give Jesus the opportunity of touching the leprous spots and healing them! He is able! He is willing! Oh, the sad tragedy of the ages that the world should cling to its sin and turn from the One Who is mighty to save!

A Woman Saved From Life-Long Misery and Made Happy and Useful.

A woman confined to the house for several years with a chronic female derangement had finally given up hope of being cured.

She had tried physician after physician, and remedy after remedy, without any permanent improvement.

Her treatment had cost her husband who was a poor man, hundreds of dollars. They had been obliged to deny themselves many comforts of life in order to get money enough to pay the physicians.

The woman had become weak, nervous and wretched, and scarcely able to keep out of her bed. Her children were growing up neglected and ragged, because of the want of a mother's care. Her husband was becoming discouraged and broken down with overwork.

Picking up the paper one day she happened to read an item which contained the news that Dr. Hartman would treat such cases free of charge by letter. She immediately wrote the doctor describing her case, and giving him all her symptoms.

She soon received a letter telling her exactly what to do, and what medicines and appliances to get. She began the treatment (the principal remedy being Peruna) at once, and in a few weeks she was well and strong again, able to do her own work.

This offer of free home treatment to women is still open to all who may need the services of this eminent physician. All letters applying for treatment will be promptly answered, and be held strictly confidential.

Miss Annie Hoban, Past Pocahontas of Tamanse Council of Red Men (Women's Branch), writes from 872 Eighth Ave., New York:

"Three months ago I was troubled with backache and a troublesome heaviness about the stomach. Sleep brought me no rest for it was a restless sleep. The doctor said my nervous system was out of order, but his prescriptions didn't seem to relieve me. I was told that Peruna was good for building up the nervous system. After using it for two months I know now that it is. I want to say that it made a new woman of me. The torturing symptoms have all disappeared and I feel myself again. Peruna did me more good than all the other medicines I have taken."

Miss Mamie Powell, Lake Charles, Louisiana, writes:

"I sincerely believe that Peruna is woman's best friend, for it has certainly been that to me. I had had headaches, backaches and other aches every month for a long time, but shortly after I began taking Peruna this was a thing of the past, and I have good reason to be grateful. I take a bottle every spring and fall now, and that keeps my health perfect, and I certainly am more robust now than I have been before and am weighing more. I do not think any one will be disappointed in the results obtained from the use of Peruna."

One day when a friend was visiting me she told me of Peruna and what it had done for her when she suffered with irregular menstruation. My husband procured a bottle the same evening and I began to take it daily according to directions. Before the first bottle was used I was entirely well, and you certainly have one grateful woman's blessing. I have also advised my friends to use it." MRS. HATTIE LA FOUNTAIN.

"I have never known of any patent medicine which did what it professed to do except Peruna. This remedy does much more than it claims, and while I have never advocated any medicine I feel that it is but justice to speak a good word for it because I have found it to be such a rare exception.

"I have known several women who were little better than physical wrecks, mothers who dragged out a miserable, painful existence, but were made well and strong through the use of Peruna. I have known of cases of chronic catarrh which were cured in a short time, when a dozen different remedies had been experimented with and without good results. I use it myself when I feel nervous and worn out, and I have always found that the results were most satisfactory." JULIA M. BROWN.

WELFARE OF STATE

Depends on Adoption of Constitutional Amendment.

A CYNTHIANA EDITOR'S OPINION

Will in No Way Affect Taxes of People in the Country, Except the More Cities and Towns Build Up and Prosper, the Lower Taxes on the Whole People Will Become.

(Editorial from Cynthiana Democrat, Oct. 8, 1903.)

"And the General Assembly may, by general laws only, authorize cities or towns of any class to provide for taxation for municipal purposes, on personal property, tangible and intangible, based on income, licenses, or franchises, in lieu of an ad valorem tax thereon; provided, cities of the first class shall not be authorized to omit the imposition of an ad valorem tax on such property of any steam railroad, street railway, ferry, bridge, gas, water, heating, telephone, telegraph, electric light, or electric power company."

There is the constitutional amendment upon which the voters are asked to pass judgment at the November election, and upon the adoption of which the welfare, the advancement and the continued prosperity of Kentucky are believed to depend.

The change is easily understood. Instead of raising revenue to pay the expenses of city and town government—the salaries of the mayor, police, firemen, the maintenance of the streets, public improvements, etc.—by assessing personal property as under the present laws, the egislature may authorize cities and towns to adopt a license system. All property, real and personal, in cities and towns will continue to pay state and county taxes as usual. No change whatever will be made in this respect, so that people who live in the country may vote for the amendment under the full assurance that it will in no way affect their taxes; except the more the cities and towns build up and prosper, the lower the taxes on the whole people will become.

It is certainly asking a small favor that voters cast their ballots for this amendment at the November election. There is little doubt of its passage, if the people do not forget or neglect to vote on the question. There is no politics in it.

AMENDMENT EXPLAINED.

P. N. Clarke Says Great Advantages Are to Be Derived From its Adoption.

At a meeting of the Louisville Credit Men's Association a few nights ago Mr. Peyton N. Clarke, Secretary of the State Committee, which is managing the campaign for the constitutional amendment, explained the advantages to be derived from the adoption of the amendment. He said:

"For years, under our former constitution, all cities and town had the privilege of home rule and the right to tax themselves for municipal purposes without interference from anyone. It was argued by some, however, that this was a power no town or city should have, and the wise makers of our new constitution said that it would never do—that all property should be taxed alike. So the revenue law was changed.

"But the result has proved the fallacy of the idea, and the effect has been exactly contrary to the design.

"Under our present law the grossest inequalities in assessments prevail and there is not a single advantage to compensate for the innovation. When every persons is his own assessor it is not strange that there should be great irregularities. The rich man easily escapes his fair share of taxation, as he covers up his stores of wealth, while the poor man with his all invested in a modest home has to pay more than his share, because all he has is in sight and cannot be hidden from the assessor.

"'The proposed amendment will remedy all this to a great extent. It simply authorizes the legislature by general act to permit all cities and towns to raise revenue for local purposes by licenses, franchises, etc., on personal property, instead of the present ad valorem system.

"'Its object is obvious. 'Under the new law our merchants, manufacturers and financial institutions will pay licenses and avoid the necessity of fictitious returns to the assessor. All personal property subject to taxation will pay its fair share of taxes, and by equalizing the burden it will sit lightly on all.

"Under the new law we can invite capital and industry with assurances of welcome, and our state will flourish as a green bay tree.

"The amendment is a step forward and will place us in the line of progressive states.

"We have had a dozen years of the ad valorem system of taxes, and they have been lean years to the industrial development of the state. Capital has shunned our shores. Our mineral and timber lands lie waste. Our interest rates are high and our people lack the spirit of enterprise.

"Let us have the amendment and we will find a different state of affairs, and Kentucky, with all her wealth of natural resources—her great rivers and network of railways—will blossom forth as the rose, and wealth will flow into our coffers, while health and happiness will be our inheritance."

Fine Farm For Sale.

I withdraw from sale my farm of 255 acres at Hebron at the price named in a recent notice. The farm is for sale at a bargain if sold soon, but not at that price. The conditions and circumstances and opportunities existing when that offer was made, do not exist now—hence the withdrawal. This is a magnificent farm, finely located and elegantly improved. The land and improvements are all in splendid condition. This plantation and its improvements were planned, constructed, developed and finished for a superb country home, for a country gentleman, and only a man of that character can appreciate it. The whole farm is as beautiful as a city park. It is for sale at a bargain if sold soon. If not sold soon it will be for rent to good and careful men.

"After my first baby was born I did not seem to regain my strength although the doctor gave me a tonic which he considered very superior, but instead of getting better I grew weaker every day. My husband insisted that I take Wine of Cardui for a week and see what it would do for me. I did take the medicine and was very grateful to find my strength and health slowly returning. In two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was able to take up my usual duties. I am very enthusiastic in its praise."

Wine of Cardui reinforces the organs of generation for the ordeal of pregnancy and childbirth. It prevents miscarriage. No woman who takes Wine of Cardui need fear the coming of her child. If Mrs. Unrath had taken Wine of Cardui before her baby came she would not have been weakened as she was. Her rapid recovery should commend this great remedy to every expectant mother. Wine of Cardui regulates the menstrual flow.

On last Saturday morning this town gave Governor Beckham an ovation of which he may well be proud. The depot grounds were crowded with people anxious to have a sight of him; and the cheers given him when the train showed up and he appeared on the platform of the rear car were those of the heartiest good will and encouragement. It was not certainly known that the train would stop until late Friday night, or the audience would have been as large again. As it was no one would have supposed that 300 or 400 people would put in an appearance so early in in the morning, but they were there and wildly enthusiastic for a time at the sight of their Chief Executive. He appeared somewhat worn out, but the people were satisfied. Ollie James made the closing speech and as the hills reechoed back his stentorian voice the people sent up a mighty shout for "Beckham and the whole ticket." Ollie James is a great favorite here and made many remarks on a former occasion that are quoted to this day.

The Best Remedy for Croup.

This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighborhood. One of the most terrible things in the world is to be awakened in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of the children. The croup remedies are almost as sure to be lost, in case of croup, as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old-fashioned remedy for croup, known as hive syrup and tolu, but some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better, and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw up the phlegm" quicker, and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as the croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

He was a champion jig dancer 40 years ago, and in those days his competitors came from far and near, but Williamson never failed to show them steps they had never heard of. It was suggested that an old time fiddlers' contest and an old time dance be had at Harvest Home ground next summer. "Gum" gave it as his opinion that it would be a drawing card.

IS THE BIBLE BEING NEGLECTED?

More Bibles in the World, But Too Little Bible Reading

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Nov. 1, 1903.

Text: "Search the Scriptures." . . . "They received the Word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so."—John 5:39 and Acts 17:11.

THE first part of our text consists of words spoken by Jesus in challenge and command to the Jews who were opposing themselves to the truth as fulfilled in Christ and revealed by Him in His teachings; and the remaining part of the text is the testimony borne in respect to the Berean Jews to whom Paul and Silas came with the message of salvation, after they had been so shamefully driven out of Thessalonica. Here we have precept and example—Jesus' command and a beautiful and striking obedience to the letter and spirit of that command. Jesus recognized the Scriptures as the authoritative word of God, and they were always His last source of appeal. He held up to the Jews who rejected His claims as the promised Messiah the very Scriptures which they recognized as the Word of God, and with which they were familiar, and challenged them to study the sacred writings again, for they "testify of Me." They had read the Scriptures and yet they had not learned the truth. The Thessalonian Jews had the same heart of unbelief. They read in blind bigotry, instead of openness of mind which characterized the Berean Jews. The latter "searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so." Here was neglect of the Scriptures on the one hand, and on the other a daily reading and studying of God's Word in search for the truth. The Thessalonians recognized the Scriptures as the Word of God. Generally speaking, they undoubtedly were familiar with them. They heard them read in the synagogue from week to week. They observed the externalities of the Jewish faith, as revealed in those Scriptures. But notwithstanding all this there was neglect of God's Word, and in this respect the Bereans were in striking contrast to them, for they did that which the Thessalonians refused to do, "searched the Scriptures daily."

IS there neglect of God's Word today? Are the Berean type of people sadly in the minority, and the Thessalonians vastly in the majority everywhere? How generally is Christ's command: "Search the Scriptures," being obeyed? and how often do we find it possible to say of individuals or communities or churches: "They received the Word with all readiness of mind and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so?" Is the Bible, the Word of God, being neglected? we ask. Certainly not in respect to the printing of the Bible and sending it broadcast over the earth. More Bibles and Testaments are being printed every year. Several million copies of the Bible and parts of the Bible are being issued every year by the different Bible societies and denominations. Already the Bible has been translated into over 400 different languages and dialects, and each year sees some new translation added to the long list. Millions of copies of the Bible and parts of the Bible are being sent each year from the United States to other lands. Surely it cannot be charged that in the publication and distribution of the Word of God the Bible is being neglected. In the purchase of Bibles it cannot be claimed that the Bible is neglected, for a newspaper man who visited the book department of all the large department stores of New York city was told that the Bible was the best selling book handled, not excepting the popular novels of the day. The sales were steady and from 30,000 to 40,000 copies of all styles of bindings were sold each year. And at Christmas time a special Bible department was necessary, requiring the constant attention of three or four clerks. Taking this as a guide to the general popularity of the Bible, it can be said that in the purchase of the Bible the sacred Book is not being neglected. And in discussion of the Bible it is not being neglected. The higher critics and the lower critics, too, for that matter, are not neglecting the Bible. It is the most talked of book in the world. Each year multiplies the myriad of books which treat of the Bible in some respect or other. And so it cannot be charged that the Bible is being neglected by the scholars of the day. And in the direction of archaeology there is no neglect of the Bible. Almost every year some new monument, or tablet, or parchment is being discovered which establishes more firmly the authenticity of the sacred writings, and throws light upon the countries and peoples and times with which its history and biography and literature had to do.

BUT the fact that the publishing houses and Bible societies, the book stores, the scholars and archaeologists of the day are not neglecting the Bible as a commercial commodity or as a subject of research and discussion does not prove that the Bible is not being neglected. If after the printing press and the publishing agent have done their part in placing the Bible in the hands of the individual, it remains practically a closed book, not even to be opened once a week on Sunday because the Sunday newspaper has usurped its place, is it not a neglected Book? ("Some people," Mr. Moody used to say, "have a very small Bible, for they only read the part they like and leave the rest alone," and it might be added that the great majority of people have no Bible at all because they do not read a single word or sentence out of its pages for weeks or months or years together. And I venture to say that if you were to make a house to house canvass in your community you would be surprised and shocked to find out how many homes are without a Bible or Testament. In the section of the city where I live, and which is peculiarly blessed with many churches, Sunday schools and missions, such a canvass was made during the past summer, and dozens of homes were found which did not possess a single page of the printed Word of God. But the weekday and Sunday newspaper, the magazines and journals came into those homes, though, while the Bible did not have even an honored place under a mantle of dust on the high shelf. And within a stone's throw of the church we found a child of nearly twelve years who had no intelligent idea of who Christ was. She had heard the name used in profanity on the street, but had never been to Sunday school and did not know who Christ was. Think of it! Is not the Bible neglected? we ask.

IT has been said, and truthfully, that it is impossible to mentally, or socially, enslave a Bible-reading people. The great scientist, Huxley, in declaring that the Bible as an educational and moral influence in a community and nation was unsurpassed, substantiated his claim by asking us to "consider the great historical fact that for three centuries this Book has been woven into the life of all that is noblest and best in our history, and that it has become the national epic of our race; that it is written in the noblest and purest English, and abounds in exquisite beauties of mere literary form; and finally, that is forbids the veriest hind, who never left his village, to be ignorant of the existence of other countries and other civilizations and of a great past, stretching back to the furthest limits of the oldest nations in the world." John Wesley exclaimed: "Let me be homo unius libri (a man of one book), and that book the Bible." The great, the noble Lincoln is said to have built up his entire reading upon his early study of the Bible. He was a "man of one book," and instinctively put into practice in his lofty statesmanship what he had been taught from the Bible. Ruskin's testimony of the influence and power of the Bible upon his life is as follows: "My mother's list of chapters with which she established my soul in life, and of which I learned every syllable accurately, were, Exodus 15 and 20; II. Sam. 1, 5, 17 to end; I. Kings 8; Psalms 23, 32, 90, 91, 103, 112, 119, 139; Proverbs, 2, 3, 8, 12; Isaiah 58; Matthew 5, 6, 7; Acts 26; I. Cor. 13, 15; James 4; Revelation 5, 6. And truly, though I have picked up the elements of a little further knowledge in mathematics, meteorology and the like, in after life, and owe not a little to the teaching of many people, this maternal installation of my mind in that property of chapters I count very confidently the most precious and, on the whole, the one essential part of my education." Gladstone declared that the "men who are called to the highest positions of trust are men who have built their lives on the impregnable rock of Holy Scripture." And what more need we say of the power and influence of the Bible upon individual lives and upon the lives of nations?

BUT remember that it was the read Bible which exerted this influence. The closed and neglected Bible is not more potent than so much blank paper, binding thread and cover. There are more Bibles in this country to-day than ever before—millions upon millions of them—but if they are not opened and read of what practical good are they? It may be comforting for you to know that you have a handsomely-bound Bible on your center table, and you may dust it off regularly and even reverently, but if you never look inside, if you do not read its message, any other book or a plaster paris image of some god or goddess might as well be in its place. To girdle the earth with Bibles, to lay in every country on the globe a mosaic of Bibles, will not enlighten the people or draw them nearer to God, unless the books are opened and read. And here is where the Bible is neglected. Fifty, one hundred years ago, when books were few and costly, when magazines were almost unknown, when the Sunday newspaper was not even dreamed of by even the most irreligious and ungodly, the Bible was the one book at least which every home possessed. And it was read, reverently read. And not only was it read but it was memorized. It was a Bible-reading people which laid the foundations of this nation broad and deep. Bible-reading fathers and Bible-reading mothers gave to the succeeding generations a heritage which is still resting as a blessing and benediction upon us. But we have fallen upon a day in which the Bible is neglected. The family altars are thrown down and forgotten. Life is too rushing and busy, and there are too many books and papers and magazines which must be read to be up to date, to find time to read the Bible.

BUT why should we read the Bible? First of all because it is the very Word of God. "Why, madam," said the infidel to the old lady who loved to read her Bible, "I can prove to your own eyes that the Bible is a lie." "Law," she said, "I would believe the Bible before I would my own eyes. These old eyes of mine have fooled me a thousand times, but that blessed old Bible has never deceived me in a single instance yet." Spurgeon says: "The Bible is the writing of the living God. Each letter was penned with an Almighty finger, each word in it dropped from the everlasting lips; each sentence was dictated by the Holy Spirit. Albeit that Moses was employed to write the histories with his fiery pen, God guided that pen. It may be that David touched his harp, and let sweet psalms of melody drop from his fingers; but God moved his hands over the living strings of his golden harp. Solomon sang canticles of love, and gave forth words of consummate wisdom; but God directed his lips, and made the preacher eloquent. If I follow the thundering Nahum when the horses plow the waters; or Habakkuk, when he sees the tents of Cushan in affliction; if I read Malachi, when the earth is burning like an oven; if I turn to the smooth page of John, who tells of love; or the rugged chapters of Peter, who speaks of fire devouring God's enemies; if I turn aside to Jude, who launches forth anathemas upon the foes of God, everywhere I find God speaking; it is God's voice, not man's; the words are God's words; the words of the Eternal, the Invisible, the Almighty, the Jehovah of ages. This Bible is God's Bible; and when I see it, I seem to hear a voice springing up from it, saying: 'I am the Book of God: man, read me; I am God's writing: study my page, for I was penned by God; love me, for He is my author, and you will see Him visible and manifest everywhere.'"

AND we ought to read God's Word because it is the only revelation of God to man. Ah, yes, nature may speak of a God. As we behold the lilies of the field which toil not nor spin, yet which are clothed in a splendor and glory which Solomon in all his glory never knew, we exclaim in rapture, surely only a God could have made these. As we lift our eyes to the stars and behold the vastness and splendor and intricacies of the universe, the overpowering thought sweeps over our soul that only a mighty, powerful Creator and God could have made them and hung them in space. As we feel the throb of life in our own veins, as we behold life in its myriad forms in the insect and animal worlds, we are conscious of the existence of a vital something which must have issued from a high controlling force and power. The thought and sense of God are all about us. How could it be otherwise when everything in the heavens above and the earth beneath and the waters under the earth bear the certain impress of the creative hand and fingers of God? But, notwithstanding all this, man needs the Bible to tell him of the God which he discovers all about him. It is not enough that man should know there is a God, he must know about that God and the way back to Him. The Bible is the only source of such knowledge. Therein we find not only who and what God is, but who and what man is, what his need, and how God has wonderfully provided for that need. The heart of the Bible is discovered to be the Christ, about Whom all of God's thoughts and plans revolve. Who is the full revelation of the character of God, and Who redeems back to God a sin-ruined race of beings.

"Search the Scriptures for salvation,
Christ the Lord has told us so.
Every tongue and every nation
Should the Holy Bible know."

MAN should read the Bible because it is the only true guide to the present life and to the life to come. It teaches him how to live and how to die. It shows man how to treat his fellow man; it instructs in political economy, social order and domestic relations; it exalts the home; it indorses the nations as the powers which have been ordained of God, and it encourages and teaches the truest patriotism and the bravest devotion to uprightness and truth. The man who reads the Bible and lives the Bible is "thoroughly furnished unto every good work." The man who neglects the Bible cannot think right, cannot act right, cannot be right. In the days of Josiah, the king of Judah, the Word of God was lost and forgotten in the neglected and deserted temple. The nation fell into grievous sins. Even the pious king did not realize the exceeding low standard of morals and religion in the nation, because he was ignorant of God's Word, but when the roll was found and read to the king he rent his clothes and trembled before God, because then he realized how far the nation had wandered from God. To-day there is neglect of God's Word. There is a gradual drifting away from its high standards, both in the national and domestic life, both in the social and business world. The present generation is what it is because of Bible-reading forefathers and mothers. With the neglect of the Bible in this generation, what will be the heritage which will be passed down to succeeding generations? The neglected Bible means a forgotten God. And a forgotten God means ruin and destruction. Back to the Bible, we cry! It is not enough that the few are reading the Bible. The many must read it if the home and the nation are to be conserved. The Bible is the Word of God, and is "Profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness."

DELICIOUS CHOCOLATE.

How to Preserve the Flavor and Yet Not Make the Beverage Too Rich.

Chocolate is the beverage most often served at informal home luncheons. It is one of the delicacies that go with the fried chicken and hot biscuit that a woman who knows how to entertain frequently gives her guests, says the Washington Star.

The hostess who pleases her guests with chocolate of the desired richness or delicacy has her own ideas about its service. For herself she likes chocolate in the Spanish style, so thick that it will stand alone, but there are comparatively few people who can take it that way. To please everyone she makes a practice of serving hot milk on the table. It can be added to suit all tastes, without lowering the temperature of the chocolate, a mistake that many women make. The whipped cream modifies the heat sufficiently; the addition of cold milk will spoil the best cup of chocolate ever made.

The woman who knows serves chocolate in an ideal way. There are delicate chocolate pots in china, but she has a service which is a dream. It is of silver. The tall pots are made on artistic lines, each with a standard, from above which the pot rounds out and finishes with a graceful cover and the usual nose of the chocolate pot.

Two of these pots are brought to the table, for the woman to whom they belong believes that she is losing one of her prerogatives of hostess if she does not prepare each cup to suit the taste of the individual guest at informal luncheons. One silver pot is filled with the rich chocolate, the other with hot milk, and a tall pitcher which belongs to the set holds the whipped cream. The woman who is fond of chocolate, but is afraid of its effects, can have it half milk if she likes, and it is still hot and delicious.

The beauty of the chocolate pot adds much to the service of the beverage. There never was a time when they were prettier than now. The old pots, with almost straight sides, are to be seen seldom, and usually in the cheaper varieties. The preference is entirely for the tall, slender pots of old-fashioned design. These are not unlike. There is the standard, and the pot is narrow just above and rounds out in the center and in again at the top.

Cups follow the same lines. The straight cups rounding out from the bottom are little used, the same standard effect obtaining as in the pots. Many of these cups are like tall, slender egg cups with handles.

A chocolate muddler is almost a necessity in serving chocolate. The muddler is the long-handled spoon, with a round bowl, with which the woman behind the chocolate pot gives the beverage a last "muddle" before serving. Individual chocolate spoons have longer handles than teaspoons, and round bowls like that of the muddler.

Chocolate is sometimes served at afternoon teas, and dainty chocolate sets are frequently to be found on the glass trays on handsome marquetry tea tables in the drawing-room.

AN INVENTOR'S REBUKE.

Santos Dumont Thought American "Hot Air" Might Help His Balloon Along.

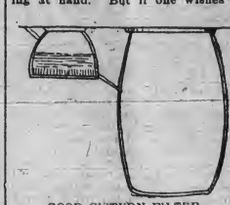
Santos Dumont, the Brazilian aeronaut, lost his temper when he listened, unwittingly, to the unfavorable criticism of two Americans who had witnessed an attempt to sail his dirigible balloon. Later these Americans obtained an introduction and they questioned Santos as to the future of his balloon. "I have a story which will aid you in the appreciation of my efforts," said the inventor.

"A merchant wished to deliver a heavy package to a customer some distance away. A small boy and a wheelbarrow were placed into service. The sidewalks were broken and uneven and the crossings without inclined approaches. As the boy struggled along he aroused the sympathy of the men along the wayside. Sympathy turned into indignation, and public sentiment compelled the boy to return to his cruel master. The merchant was wrathy. He said: 'The men who object shall now assist me in the delivery of these goods.' The package was neatly wrapped in infant's clothes and placed in a baby carriage. His beautiful daughter was then told to deliver the package. At every declivity, ready to assist her, stood a smirking gallant. The vehicle was carried bodily over dangerous crossings. Protesting men had become meek menials, and, without a drop of perspiration upon her brow, the lady placed the package in the astonished consignee's hands."

The story was appreciated, but the point was not evident.

"Do you not understand," observed Dumont. "In America they call ignorant criticism, 'hot air.' Will not some of the 'hot air' generated in the criticism of my efforts aid me in sailing the balloon."

Cheerfulness Worth Cultivating.



The scowl, the pout, the frown, come far easier than the smile; but the smile, or, at least, a cheerful expression, is well worth cultivating from a humanitarian standpoint. In one of the invalids' camps on the southwestern desert, a young fellow, himself a well-nigh helpless invalid, was wont to adjure his comrades when they seemed more than usually blue and despondent with: "Cheer up, the worst is yet to come!" This in such a cheerful tone and with so bright a smile that it never failed to bring its return in kind. What this old world needs is more smiles; less tears. When a woman enters her kitchen in the morning with a smile, fair weather in the household may be safely predicted. If with a frown, look out for squalls.—Utica Observer.

FILTER FOR CISTERN.

How to Make One That Purifies the Water Supply as Fast as It Falls.

A simple filtering arrangement for a cistern is made by inclosing the bottom of the suction pipe in a chamber built of soft brick or filtering stone. Its capacity may be 20 to 30 gallons, and is built round to give strength. The cistern should be so arranged that the bottom of the cistern and sides of filtering chamber can be cleaned occasionally, and in this way these filters give good satisfaction. No cistern should be without one, unless there is some more thorough means of filtering at hand. But if one wishes to have the water filtered as it falls, he will have to build a filter somewhat after the plan as shown in the diagram. The filter is flat bottomed, sloping slightly towards the cistern. There is a layer of bricks on the bottom; on this, in order named, layers of charcoal, sand and gravel, the total filtering material occupying about one-half of the filter. The water, as soon as it falls, begins to filter and passes into the cistern in a pure state. The size of the filter will depend upon the size of the cistern, roof, etc. Usually one holding from 25 to 30 barrels is found large enough. An overflow pipe is fitted to it near the top as, during a heavy shower, it is liable to overflow. An opening is left large enough, so that it can be cleaned out when necessary, and refilled with new material. A roof becomes the lodging place of impure matter which is liable to taint the water—dust, droppings of birds, insects, etc. Whether one has a filter or not, it is a good plan to have the leader pipe so attached as to be readily swung from the cistern to a waste pipe. When it is not raining have the leader go into the waste pipe, and after it has rained sufficiently to clean the roof, swing leader back to the cistern connections.—G. Davis, in Rural New Yorker.

WHEAT MAKES MONEY.

Illinois Farmer Gives Facts and Figures Which Prove the Truth of This Assertion.

Is the wheat crop a money maker? That depends a great deal on the land that is used to produce it, and still more on the farmer himself. An Illinois farmer writes as follows in regard to the possible paying qualities of this crop: On good ground I raised 31 bushels of wheat per acre, and on as good soil produced 42 bushels of oats. Last year was perhaps an extra year for both wheat and oats, and my wheat made 45 bushels per acre, at 75 cents per bushel, and my oats went 81 bushels per acre, at 30 cents per bushel. This was machine measure, and explains very well why I continue to raise wheat. My expenses on the crop were about the same, excepting that of thoroughly covering the ground with manure, as if I had only secured an average on a small crop. I know a man who sells $2.50 worth of straw for 50 cents and charges the wheat with his two dollar mistake, and then adds another $2.50 charge to the grain for lost fertilizer, thus making a $4.50 loss. He then counts a loss by making hay and harvesting, also the thrashing of the grain and the cutting, as well. He thus loads down wheat heavier than it was loaded when it brought $1.50 per bushel a couple of years ago. I also raise wheat to feed, that is, if it is not worth enough to sell on the market. In the last three years I have fed over a thousand bushels of wheat, and it has been proved cheaper than shorts, and has also been, to my notion, a better and more profitable feed than 50-cent corn fed alone. Wheat that tests 62 pounds to the bushel is the kind to raise. I do not find any other crop as profitable as wheat with as little labor when land is properly matured. Many failures are due to poor land and poor farming.—Prairie Farmer.

POULTRY YARD NOTES.

There is a renewal of the agitation about the color of egg-shells. Feed the fowls properly and the color of the shell does not matter. It takes good feed to make good eggs.

The best preventive of roup and other infectious diseases is perfect cleanliness about the poultry house and ground. No medicine can successfully combat filth, darkness and dampness.

It is nonsense to talk about "wild" breeds and "tame" breeds. The so-called "wild" breeds are tame enough when properly cared for and these are the breeds that lay the most eggs.

Feed the hens the best when they lay the fewest eggs. If they are molting they need heavy feeding to help them to a new suit and if they are not laying it is because they are not properly fed.—Commercial Poultry.

WHY SELL YOUNG STOCK?

It Should Never Be Done Unless a Man Is Driven to It by Actual Necessity.

Have you considered whether it is to your interest to sell the calves, colts or pigs at present prices, or to keep them to get the profit of the stockman—to utilize the pastures, grain fields and odds and ends that would be lost, and that can be made to enrich the farm? Would it not be better to feed that feed to stock, both of which you have been in the habit of selling unfed and so contributing to the other man's profits, and to the building up of the fertility of his land, instead of your own? The calves might sell for from ten to fifteen dollars at weaning time. One year later they should weigh at least 750 pounds, which, at four cents, is $30. Now, to make this weight very little grain is required, just make use of the odd pastures, the extra grazing of the corn and small grain fields in the summer and autumn, then the rye and wheat in winter and early spring; also the fodder and straw that was previously wasted. These little odds and ends, if used, add to your bank account. Colts, horse or mule—sell well at weaning time, yet there is better money in keeping, breaking and making desirable work stock. Match them well, take extra pains in breaking, rub them up until you have a fancy team, then you can ask and should have a fancy price. Who knows into what class colts will develop? Pigs may be easily and cheaply kept, until the feeding period, on very little corn, by using slops, gleaning the small grain after harvest and pasturing clover. And so all along the line. Make your farm a factory of some kind.—Agricultural Epitomist.

AN IDEA FROM IOWA.

Details of a Shelled Corn Self Feeder That Has Stood the Test of Several Seasons.

My style of a feed crib can be made of any size, as as to suit any number of cattle. Mine, however, is six feet wide, 15 long and ten high. It has runners, e e, underneath, that it may be readily moved to any place desired. The roof is extended out so as to keep grain dry as well as the backs of steers. It is supported by two by four braces, as shown at c c c. Cupola, d, is well opened for free ventilation. The floor is raised one foot in the center, so as to make sufficient fall for feed to drop into feed trays, f. A slide, g, one by six inches by 15 feet, may be used to regulate the flow of grain into manger. It should have two handles attached as shown.

SHELLED CORN SELF-FEEDER

The door to the scoop hole should be made with sides similar to a scoop board, as at a, and about two by two and one-half feet, that there may be no waste of corn while filling the crib. The two by fours, h, which form the bottom, should project on each side about 20 inches to build the feed trough on.—A. W. Helde, in Farm and home.

CURE FOR BALKINESS.

A Simple Remedy Which Will Start a Horse Ninety-Nine Times Out of a Hundred.

For the benefit of those who have been caused a great deal of anxiety by a balky horse, lost trains as well as tempers, and even sometimes ruined the horse, says a correspondent in the Horseshoers' Journal, I will give you readers a remedy which, no matter how bad he is, will start such a horse 95 times out of 100. Of course it may fail one time in a hundred. When a horse balks, no matter how badly he sulks or how ugly he is, do not beat him; don't throw sand in his ears; don't use a rope on his forelegs or even burn straw under him. Quietly go and pat him on the head a moment; take a hammer or even pick up a stone in the street; tell the driver to sit still; take his lines, hold them quietly, while you lift up either front foot; give each nail a light tap and a good smart tap on the frog; drop the foot quickly, and then chirp to him to go. In 99 cases out of 100 the horse will go right on about his business, but the driver must keep his lines taut and not pull or jerk him back. If I have tried this once I have tried it 500 times, and every time I have suggested it people have laughed and even get five dollars and bottles of wine that I could not do it. So far I have won every bet. This may make you smile, but a horse has more common sense than most people are willing to give him credit for. The secret of this little trick is simply diversion. I am a firm believer that with kindness and proper treatment a horse can be driven with a string.

Moles and Seed Corn.

To prevent moles taking seed corn, first pour melted grease of any kind over the corn, then sift Paris green in over the greased corn and mix well. Just enough Paris green to make the corn green. The Paris green adheres to the grease on the corn and does not injure in the least. We have tried this two seasons where the moles had taken it, and secured a good stand of corn by using the Paris green.—Mrs. H. C. Campbell, in Epitomist.

WRITTEN IN ENGLISH.

Letter from Germany That, While Understandable, Was Certainly Laborious.

An American lady who recently contemplated a trip through Europe thought of including Germany in her itinerary, and with this object in view wrote to a German cousin suggesting that in the event of her favorable decision, she would like to make the acquaintance of himself and his family.

The reply, says the New York Times, written by one of the members of the household whose knowledge of English, although probably more extensive than that of the other members, was nevertheless very much limited by the German-American dictionary, read as follows:

"We received your kind letter from the fifteenth of this month, and ordered by my Grandfather Joseph, who had a great joy of it, immediately I take the pen to answer your writing. It is not yet a years ago before I began to learn the English, and you can imagine how willingly I catch the opportunity to correspond with you which you offer me so amiably. That we have received your writhing so late and therefore also answer late to you is not my debt (schuld) but I hope you will reach still this letter in New York.

"Here is terribly hot till 30 degrees in the sun. We make every day in the mornings great excursions into the mountains and amuse ourselves very well. Every day we receive visits from our town which is in the immediatest neighborhood from here. This year we had great projects, we would drive in a bathing place on the Nord-Seacoast. My eldest brother had formerly the decision to go to Paris, but he changed intention and he stays by home. I and my younger brother who passed now his examinations with decorations make from here a journey up the Rhine, perhaps, and return again to here. That would be a great joy if we could meet you in a little nest on the beautiful shores of the Rhine so quite accidental like. We all were much raptured if you would come and visit our native country. With this expectation and in the hopes that you will receive right my letter in New York, I remain with much regards,

"Your affectionate cousin,

"KARL."

FEMININE FASHIONS.

Pretty Details of the Costumes in Vogue for the Current Season.

Mixed and white wools are extensively used for knockabout suits and for loose, short coats to be worn over any blouse and skirt.

Some of the nine gored skirts have an imitation yoke of trimming. Another way of trimming a circular skirt is by clusters of trimmed pattes about knee high.

White coats will be seen all winter as dress-ups, and are mostly of the loose kinds. They differ from those of summer in being of broadcloth or heavy silk, and are plainer.

An oddly-shaped baroque pearl is in the form of a deer's head, and with tiny rubies set for its eyes and mounted on a stick pin, it is very natural.

Passamenteries are used extensively on all elaborate outside garments, and are moderately used on gowns. There is less use of the long, dangling style of ornamentation than last year.

Point d'art, a coarse kind of thread lace, is another trimming factor in evidence just now. This lace is either applied plain or decorated with a long fancy embroidery stitch in colored flax thread.

The smart woman now carries a jeweled key attached to a chatelaine or, worn in some individual manner. It may open her ladyship's escritoire or jewel box, and even if she has nothing more valuable than a secret to hide the dainty key bears evidence of the fact.

Don't Frighten the Baby.

One cannot be too careful about shielding infants from all excitement. At their tender age the brain is most susceptible and dangerous impressions may be made which time will not erase. One should avoid telling young children such stories as "Jack the Giant Killer." Bring them up to entertain no unreasonable fears, for it is not an uncommon thing that children are frightened into nervous affections, convulsions and St. Vitus' dance.—Chicago Daily News.

Fried Cauliflower.

Parboil two cauliflowers in salted water. Drain and break off the little flowers in little bunches. Make a batter of two tablespoonfuls of butter, three well-beaten eggs, one cup of milk, salt and white pepper, three ounces of flour. Beat the batter until very smooth. Dip each piece of cauliflower into the batter and fry in deep fat until crisp and a light brown. Drain on brown paper and serve on a folded napkin or on a hot platter garnished with cress.—Washington Star.

Boil Sausages Before Frying.

Boiling sausages for five minutes renders them more digestible and delicate than the usual method of frying. At the end of five minutes dip the sausages gently, being careful not to break them; drain, pierce the skins in several places with a fork in order to keep the sausages in shape, roll in flour and place in the frying pan, or to bake in the oven in a covered pan until thoroughly done.—Chicago Record-Herald.

He Lost Out.

"On our wedding day," said the sad-eyed man with the ingrowing hair, "I said to my wife: 'The first thing on the programme is to settle who is going to be boss.'"

"And did you settle it?" asked the inquisitive person.

"No, I didn't," admitted the victim of his own suggestion. "She settled it."—Chicago Daily News.

MEN AND AFFAIRS.

Paul Gabel, who died in New York recently at the age of 64, is reputed to have been the originator in America of the "delicatessen" store. He was a native of Germany and opened a delicatessen store in New York city nearly three-quarters of a century ago.

Congressman Boutell proposes as a means of promoting annexation the intermarriage of young Americans and Canadians, adding that he had already taken his wife from Canada. His remark recalls to the Toronto Globe the southern Irishman's reply to a question as to how the southern women regarded secession: "Sure, they're all for union to a man."

Ex-Sheriff Tom Dunn, of New York, has long since won a reputation as a wit. In consequence a number of alleged witticisms are tacked to his name that were never perpetrated by him. "Dunn," said a friend to him the other day, "what is the cleverest thing you ever said?" "I don't know," sighed the ex-sheriff, "but it was probably said by someone else."

Sir Thomas Lipton has faith in the luck of the individual, and this year, for the first time, he will be joined in America by his mascot. This is Mr. Carmichael, the secretary of the Lipton company, whom Sir Lipton calls his "lucky mascot." Mr. Carmichael has been associated with the owner of the Shamrock III. since almost the beginning of his business career, which began in a small shop in a mean street of Glasgow.

On the 30th of July Samuel M. Shaw retired from editorial management of the Cooperstown (N. Y.) Freeman's Journal, having conducted that sterling democratic weekly for 52 years. He is now 80 years old. In a published card Mr. Shaw says: "I have fortunately experienced but little sickness and never severe enough to prevent my doing some work each week; have been confined to my room but few days in the last 52 years, and never an entire day to my bed. Only once have I been absent from the office for a longer period than ten days, and that was in January, 1876. It is full time to lower my flag and take a rest."

There are several young premiers in various parts of the British empire, but the latest is the youngest of all. He is R. McBride, the new premier of British Columbia, who was born in New Westminster, the original capital of that western Canadian province, 30 years ago. He went to the other end of the dominion for his education, as he is a graduate of Dalhousie university, Halifax. In 1892 he was called to the bar of British Columbia, and six years later he entered the parliament of the province of which he is now prime minister, so that his term of political preparation for the premiership was less than five years.

Kentucky Senator Had to Keep in Line with the Soft Drinks.

When it comes to story telling, Congressman Samuel L. Powers, of Newton, can hold his own with any of them. The other night he related one which was much appreciated by those who heard it, says the Boston Post. The story is about Senators Blackburn and Fairbanks and Secretary of the Treasury Shaw. When the latter first came to Washington Senator Blackburn had some business with the secretary, and while in the office met Senator Fairbanks. After the business was concluded Senator Blackburn invited the other two out to have a libation, and they accepted.

All hands lined up against the bar of the Kaye house. Turning to Secretary Shaw, Senator Blackburn said: "What will you have, Mr. Secretary?" "Well, I guess I'll have a glass of lemonade," was the reply. The gentleman from Kentucky then turned to Senator Fairbanks and said: "And what will you have, senator?" "I'll have a glass of Moxie," was the reply. The bartender leaned over the counter and said to Senator Blackburn: "And what's yours, senator?" "Oh," said the distinguished gentleman from the blue grass state, "I guess I'll have a piece of squash pie."

AN ERRAND TO DO.

Traveler Asked to Stop in Texas on His Way from Chicago to New York.

One brother is a rich merchant in the Straits settlements on the Malay peninsula. The other brother was, until a few weeks ago, the cook in a cheap restaurant on South Clark street, says the Chicago Tribune.

The merchant sent to the cook a draft for sufficient money to pay his expenses out to Asia, and the cook gave up his job and started for his brother's home. The interesting thing about the whole incident is the letter, written by the wealthy merchant, which accompanied the draft.

In the first place the draft was made payable in New York.

"I send you the money in a draft payable in New York," wrote the brother from far off Asia. "You can go over and get it cashed there. On the way I wish you would stop at Texas and see brother Thomas. I haven't heard from him for two years now, and I'd like to know how he's getting along."

The Teacher Won.

Hinton, Ky., Nov. 2.—For over two years, two of the best physicians in this part of the State have been treating Mr. E. J. Thompson, a popular local school teacher, for Diabetes. They told him that but little could be done to help him. He made up his mind to try a new remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills, and says:—

"They saved me when the doctors held out no hope. I took, in all, about ten boxes. I will always praise Dodd's Kidney Pills for the great good they have done for me."

Many people, and some physicians, still persist in the belief that Diabetes is an incurable disease. Our teacher, Mr. Thompson, says it is curable, for Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him after two good physicians had treated him for two years without success.

A remedy that will cure Diabetes will surely cure any case of Kidney Trouble.

Thereupon the visitors decided that that factory was where he would get his next sweater knit.—Baltimore American.

WORTHY of a higher recommendation than I can find words to express." This is what Mr. J. H. Plangman (of Sherman, Tex.) says of Doan's Kidney Pills. He tells his experience in the following words: He says, "Sometime in September I was taken with a dull aching pain across the small of my back, directly over the kidneys. I paid small attention to this at first, thinking it would pass off. But instead of getting better it became worse and in a short time the pain centered through my left hip and down my left leg as far as the knee. This is precisely what kidney trouble will do with the body.

It does not always show itself at first, but appears just in this way, when some unusual movement or action brings sharp pains and exhaustive aches, telling of sick kidneys.

So Mr. Plangman's experience bore this out. Continuing, he says: "I did not know the cause of the trouble, but I am led to believe now that it was first brought about by jumping in and out of the wagon and in some way I may have strained my back.

"I was constantly growing worse," he continues, "and I became very much alarmed about my condition. I knew that something had to be done or serious results were sure to follow. I went to a specialist here in Sherman, and underwent a rigid examination."

Then he relates how the doctor told him that it was a serious case, but that he could cure him for fifty dollars. However, necessity knows no law and Mr. Plangman paid half down and took the treatment and followed it faithfully for four weeks.

Naturally, he thought that he would soon be rid of the trouble, but in spite of the doctoring he goes on to add, "I was in such misery that it was almost impossible for me to do my work."

"It was at this juncture that Doan's Kidney Pills came to my notice and I procured some from the drug store of C. E. Craycroft. I used these pills according to directions and to my surprise I was considerably relieved on the second day and in a short time completely cured."

This is the universal experience of those who have been sufferers from Kidney trouble and who have been fortunate enough to test the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills.

There is nothing wonderful or magical about this remedy, it simply does the work by direct action on the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only and this accounts for their speedy and certain action.

Early indications of kidney trouble come from two sources, the back and the bladder. The back becomes weak and lame because the kidneys are sick, and relief from backache can only be complete when the kidneys are set right.

Irritation of the bladder shows that the kidneys are out of order. Delay in prompt attention often causes serious complication.

Relieve and cure sick kidneys and ward off dangerous diabetes, dreaded dropsy and Bright's disease, by using Doan's Kidney Pills.

They begin by healing the delicate membranes and reducing any inflammation of the kidneys, and thus making the action of the kidneys regular and natural.

Aching backs are eased. Hip, back, and loin pains overcome. Swelling of the limbs, rheumatism and dropsy signs vanish.

They correct urine with brick-dust sediment, high-colored, excessive, pain in passing, dribbling, frequency. Doan's Kidney Pills dissolve and remove calculi and gravel. Relieve heart palpitation, sleeplessness, headache, nervousness.

More than 60,000,000 bushels of corn, more than 50,000,000 bushels of wheat, live stock to the value of $32,000,000, hay to the value of $12,000,000, and products of the mines above $12,000,000 are some of the returns from South Dakota for 1903. With a population of 450,000 and the production of new wealth for 1903 above $146,000,000 it can be readily understood why South Dakota people are prosperous and happy. For them the horn of plenty has been turned upside down. This year for the sixth consecutive time South Dakota leads all other states in the production of per capita wealth.

Why don't you go there and better your condition?

From Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and from many other points in Illinois, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri, direct service to South Dakota is offered via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway

Its main lines and branch lines fairly gridiron the rich agricultural and stock country that lies east of the Missouri River in South Dakota. Its mileage in South Dakota is more than 1,200 miles, and by the building of extensions is being rapidly increased. Some of the best opportunities for success are in the territory of these new lines, but the railway company has no farm lands for sale or for rent. If you are interested, it is worth while to write today for a new book on South Dakota.

BOONE CO. RECORDER

Wednesday, - - Nov. 4, 1903.

W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

THE election passed off here very quietly, yesterday, a pretty fair vote being polled, the bulk of it being cast afternoon.

OHIO Democrats make more noise during a campaign and do less voting on election day, than Democrats in anyother State.

AT least one branch of business is on the increase in Burlington. It is said there are now four blind tigers in operation in the town.

THE Lexington Gazette, 118 years old—the oldest paper in Kentucky, changed its form last week from the blanket sheet to a six column quorto. There were also several other very pronounced improvements made in the paper.

WHEN the construction of the dam across the river below Taylorsport begins, the people in that neighborhood will have a market for a vast amount of material on their land, which up to this time, has been of no value to them, but regarded rather as a nuisance.

IT is strange but nevertheless true that many persons will go through any kind of weather and travel any kind of a road to vote at a primary election, but when the regular election comes on they will allow the most trivial excuse to keep them at home. Why is this?

The general shut-down of the Amalgamated Copper company properties in Montana throws over 13,000 men out of employment and will indirectly effect other industries, it being estimated that by this shutdown about $1,000,000 a week is lost to the wage-earners of Montana alone.

Booker T. Washington, of the Tuskegee Institute, has gone to Europe, and it is reported that he has projected a wholesale colonization of the African Soudan by American negroes, for the purpose of raising cotton to supply the European market. President Roosevelt is said to favor this plan.

An exchange says we are all poor "critters." Not long ago a prominent merchant in a neighboring town received a letter from a large distillery firm asking for a list of names of citizens who might be interested in the literature issued by the firm setting forth the merits of a new brand of whisky and promising him a commission on all sales. The merchant, being somewhat of a jocker himself, sat down and made out a list of the prominent prohibitionists of the place and forwarded it. He forgot all about the matter until a month later, when it was called to his attention by a letter from the distillers enclosing a draft of $16.50 with thanks for the list, which had been found peculiarly remunerative.

The farmer ought to be a good man. He has less temptation to be a bad man than any one we know of. All his work is enobling. His contact is with nature. His dealings are with the old Earth, which will take us all into her kindly arms again when life's fitful fever is over. Oh! it is delightful to turn back from quarelsome, struggling men and look upon honest cattle, and live with nature and her children. The farmer's noble work is worthy of a noble consecration. And the farmer's wife, God bless her, does not allow her head to be put in a whirl in regard to fashionable dress or her neighbor's new bonnet, but goes about her household duties and feeds her little chicks with a light heart and a happy smile for all.

In this long and interesting effort to produce the very best trotters Americans have become most skillful developers of the speed of harness horses the world has known, and as drivers they are unequaled. This skill has been assisted by the ingenious inventors who have contrived wagons so light and frictionless that the weight a trotter now carries is not more than sufficient to keep him steady, and is virtually no handicap at all. Take two horses of equal speed in harness and shoe and harness one as the horses of 1850 were harnessed and shod, and the other as those of this year are turned out, and the horse in the older rigging would be distanced, while the winner would scarcely have to extend himself.

CROW! CROW!

AND THERE STANDS OLD KY.

It Is An Old Time Democratic Majority.

It Looks Like Tuesday Was a Democratic Day in This Country.

Beckham Wins By 20.000 Majority.

New York 60,000 Democratic--Old Maryland Wheels Back Into Line. Rhode Island Also.

Ohio Republican by 120,000 Majority.

Following is the vote of Boone county by precincts.

	Beckham.	Belknap.
Burlington	204	69
Bullittsville	182	29
Bellevue	96	41
Petersburg	175	59
Florence	171	29
Union	150	14
Verona	159	22
Walton	199	69
Hamilton	127	71
Rabbit Hash	132	31
Beaver	72	22
Constance	99	107
Total,	1766	563
Beckham's majority		1203.

Only the vote for the heads of the ticket was reported last night.

Beckham's majority in this county was reduced considerably from what it was the last time he ran. For some reason no work was permitted done in behalf of the ticket as had heretofote been the custom.

Bellevue was the first precinct to report, last night, about 5 p. m. Walton and Florence did not announce their vote until 10 o'clock.

"Stock up" carried in both the Burlington and Big Bone precincts. The majority in Burlington was 92.

The stock law will go into effect in thirty days.

The result of the election in Massachusetts was announced in Burlington before the Florence and Walton precincts were heard from.

Beckham's majority is close to 20,000 in the State.

Beckham carried Belknap's voting precinct.

Democratic defeat in Ohio is the worst they ever received there.

New York City went overwhelmingly Democratic for Mayor.

Maryland is back in the Democratic column with a good majority.

The Democrats elected a circuit clerk in Kenton county, was all they could land.

Sam Adams, of Erlanger, is re-elected to the legislature.

Our rooster shows that he has had a hard fight, but he is a winner this time.

Tarvin was badly beaten for circuit judge in Kenton county.

The election passed off quietly in this county.

What the Republicans did for Johnson in Ohio was a plenty.

The Republicans are already threatening a contest on the eligibility question.

We are sorry to announce the death of Mr. Cyrus Coffman, at Walton, last night.

Some people spend so much time asking God for what they want that they have no time to thank Him for giving them what they need.

The potato is a great crop in Germany as a food, starch and alcohol supply. Last year ninety million gallons of potato alcohol were produced, The food consumption of potatoes in Germany in 1902 was nearly one and a half billion bushels or twenty-five bushels per capita one half of which was by human beings and the balance as stock food. In the United States the 1902 crop was two hundred and eighty-four million bushels, with the high average yield of96 bushels per acre, practically all of which were home consumed, and in addition to which we imported over seven million bushels, Our per capita consumption in 1902 was less than four bushels.

Potato culture in Germany has reached almost an exact science as compared with methods in the United States. While our average yield per acre in 1902 was ninety-six bushels the German average in the same year was one hundred and ninety-nine bushels and in 1901 two hundred seventeen bushels. This difference is accounted for by the stated fact that potato cultivation, like all farming on a large scale in Germany, is based upon an exact knowledge of the soil and every surrounding influence. The agricultural schools of Germany have trained an army of practical chemists, expert in soil analysis and familiar with the requirements of every crop planted. The effective value of every kind of fertilizer in sandy clay or loam and the efficacy of plowing under green crops are accurately known. The Ministry of Agriculture has spent millions of dollars and decades of study in working out the whole problem of varieties, soils, planting, cultivation and harvesting for the German farmer. There is little of the careless hit-or-miss guesswork farming which is too common in many sections of the United States. This single instance of more than doubling the average American potato yield in Germany ebows the vast national advantage to be gained through an effective Department of Agriculture, well supplied with appropriation by Congress for the working out of farm problems in every branch. It is not in any sense an overstatement to say that the Department of Agriculture is or should be the greatest and most important department of the national cabinet.

A large crowd of Burlington hickorynut hunters went out to Hon. J. A. Gaines,' last Saturday, where they had a most delightful time, even if they did not collect enough hickorynuts to overstock the markets. At noon Mrs. George Kreylech served a splendid dinner, for which the visitors' appetites were especially sharpened by their morning's ramble over the fields and forests. So great was the pleasure of the occasion that the Burlingtonians tarried until their arrival at home was long after the chickens had sought their roosts.

The Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company of this county is just now completing its first quarter of a century of business, having been organized in November, 1878. It has been a great money saver to the farmers of the county, and many of the largest policy holders were among the first to insure in the company, and have carried policies continuously for twenty-five years. The business of the company has been in careful hands at all times, and the farmers of Boone county would not do without the protection it affords, while the rates are far below the old time companies.

The Oklahomas claim to have the largest farm in the Southwest. It is the 101 ranch, and is so big that it is necessary to plant several varieties of wheat in it, one of which ripens several days later than the other in order that all of them may be harvested at their prime. On this farm the wheat fields are of 1000 acres each, the cattle pastures are of 1000 to 1500 acres each and pasture 3000 head annually, the corn rows are one and a half miles long, requiring 500 mules and 300 men to handle the crop, and it takes thirty self binders three weeks to cut the wheat crop and a dozen or more steam threshers forty days to thresh it. There are 50,000 acres in the ranch.

B. W. Adams claims that the Gunpowder church organization constitutes the most active band of christian workers in the county. Every member is willing to put his or her shoulder to the wheel when there is anything to be done.

The tobacco growers of Boone county met and perfected an organization Tuesday of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association, electing all their offices but county inspector, which will be done later.—Carrollton News. Does'n Respect Old Age.

It's shameful when youth fails to show proper respect for old age, but just the contrary in the case of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They cut off maladies no matter how severe and irrespective of old age. Dyspepsia, jaundice, Fever, Constipation, all yield to this perfect Pill. 25c at All Druggists.

One result of the drouth in Central Kentucky, will be to reduce the number of lambs annually raised for market. It has been a custom hereabouts for farmers to buy Tennessee and Indiana sheep in the fall to produce lambs. The lack of grazing has made it impracticable for this custom to be followed this season. On the contrary, farmers are forced to sell stock which, if kept, might bring higher prices later in the year. Cattle and hogs have been sold freely, the latter because of the shortage in the corn crop.—Lexington Herald.

Every year some spring that never before failed to furnish a good flow of water, goes out of business, and year by year the natural supply of stock water is being reduced. To meet the deficit in water many farmers in this county have already been compelled to build large ponds at a considerable expense, and it will be only a few years hence when nearly every farm in the county will be provided with ponds from which to supply stock water. Large cisterns built at barns will provide a very large volume of water for stock, besides it can be used for many purposes for which pond water is out of the question. Build large cisterns at your barns, as well as ponds in the fields.

Stepped Against a Hot Stove.

A child of Mrs. Geo. T. Benson when getting his usual Saturday night bath, stepped back against a hot stove which burned him severely. The child was in great agony and his mother could do nothing to pacify him. Remembering that she had a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house, she thought she would try it. In less than half an hour after applying it the child was quiet and asleep, and in less than two weeks was well. Mrs. Benson is a well known resident of Keller, Va. Pain Balm is an antiseptic liniment and especially valuable for burns, cuts, bruises and sprains. For sale by all druggists.

A new problem for the Fayette county farmer to contend with has been brought about by the sending of large numbers of laborers, male and female, to West Virginia and Pennsylvania where they are employed on railroads, in mines and public works of various kinds. To such an extent has this gone on that in some neighborhoods, the old wage scale has been done away with. Where 50c and $1.00 for a day's work formerly maintained, labor demands $1 and $1.50 per day. Hands have not been slow to take advantage of the scarcity of workmen and in many instances instead of working from sun-up to sundown, now work from 7 a. m. to 5 p. m. It may be several years before a satisfactory scale can be agreed upon. Women have accompanied their husbands to the works and the kitchens are as empty as the fields.—Lexington Gazette.

MRS. BOOTH-TUCKER.

Prominent Salvationist Killed in a Railway Wreck.

Gen. William Booth, Commander-in-Chief, Sends a Message to Salvationists Throughout the World Concerning Her Demise.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 30.—Mrs. Emma Booth-Tucker, second daughter of Gen. William Booth, head of the Salvation army, was almost instantly killed in a wreck on the main line of the Santa Fe, near Dean Lake. Her body was terribly crushed, and she died an hour after being taken from the debris. Fourteen other passengers were injured, three probably fatally.

With the wounded, Mrs. Booth-Tucker's body was taken to Marcelino and shipped from that point to Chicago, where her husband awaits it.

Col. T. C. Holland, an officer in the Salvation army, was found near where Mrs. Booth-Tucker was picked up. His injuries will prove fatal.

Mrs. Booth-Tucker was on her way from a visit to the army farm colony at Amity, Col., to Chicago, where she expected to meet her husband.

Among the injured are Mrs. L. N. Kirk and two children and Mrs. Ella Kirk, all of New Castle, Ind.

The Salvation army citadel at 5 o'clock received a telegram from Fort Madison, Ia., saying Col. Holland could live only a few minutes.

London, Oct. 30.—Gen. Wm. Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation army, has sent the following message to Salvationists throughout the world concerning the tragic death of his daughter, Mrs. Booth-Tucker:

"I am suddenly prostrated with grief in the presence of what appears at the moment to be an indescribable calamity and an unfathomable mystery. I can only look up and say to my Heavenly Father, 'Thy will be done.'

"My daughter was, after her mother, first among the many noble and consecrated women I have been permitted to know during the 50 years of my public life. Her loss is irreparable, but so much more need is there for me, for you and for us all to go on with our work for God and the blessing of our fellow men. This, however my heart may bleed, is my purpose so long as He may be pleased to prolong my life.

"The blow will fall with intense severity upon Commander Booth-Tucker and on my officers and soldiers in America, for whom my daughter has fought and toiled so long. In the midst of my own sorrow my heart goes up to God on their behalf. Pray for them. Meanwhile, I am trusting for strength to go on with my own duties and praying that our great agency of alleviating the sorrows of the suffering world may not be hindered by this visitation."

Chicago, Oct. 30.—Mrs. Booth-Tucker's body reached Chicago Thursday night on a Santa Fe train. Several hundred members of the army were at the depot when the train arrived and escorted the body to an undertaking establishment in State street. Friday morning the body will be removed to the Princess rink, one of the Chicago branch headquarters of the army, where it will lie in state until Friday night, when it will be removed to New York and later it may be sent to London for burial.

AT M'KINLEY'S TOMB.

J. Pierpont Morgan and Railway Magnates Pay a Visit.

Canton, O., Oct. 30.—J. Pierpont Morgan, with a party of ten officials of the Pennsylvania railroad, visited the tomb of President McKinley Thursday. The party was en route from New York to Chicago in a special train. It was the first time that Mr. Morgan had been in the vicinity of Canton since the president's death, and it was at his wish that the train was stopped here and a visit made to the vault. Through the corporal of the guard the party obtained permission to go as far as the gates of the tomb.

JAPAN IS UNWILLING.

Russia Will Not Be Allowed a Free Hand in Manchuria.

London, Oct. 31.—The Morning Post Saturday says it understands that Japan is by no means prepared to acquiesce in the suggestion that she give Russia a free hand in Manchuria in exchange for a Japanese free hand in Coren. Japan contends, says the Morning Post, that the two questions are entirely separate, that Corean independence has already been secured by convention and that as Manchuria was restored to China by Japan at the instigation of European powers, she naturally can not consent to its occupation by Russia.

The correspondent of the Daily Mail at Kobe quotes the Hochi Shimun of Tokio to the effect that the diplomatic corps, of the Japanese capital, have no hope of a peaceful settlement of the pending difficulties.

Even Baron Shibusawa, at a meeting of the Bankers' union, advocated war, although the interest of the bankers is logically in the direction of peace.

Paris, Oct. 31.—The Gaulois Saturday morning affirms that French diplomacy, which was not unconnected with the recent sudden improvement in the relations of Russia and Japan, proposes at Count Lansdorff's request to exercise conjointly with Great Britain a firm though friendly pressure on the Japanese government for the purpose of obtaining a speedy and amicable settlement of the difficulties between Japan and Russia. The paper adds that instructions to this effect have already been forwarded to M. Harmand, the French minister at Tokio. The Gaulois further says that M. Lamsdorff, in exchange for M. Delcasse's promise of support in the Balkan question, has undertaken that Russia shall morally support France in negotiations concerning questions pending in Africa. The paper finally declares, though under reserve, that the two ministers have discussed a certain plan concerning Abyissinia in the carrying out of which Italy, France and England will each play an active part.

HALLOWEEN FESTIVITY.

Two Girls Were Instantly Killed Near Elizabeth, Pa.

Elizabeth, Pa., Oct. 31.—Miss Maude Albon and Miss Agnes McGeary, aged 19 and 16 respectively, were instantly killed Friday night while en route to a halloween festivity in the neighborhood by a Pittsburg, Virginia & Charleston train.

The two girls, with Hilda McGeary, an older sister of Agnes, had donned their halloween masks in a spirit of fun and drove directly in front of the train, the masks interfering with their vision at the crossing.

Agnes McGeary was beheaded, her friend, Miss Albon, was badly mangled, and Hilda McGeary escaped unscathed.

TO BUILD A RACING SCHOONER.

It Is Suggested That the Boat Is For King Edward.

London, Oct. 31.—George L. Watson, the yacht designer, is inviting estimates for building a new racing schooner. Haste is stipulated, the intention being to have her in readiness for the trans-Atlantic race for the cup offered by Emperor William. It is suggested that the boat is to be built for King Edward, but there is no confirmation of the report. The secret of the ownership of the new yacht is carefully guarded. The specifications and plans show she will be an exceptionally large and powerful boat with 95 feet water line, and canvassed to full racing trim.

TRAINWRECKER'S DEED

Engine, Cars and Bridge Go Into a Creek.

Car Loaded With Bankers the Only One Not Derailed—Thirty or More Trainmen and Passengers Injured, Some Fatally.

Pueblo, Col., Oct. 31.—By an act of train wreckers east-bound Santa Fe passenger train No. 6, known as the Colorado-Chicago "flyer," in which was one car filled with eastern bankers homeward bound from California, was derailed at 1:30 o'clock Friday morning at Apishapa creek, 35 miles east, and, breaking down the steel bridge, the engine and four cars following, plunged to the bed of the creek, where they were piled in a mass of wreckage. Thirty or more trainmen and passengers were injured and that none was killed outright is regarded as almost miraculous.

Among the injured are: Harrold Kolberg, Middlesboro, Ky.; J. F. McGill, Washington, D. C.; J. L. Reinhardt and Mrs. J. A. Reinhardt, Owensboro, Ky.

The wrecked train was made up at Denver Thursday evening and at Pueblo the car Del Roso, in charge of A. S. Kimberly and carrying 18 eastern bankers, was attached to it. The train was bowling along at a speed of 50 miles an hour as it approached Apishapa creek, between Mangola and Fowler.

At the west end of the bridge the rails spread, derailing the engine, and when it struck the bridge one span 100 feet long went down. The engine, two baggage cars and a chair car and a coach rolled over on their sides to the creek bed, a distance of about 15 feet. Fortunately little water was running in the creek at the time.

One Pullman stopped with the forward end projecting over the embankment. The bankers' car was the only one in the train that was not derailed.

When the engine rolled over Engineer Walker was pinned under his cab, and he was immediately enveloped in a dense cloud of steam. Some time elapsed before he was rescued by other members of the crew with the assistance of some passengers.

Engineer Walker and others who were seriously injured were placed in the Santa Fe hospital there and the remaining resumed their eastward journey with the exception of some women, who were suffering from the shock to their nervous systems.

An investigation showed plainly that the spikes had been pulled from three rails.

But for the accident of a hot box on the express car a large amount of money would have been in the safe of the wrecked train and this, it is believed, was the plunder the desperadoes hoped for. Valises were rifled by the robbers during the excitement following the wreck.

The express car in which, according to report, money was being transported, was left at Colorado Springs in a later train.

THE FARMERS' SOCIETIES.

A Call Has Been Issued For a Meeting in Chicago December 1.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—The advisory board, created at the convention of farmers' societies held in Chicago in September, 1903, has issued a call for a meeting in this city December 1. The purpose is to increase the membership. The object of the board is to bring about concert of action among all the farmers' societies and organizations "to secure equitable prices for all farm products, and to guarantee to consumers food products at a fair price and not loaded down by trust profits." The call requests every society to send two or more delegates. The governors are to be asked to send delegates to represent the different states.

THE MAD MULLAH.

The Present Prospects of His Victory Are Very Bad.

Rome, Oct. 31.—News from Somaliland gives assurances that the present prospects of victory for the Mad Mullah are bad. Great Britain has taken steps looking to decisive action for the annihilation of the Mullah's power. Italy, co-operating with Great Britain, has ordered the gunboat Volturno and the cruiser Cristo Colombo to reinforce its Red Sea squadron.

At the same time Emperor Menelik, of Abyssinia, has been urged to expedite the attack of his troops on the Mullah's forces, thus catching him between the fires.

Fair words never hurt the tongue.—Chapman.

Mrs. Rosa Adams, niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C. S. A., wants every woman to know of the wonders accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot tell you with pen and ink what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me, suffering from the ills peculiar to the sex, extreme lassitude and that all gone feeling. I would rise from my bed in the morning feeling more tired than when I went to bed, but before I had used two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to feel the buoyancy of my younger days returning, became regular, could do more work and not feel tired than I had ever been able to do before, so I continued to use it until I was restored to perfect health. It is indeed a boon to sick women and I heartily recommend it. Yours very truly, MRS. ROSA ADAMS, 819 12th St., Louisville, Ky."

Any women who are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, general debility, and nervous prostration, should know there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No other medicine for women has received such wide-spread and unqualified indorsement. No other medicine has such a record of female cures.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am very pleased to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for womb and ovarian difficulties from which I have been a sufferer for years. It was the only medicine which was at all beneficial, and within a week after I started to use it, there was a great change in my feelings and looks. I used it for a little over three months, and at the end of that time I suffered no pain at the menstrual period, nor was I troubled with those distressing pains which compelled me to go to bed, and I have not had a headache since. This is nearly a year ago. I always keep a bottle on hand, and take a few doses every week, for I find that it tones up the system and keeps me feeling strong, and I never have that tired out feeling any more.

"I certainly think that every woman ought to try this grand medicine, for it would prove its worth. Yours very truly, MISS ELSIE DANFORTH, 303 De Soto St., Memphis, Tenn."

Sixteen Football Players Killed in a Collision.

Nearly Fifty Others Were More or Less Injured—Two Cars of a Special Train Were Crushed Like Eggshells.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 2.—A catastrophe so awful that it fairly surpasses almost all that death has done in wanton cruelty, occurred Saturday morning upon the border of the city of Indianapolis. Speeding into the state capital the Purdue college football special, laden with joyous youth, crashed into a cut of coal cars, and in an instant 15 young lives were most horribly ended. About 47 people were injured.

No scene of carnage in war ever presented more frightful front than that which succeeded when, without warning, came the shock of the collision. The first two cars of the special train were crushed as though they were the frailest of toys. In the first rode the members of the Purdue team, trained to the hour for a game that was to have decided a precious championship, and flushed with the hope of victory over their old-time opponents.

Following is the list of those killed outright: W. H. Grube, Butler, Ind., substitute player; Charles Furr, Vedersburg, Ind., guard; E. C. Robertson, East Helena, Mont., assistant coach and captain of team two years ago; Walter L. Roush, Gas City, Ind., substitute; B. J. Powell, Corpus Christi, Tex., end player; W. D. Hamilton, Ill., center rush; Gabriel S. Drollinger, Newcastle, Ind., substitute; Samuel Squibb, Lawrenceburg, Ind., substitute; J. H. Hamilton, Huntington, Ind., substitute; N. E. Howard, Lafayette, president of the Indiana Laundrymen's association; Patrick McClair, Chicago, trainer; Samuel Trulit, Noblesville, substitute; G. L. Shaw, Indiana Harbor; Bert Price, Spencer, Ind., substitute; J. C. Coates, Berwin, Pa.

William Italley, of New Richmond, Ind., substitute player on the Purdue universally football team, died Sunday afternoon from internal injuries received in the Big Four wreck. This is the 16th death. His father arrived before he died.

Fourteen dead bodies were shipped to their homes Sunday and the body of Joseph Powell, of Corpus Christi, Tex., was sent home Monday morning in charge of Paul Sturm, an old classmate living here. Services were held Sunday afternoon over the body of E. C. Robertson, of East Helena, Mont., by Dr. J. Cumming Smith before the body was shipped home.

There are still lying in the hospitals 24 victims of the wreck, 33 of whom are students of Purdue university. Of these 15 are in a serious condition.

A. L. Butler, of Oberlin, O., halfback on the team, has his legs crushed and is suffering from shock. Sim Miller, of Ninevah, Ind., played end of the team, has one leg broken twice and the other crushed. It is believed, however, he will recover. He is a brother of "Long John" Miller, who was captain of the Purdue team two years ago. C. O. Tangeman, of Fern Bank, O., student, has a slight fracture of the skull but it is believed will recover. C. C. Adams, of Osgood, Ind., member of the band, has an injured spine and is in a precarious condition. It was not known until Sunday that he was hurt, as he was taken to the home of relatives. Coach O. F. Cutts, of North Anson, Me., who worked over the injured all day and night, was ordered to the hospital Sunday afternoon and will have both legs in plaster casts for several weeks. There are crushed bones in each ankle.

H. G. Lestie, of West Lafayette, captain of last year's team and this year's fullback, has been under the influence of anaesthetics all day. He has a broken leg and broken jaw.

Prof. A. W. Bitting, of the Purdue faculty, is improving and his condition is not thought to be serious.

W. F. Collar, of Laporte, Ind., substitute player, has a broken jaw and is recovering.

J. R. Whitehead, of Toledo, O., substitute halfback, has a broken leg, but will recover.

Others of the injured, whose condition is not serious and who are expected to be able to leave the hospital in a few days, are:

D. B. O'Brien, of Syracuse, N. Y.; M. Esteele, of Canton, O.; J. H. Mowrey, of Chambersburg, Pa., who is spending his time encouraging the more seriously injured in spite of his own wounds; I. H. Long and D. H. Long, of Louisville; I. S. Osborne, of North Dover, O., captain of the football team, and W. C. Sprau, of Sandusky, O.

General Superintendent Van Winkle, of the Big Four Co., when asked Sunday night as to the cause of the wreck, said he was yet unable to state who was responsible. "I have no more idea as to the cause than I had two minutes after it happened," said he. "My time has been devoted to looking after the injured and the shipment of the dead."

IN A RAILWAY YARD.

Two Cars of Dynamite Exploded Doing Much Damage.

Crestline, O., Nov. 2.—Crestline and vicinity was thrown into a panic Sunday night by a terrible explosion at 8 o'clock. Many buildings were shaken and in some instances the walls fell. Church congregations were thrown into screaming masses of humanity. People who were at home were terrified by the fearful roar that was heard. Two cars of dynamite which exploded in the Pennsylvania yards was the cause of the excitement. The destruction is so complete and so great that it is impossible to say anything of the property damage or whether there is any life lost, Sunday night.

Yardmaster Courtier and Clerk Geisinger, who were at work in the yard office half a mile away were seriously and possibly fatally hurt by the destruction of the building in which they were working.

Hundreds of Pennsylvania employes are at work searching the ruins for the dead or injured. The entire west yards of the road is a complete wreck. Officials of the railroad have said that there are no less than 325 cars smashed.

Where the explosion occurred a hole 20 feet wide twice as long and 15 feet deep has been torn into the ground. Engines at work a mile away were thrown from the track.

In the down-town portion of the city there is not a building that has not suffered considerable damage. Many persons who were on the streets were cut and otherwise hurt by flying glass and hundreds of women are in a serious condition from shock and concussion. All the physicians of the city are at the scene of the wreck to assist those who may be found injured. The streets are filled with people who do not wish to go home. The sidewalks and road are littered with the glass from the shattered panes. The mayor has sworn in many extra policemen to guard the property.

All the churches were holding services when the explosion occurred. Doors were blown off and windows smashed in many of the buildings. The full extent of the loss to property will not be known for many days. And it can not be told for several hours whether there has been loss of life or not. The disaster is one of the worst that Crestline has experienced. The wrecked cars are burning and the spectacular effects are magnificent. The explosion was plainly heard 50 miles away.

FUNERAL PARTY RUN DOWN.

Four Persons Killed and the Corpse Torn From Its Coffin.

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 2—Four persons, all white, were killed instantly and a corpse was torn from its coffin by a locomotive of a south-bound passenger train on the Southern railway, at a point four miles from Concord Sunday morning.

All the victims lived in the vicinity of the tragedy. They were in a wagon with the corpse of Mrs. Kate Lewis and were on their way to a neighboring burial ground. At the point where the accident occurred the county road runs alongside the railroad for a considerable distance, the view being unobstructed. The engineer saw the funeral party but there was no cause for him to anticipate a tragedy. Just before the train was abreast of the wagon the mules drawing the wagon became unmanageable and swerved, carrying the wagon directly in front of the train. The casket containing the corpse was broken to pieces and the corpse was hurled through the air with the victims.

CONEY ISLAND FIRE SWEPT.

Three Hundred Buildings Destroyed Entailing a $1,000,000 Loss.

New York, Nov. 2.—Coney Island Sunday was swept by fire, 300 buildings being destroyed, entailing a loss of $1,000,000. The fire started near the steeplechase park and swept along the Bowery district, which is filled with flimsy frame structures. The principal buildings destroyed were Stauch's hotel and pavilion and Henderson's theater, both brick structures erected since the great fire of Chicago. Details of police from Manhattan and Brooklyn aided the firemen and controlled the great crowds.

Two lives so far are reported to be lost, one man mortally injured, a score of others hurt. How many more dead are in the ruins is not yet known.

THE VATICAN IN FLAMES

Three Rooms in the Ancient Structure Damaged.

For the First Time Since the Fall of the Temporal Power Italian Authorities Were Invited to Enter the Structure.

Rome, Nov. 2.—Fire broke out at 8:30 o'clock Sunday evening in that portion of the vatican containing the hall of inscriptions, where the pope gives his audiences and which is adjacent to the famous pinacoteca, or gallery of pictures.

The first intimation of fire was had when smoke was seen issuing from the apartment of M. Marie, which is located above that of Father Ehrle, the librarian, who lives over the library itself. M. Marie is a celebrated French restorer of ancient manuscripts and illuminated books; he is at present engaged in copying work and his first reproductions have been selected for part of the vatican's exhibit at the St. Louis exposition. The famous Bramante staircase leads to that part of the vatican where the fire broke out. The gendarmes broke in the door of M. Marie's apartment and found him in a heavy sleep. It is supposed that he retired and forgot to take proper precaution with his kitchen fire, which probably blazed up and ignited some nearby hangings. Thus the fire started and it rapidly assumed such proportions that the gendarmes, who were the first on the scene, gave an immediate general alarm.

When the fire engines began work, three rooms were already entirely destroyed by the flames, which were extending to the other apartments. The pope withdrew as soon as he saw that everything possible was being done to fight the fire.

Information had been sent the Italian authorities, who hurried to St. Peters. They were courteously invited to enter and did so. Therefore, for the first time since the fall of the temporal power of the vatican, the mayor of Rome, the prefect, police officials and even Signor Ronchetti, the newly appointed minister of justice, entered the vatican in their official capacities. They gave orders directing the work of combatting the flames and participated personally in the fight. It was a very difficult fire to overcome; there were a number of old and inflammable objects in the apartment of M. Marie and the wooden roof over this room facilitated the passage of the flames to adjoining rooms, also full of combustible materials. The competition between the papal firemen and the firemen of Rome to see who should work the harder and do the most resulted in a display of courage which was really admirable, some of the fire fighters risking their lives until they were restrained by their superiors.

At a little after 11 o'clock the fire was under control, but the work of the firemen will continue for some time. Fresh relays of men are being sent to relieve those whose efforts have exhausted them.

The entire museum of inscriptions, the rooms of Father Ehrle, part of the library and the printing houses were entirely flooded with water. It is impossible to reach an approximate idea of the extent of the damage.

Many things that escaped the flames were injured by water, especially the precious private library of Pope Leo, which Father Ehrle had been rearranging in accordance with the last wish of the late pontiff.

TENEMENT HOUSE FIRE.

Twenty-Six Persons, Mostly Italians, Burned to Death.

New York, Nov. 2.—Twenty-one men, three women and a ten-months-old babe were burned to death or suffocated in a fire that started early Sunday morning in the house of "All Nations," a five-story tenement house at No. 425 Eleventh avenue and which the police and coroner believe to have been of incendiary origin.

Some of the peculiar features of the disaster, in addition to the startling loss of life, are that the fire was practically extinguished in 20 minutes, that the police could learn of but one person being injured, other than those who lost their lives, and that the property loss was only $7,000. Nearly all the dead are Italians.

PARKS CONVICTED.

For the Second Time He Was Found Guilty of Extortion.

New York, Oct. 31.—For the second time within two months Samuel J. Parks, walking delegate of Housesmiths' and Bridgemen's union, local No. 2, was convicted of the crime of extortion in the court of general sessions. It took the jury just 12 minutes during which time they took two ballots, to agree on the guilt of Parks in extorting $500 from the Tiffany studios, a firm of contractors, under the threat of keeping them from continuing work on buildings last January. It was shown at the trial that Parks had obtained $500 from the Tiffany firm as an "initiation fee" last January when the housesmiths and bridgemen were on strike on three of the Tiffany contracts in this city. Parks claimed that this money was a fine levied by his labor union.

Later the fact developed that Parks had been disloyal to his union inasmuch as he permitted the Tiffany firm to employ non-union men on concern jobs after having received the $500. This accusation was not denied by the defendant or his counsel during the trial, but the latter contended that Parks had given the money to the treasurer of his organization and that the entire transaction was a business deal which instead of being a crime afforded considerable business advantages to the firm which paid the money. Counsel for Parks endeavored to introduce certificates as to the prisoner's delicate state of health, but Judge Newburgher, before whom the case was tried, refused to admit them. In his charge Judge Newberger said that it made no difference what disposition Parks made of the money after he had obtained it from the representatives of the Tiffany firm, if in the belief of the jurymen he had obtained it under threat direct or implied, as that fact would constitute extortion, the crime charged against the prisoner.

BIG BLAZE IN PADUCAH.

Property to the Value of Quarter of a Million Dollars Destroyed.

Paducah, Ky., Oct. 29.—Fire which started at 11 o'clock Wednesday night in the wholesale grocery store of M. Livingston, at Second and Broadway, spread rapidly until at 12:30 o'clock it threatened the entire district. The loss already inflicted was estimated at $200,000.

From the establishment of Livingston & Son the flames spread successively to the H. Weil & Son wholesale whisky house, the Lagomarsino hotel, Michael Bros., wholesale saddlery; Lang Bros., drug store, and then the Western Union telegraph office. The operators at the telegraph offices will be driven out in a minute or two more. The guests at the Lagomarsino hotel are all safe so far as known, although they barely had time to don their clothes and get out.

At 2 o'clock a lucky shift in the wind, coupled with desperate work by the fire department, resulted in the flames being brought under control. The total loss is now estimated at $250,000, divided as follows: M. Livingston & Son, $75,000; H. Weil & Son, $60,000; Michael & Bros., $75,000; Lang Bros., $6,000; R. G. Terrell, $8,000; Lagomarsino hotel, $10,000.

THE FORESTRY EXHIBIT

From Kentucky Will Occupy a Most Prominent Place

AT THE ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION

Assigned Space Near Center of Forestry Building and on Two of the Main Aisles—Chairman Struck Issues Instructions For Preparation of Samples of Logs, Boards, Etc., For the Exhibit.

On two of the main aisles and almost in the center of the Forestry and Fish and Game Building at the World's Fair in St. Louis next year will stand Kentucky's display of her wonderful forest resources and lumber interests. This space has just been assigned to the Kentucky Exhibit Association by Mr. Tarleton H. Bean, the chief of the Department of Forestry of the Exposition. As is readily seen, the forestry display from this commonwealth will occupy an enviable position, and it behooves those interested to make the display one worthy the space given it. To this end Mr. A. N. Struck, Chairman of the Forestry Exhibit Committee of the Exhibit Association, and Mr. William Boa, Filed Representative, are laying their plans.

Chairman Struck has just issued a circular, giving instructions to the logging camps, planing mills and forestry industries of the State, as to how they can best assist him in making the display a success. Logs cut eight feet in length are to be shown. This length has been decided on so the samples will be worth something after the Exposition. The ends of the logs will show cross cuts, while in the middle a section will be cut out about a half foot deep, three feet across at the top, rounded down to two feet across at the bottom, which will show the lateral cut as well as the beauty of the grain. Mr. Struck states that all logs must be cut to eight feet, and the diameter should not be less than 24 inches, if possible to get same.

In addition to the logs, there will be board samples, of which the accompanying sketch will give an idea. These board samples will be four feet long b ytwo feet high by four inches thick, and will be partly finished and partly unfinished, so as to show the wood in its natural and its finished state.

The method to be followed by the Kentucky Exhibit Association in displaying samples of the State's forestry products and resources is right up-to-date, being recommended by government experts as being the most economical and best plan yet found.

Mr. Struck announced that arrangements are to be made to store the logs and board samples for the exhibit in two or three convenient places in different parts of the State. Here his committee will have certain men to prepare the samples so that all shall be finished in the same way.

Besides the logs and boards, there will be shown in the Kentucky space all forms of manufacture from the forest industries. In view of this fact it is hoped by the Exhibit Association that many more lumber firms and corporations and manufacturers will subscribe to the fund being raised to defray the expense of the forestry exhibit, along with the erection of the Kentucky Building and the exhibits to be made in other departments of the exposition. The contributions thus far received range from $25 to $100.

WILL STUDY THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Prominent West Virginia Educator Requests Teachers to be Posted on the Exposition.

Hon. Thomas C. Miller, state superintendent of the public schools of West Virginia, has made the World's Fair of 1903 a feature of every teachers' institute held in the state during the summer of 1903. Institutes are being held in every county and Mr. Miller has caused one afternoon in each week that the institute is in session to be devoted to a study of the World's Fair.

The following is the subject as outlined by Mr. Miller for study and discussion:

"The Louisiana Purchase Exposition."

"The Site."

"Plan of the Grounds."

"The West Virginia Building."

"How Shall West Virginia be Represented Educationally."

As soon as the West Virginia school teachers saw the institute program many of them addressed letters to the Publicity Bureau of the Exposition and received literature which furnished this requires information. The school teachers of the state are becoming fully informed upon the World's Fair and short talks will be given on the Exposition at certain hours during the school year.

Some of the leading educational institutions of the country advertise, as a part of the course, a systematic study of the World's Fair.

Fine Farm For Sale.

I withdraw from sale my farm of 255 acres at Hebron at the price named in a recent notice. The farm is for sale at a bargain if sold soon, but not at that price. The conditions and circumstances and opportunities existing when that offer was made, do not exist now—hence the withdrawal. This is a magnificent farm, finely located and elegantly improved. The land and improvements are all in splendid condition. This plantation and its improvements were planned, constructed, developed and finished for a superb country home, for a country gentleman, and only a man of that character can appreciate it. The whole farm is as beautiful as a city park. It is for sale at a bargain if sold soon. If not sold soon it will be for rent to good and careful men.

It is not always the cow that gives the richest milk that fills the pocketbook. A homely farmer put this truth to me the other day in bright if homely words. In answer to the statement that a certain lot of cows gave milk so rich that 16 pounds of it would make a pound of butter, he said: "Yes, and it would take 16 of them to make the pound of butter." The fact is, quality is not the only thing we must seek in the cow. There must be quality as well. Here is a cow that gives milk, 16 pounds of which will make a pound of butter. In a day we will say she gives 16 pounds. This butter is sold at 25 cents a pound. This the cow does 300 days in the year. At the end of the season she has to her credit, if she can maintain this record and the price remains the same, 300 pounds of butter, worth $85. Here is another cow that gives milk requiring 20 pounds for a pound of butter. Every day for 300 days she gives 25 pounds of milk, making 1¼ pounds of butter. When the season ends she has 375 pounds of butter, worth $93.75. to show for her work. Which is the better cow?—Farm and Fireside.

The small and inferior cabbages are valuable as food for poultry, and will be highly relished in winter, when green food is scarce. They are easily handled, as the heads require no cutting, the fowls picking them to pieces and consuming them down to the stalks.

The Best Remedy for Croup.

This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighborhood. One of the most terrible things in the world is to be awakened in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of the children. The croup remedies are almost as sure to be lost, in case of croup, as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old-fashioned remedy for croup, known as hive syrup and tolu, but some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better, and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw up the phlegm" quicker, and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as the croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Mr. Henry C. Wingate, aged 76 years died Thursday at mid-night, after a lingering illness of nearly a year. Mr. Wingate, whom the writer has known from childhood, was one of those friends of the morning and noontide hour, whose friendship was as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. He was not one of those natures, light and laughing, good only for the bright hours on the dial of life; not one who joyed with us when our hopes and hearts beat high and forsook us when the first cloud appeared on the horizon; but he was a friend for good or evil report who held out his kindly hand and lingered with us in the hearts Gethsemane; no man was kinder to man, honored woman more and hated his fellowbeing less than Henry Wingate. He never asked his friends to be saints, he took them as he found them; and now somewhere, sometime—may we not hope to renew the kindly friendship so rudely broken off by the ruthless hand of death? Sometime, may those of us who are left set our faces toward the sundown pass along the way his feet have trodden in his search for a place to rest and dream, and there, under the cool, green shadows of the tree of Paradise, find the old familiar welcome and grasp the same loyal hand; friendship eyes are no bluer than the skies that bend above him or the sod that mantles his heart.

Mr. Wingate was indeed a friend whom it was a pleasure to know, modest and unassuming. In 1852 he married Miss Susan Cloud, daughter of William and Polly Cloud, pioneer citizens of this county. In the living, a daughter having died a number of years ago, after reaching womanhood—M. F. Wingate, the oldest son, is a well known trader and shipper, and during Cleveland's administration was Stamp Deputy here; J. I. Wingate is a Pullman conductor running out of Cincinnati; Gaines, a grandson, is bookeeper at the Boone Co. Distillery; Miss Maud, a granddaughter, who inherits her grandfather's kindly disposition, assists her aged grandmother in the duties of the home. Holman, also a grandson, completes the family circle who mourn the departure of husband, father and grandfather.

Not A Sick Day Since.

"I was taken severely sick with kidney trouble. I tried all sorts of medicines, none of which relieved me. One day I saw an ad. of your Electric Bitters and determined to try that. After taking a few doses I felt relieved, and soon thereafter was entirely cured, and have not seen a sick day since. Neighbors of mine have been cured of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Liver and kidney troubles and General Debility." This is what B. F. Bass, of Fremont, N. C. writes. Only 50c, at all druggists.

It was the first visit of Mrs. Rouse or her son to this county.

Dudley Rouse concluded one morning last week that he would celebrate Gov. Beckham's great victory by putting in the day hunting rabbits, and with that determination, he borrowed of Attorney Sidney Galues a single barrel shotgun, supposing it to be the best in the town. He filled the belt with shells and started to the fields for the day's sport. Scarcely had he got beyond the limits of the town before a rabbit hopped up before him With a steady nerve he drew down on the rabbit and pulled the trigger, and instead of an explosion that made the earth tremble, there came a modest little "click." Mr. Rouse examined the gun and gave it a heroic shake up, and consoled himself with the belief that he would have better luck next time. In a few minutes another rabbit hustled out of the grass at Mr. Rouse's feet, and just as it disappeared in a near by patch of briars, "click," modestly went the gun again. This experience was repeated half a dozen times, when Mr. Rouse abandoned the hunt, and returned home, and demanded an explanation on the part of the owner of the gun, who told him he gave him that particular gun so there would be absolutely no danger of an accident.

The Way of the Natural Man

It Is One of Self-Desire and Self-Seeking and Ends in Destruction

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Nov. 8, 1903.
Text: "They ceased not from their own doings, nor from their stubborn way."—Judges 2:19.

OUR text is the testimony of God's Word against Israel, and we ask: Will not this indictment stand with equal force against the people of to-day? It describes the way of the natural man. Is there less stubbornness in the human heart in this twentieth century of the Christian era than there was fourteen hundred years before its dawn? Are the people of to-day ruled less by their own desires and purposes and ambitions than were the Israelites of old? And another question we want to ask: Is stubbornness any less a sin to-day, is it less offensive to God than it was in the days when "the anger of the Lord was hot against Israel," because of stubbornness and when it cost Saul a kingdom? Have the people of to-day a better right to do as they want to than did the people of whom our text declares "they ceased not from their own doings?" As we read God's warnings to those people, as we follow their history and see the evils and calamities into which their stubbornness plunged them, we climb up into the judge's chair with God and condemn them, and then, having passed judgment on a case over three thousand years old, we rush off into the present of our own doing and our own stubbornness. In the centuries which have passed since this self-willed, stubborn people dwelt in the land of Palestine, has God's attitude towards the self-will and stubbornness of the human heart changed? Samuel, the prophet of God, told Saul that "stubbornness was as iniquity and idolatry," and to-day is it less iniquitous and less dishonoring to God than it was then? We have asked these questions that they may set you to thinking. We want to take some pages of history from God's sacred Book and let them shed their light upon the pathway of the present, for "these things were our examples," and have been recorded by God for our instruction and warning.

THE brief words comprising our text are a wonderful index to the conditions which prevailed in the nation of Israel. It is not necessary that the historian should enter into lengthy details to understand exactly what the people were doing. When we are told that "they ceased not from their own doings, nor from their stubborn way," we know that every desire of the flesh was indulged and every vanity and imagination of the heart was given full rein and scope. The natural wayward tendencies were not checked, and step by step they plunged farther and farther into sin. The natural tendency of man is always downward. God placed man in the earth pure and spotless. Man's desire led to the act of disobedience, and succeeding generations "ceased not from their own doings nor from their stubborn way," until the culmination came in the flood, and only one man was found who would listen to God and yield obedience to Him. But notwithstanding the judgment of the flood the tendency of man to seek his own way and stubbornly resist God was not cured, and the human race again plunged downward until the judgment thunders burst upon Babel's tower and man was scattered and his tongue confused. Man ceased not from his own doings nor from his stubborn way. Then came the call of Abraham and the establishment of a nation out of his loins, which was to be peculiarly God's people and to do His will. In the wilderness journey "they ceased not from their own doings nor from their stubborn way," and thousands were consumed by pestilence and the sword. They cease not from their own doings but refuse to enter the promised land, and wander other 40 years as a penalty. When finally they did take possession of the promised land at the point of their history where our text brings us, we find that "they ceased not from their own doings nor from their stubborn way." The judgment of God would fail, and under the stress of the lash, temporary obedience would be yielded to God, but soon the natural tendency downward would assert itself, and again God would have to write: "They ceased not from their own doings nor from their stubborn way." It was repeated failure under the judges; it was failure and ruin and destruction of the nation under the kings. "They ceased not from their own doings nor from their stubborn way." And the indictment written by God against the Jewish nation is one which must be written against the whole race of mankind. Natural desire leads away from God, and stubbornness of heart dulls the ear to God's voice of warning and blinds the eye to the impending judgment.

MAN likes to have his own way, and it is a long sad record of sin which stands against him. God said to Israel: "This is the way, walk ye in it." But Israel said, This is the way I want to walk, and the people walked after the manner of the heathen nations about them. God says to man to-day: "This is the way, walk ye in it." But man says, I want to walk in my own way; I want to be my own master; I want to go when I please and come when I please. The prodigal son liked to have his own way, and so he bundled up his possessions and left his father's house for the far country where there would be no check upon his conduct, and during all those mad days of pleasure he did not cease from his own doings nor from his stubborn way. The rich fool who said within his heart: "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry," lived on the low plane of the physical desires and pleasures. It was enough for him that he had a sumptuous home, that he was clothed and warmed, and could take his ease and fill his belly with good things, and have a jolly good time. He "lived to enjoy life," as so many people put it. Think of man being ruled by the sole motive of self-desire and appetite. And yet how many, many are under such thralldom! The prodigal son wanted the gilded attractions and pleasures of the far country, and he gave up home and friends and everything that his desires might be gratified. The rich fool wanted his ease, he wanted rare wines and rich food, and merry company to help him enjoy his sumptuous home, and he forgot Lazarus at his gate and the outside world and the God Who ruled over all. And people to-day are being dominated by the same self-desire which lured the prodigal son away from home and blinded the rich man to the higher and better part of life. The consciousness of God and eternity is becoming less and less in the world, and this life is filling all the thought and plans and desires.

BUT not only are mere fleshly appetites and desires holding sway over people, but the attainments and ambitions of this life are shutting God out of the heart and life. When it is declared of Israel that "they ceased not from their own doings," I do not imagine we are to understand that all were ruled by the lower animal nature of the appetites and lusts. Doubtless there were many against whom the indictment of God held true, because they were ambitious for worldly wealth, or power, or learning or culture. Here were some who ceased not from their struggle after riches, sacrificing everything else that they might pile up the yellow gold. Others ceased not to covet power, world power. To be a leader, to dominate in the affairs of the community or the state, was the ambition of the life, and by fair means or foul it was to be gratified. Others ceased not to drink at the fountain of the world's so-called wisdom and culture. Their brains were so busy with the thoughts of man, with man's wisdom and learning, that the wisdom of God appeared as foolishness unto them. And it is true to-day that the plans, ambitions, purposes of this life appear all important. Man and his doings seem so necessary, that which this life has to offer appears so tangible and attainable, and God and eternity seem so vague and uncertain, that man forgets God, and the words of His Son: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" And so man ceases not from his own doings. His ways seem to him easiest, most pleasant, most profitable. "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man," and he walks heedlessly and blindly in that way, and will not see the sign posts which God has placed all along the route, which warn the soul that "the end thereof are the ways of death." "Blind leaders of the blind." "Ever learning," as Paul says, "and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." Cardinal Wolsey said of Henry VIII. when on his deathbed: "Rather than he will miss or want any part of his will or appetite, he will put the loss of one-half his realm in danger." And man is staking his precious soul against the pleasures and ambitions and purposes of the present life. This life first, let the soul take its own chances! is what man exclaims.

WHAT an example of God's patience and mercy is Israel. The miraculous hand of God leads them from the bondage of Egypt; it cuts the black waters of the Red sea and makes a broad, smooth roadway for their feet; it guides them through the wilderness; it feeds them when hungry, and brings forth wells of springing water for their refreshing; it smites the enemies that would harm them; it throws down the Jerichos that block the entrance to the promised land, and gives them possession—and yet, despite all this wonderful leading, despite this faithful protection, the people are stubborn, and persist in going their own way and doing as their feelings prompt them. Why did He not utterly forsake them? Why did He not destroy them as He did the people of Noah's time? We thus ask, as we view all the marvelous history of Israel and God's dealings with them. We think it the mystery of the ages how they could be so blind and stubborn, but oh! we forget that with a more awful blindness, with a more determined stubbornness, we are standing out against God to-day and refusing to have Him rule over us! The light of the twentieth century is thought sufficient to walk by, and God is despised and forgotten. If the revelation of God to Israel was remarkable, if it was positive and clear, what think you is the revelation of God to the world to-day, which has had the God Man dwell among them and fulfill all of God's wonderful plan of salvation by which man may get back to God? Israel's God hovered over them in the cloudy pillar, He dwelt in the Holy of Holies in the Temple, but now the veil of that temple is rent, and God desires to find a dwelling place in the human heart. Israel is a monument of God's mercy and patience, but redeemed man to-day is the crowning glory of His great love and mercy and patience.

WHY are you not consumed, oh man! oh, woman! as you stubbornly rush headlong in your own doing? Why is it that the judgment of God does not fall and crush your stubborn neck and grind you to powder? Is it because your evil doing and stubborn way have not merited the punishment? No! for "all have sinned," and God's judgment against sin is death. "The soul that sinneth it shall die." "The wages of sin is death." Then why does God wait? It is because "God will have all men to be saved and to come unto the knowledge of the truth." "The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to usward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." The rich man never got into the torments of hell until God exhausted every effort to have him turn from his own way to God's way, and yield his own will to the will of God. While we have "turned every one to his own way," the Lord has laid the sin of our rebelliousness and stubbornness upon His well-beloved Son, and offers through Him forgiveness and salvation. John Wesley once had occasion to reprimand his traveling companion and secretary, John Bradford, and when the latter stubbornly refused to yield, Wesley said: "Then you and I must part." "Very good, sir," replied Bradford. Thus the matter rested until the next morning, when Wesley accosted his old friend, and asked him if he had considered what he had said, that "they must part." "Yes, sir," replied Bradford. "And must we part?" inquired Wesley. "Please yourself, sir," was the reply. "Will you ask my pardon?" rejoined Wesley. "No, sir." "You won't?" "No, sir." "Then I will ask yours!" replied the great-hearted man. And Bradford melted under the example, and wept like a child. And how infinitely greater is the mercy and love and forgiveness of our God towards man! While we were dead in trespasses and sins, Christ died for us. While we are in rebellion against God, He extends to us a pardon, signed with the blood of His dear Son. Oh, this ought to melt the hardest heart.

BUT, thank God! there are some who do cease their own doings and yield their wills to God. There was always a small remnant in Israel which had eyes to see God, and minds to understand Him, and ears to hear Him when He spoke, and hearts willing to do His will. There were seven thousand in Israel who had not bowed the knee to Baal when the prophet Elijah thought he only was left of those who served God. He thought all the rest of israel "ceased not from their own doings, nor from their stubborn way," and there are those in the world to-day who have yielded to God and who realize that His way is best. But this departure from the way of the natural man to the way of God; this yielding of the human will to that of the Divine is progressive. Step by step man breaks away from the natural desires and ambitions, and attains unto that Godlikeness which it is God's purpose should be a matter of growth with every one of His children. The first step is salvation, the new birth. The natural man must be made a new creature in Christ Jesus before he can walk in God's ways.

THE child has to be born before it can breathe and see and feel, and walk and talk. These are experiences which it cannot enjoy until it has been ushered into the sphere of being where these things are possible and natural. So is it with the spiritual creature. The natural man cannot breathe, or see, or feel, or walk, or talk, in the spiritual world, until he has been born into that realm. God's Word declares: "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

The first step, then, by which man leaves his own way and gets into the way of God is when he repents of the sinfulness of his own way and accepts Christ as his sacrifice for sin and as his Saviour from sin. Then does he begin to walk in the spiritual realm, then does he begin to cease his own doing and do the will of God. And the gateway to the new life, Christ, is also the Way of the new life. Christ came into the world, and where man had failed to walk in God's way and to do His will, He perfectly walked and delighted to do His Father's will. And in Christ the soul has its great Exemplar, as well as Saviour. God, Who has said: "This is the way, walk ye in it," points to the Christ, the Saviour of the world, as He speaks. In Him, man can cease from his own doings, but apart from Him man is lost in the darkness of his own sins. God's way and God's will lead straight through this life to Heaven. Man's way and man's will lead to certain destruction. Oh, that men would cease "from their own doings and from their stubborn way!"

Long Trip to Open Safe.

Not so very long ago a safe expert was summoned from New York city all the way to Mexico, with his expenses paid, in order to open a time lock safe in which the mechanism had stopped.

First Artificial Eye.

The Egyptians were the first to make use of artificial eyes. They were made of gold, silver, copper or ivory.

NEW IDEAS IN DRESS.

Modish Trifles That Are Meeting with Favor Among Devotees of Fashion.

Ermine is also imitated in silk and is used for trimmings.

Yokes and sleeves of evening gowns are made of gold net.

Jet chains are relieved here and there with a small bead of gold.

Fringes of other sorts, like chenille, wool and silk, are in for a distinct revival.

Insects in jewels and in jeweled gun metal are worn as corsage and hair ornaments.

Moleskin and chinchilla are very successfully imitated in a fine quality of plush.

A new style of hand mirror shows one side ordinary glass and the other magnifying.

Some of the large collars are hemmed with chenille and trimmed with lace of the same hue.

Panne de chine is a new stuff, which lends itself to trimmings of tea gowns and to many other uses.

An extreme mode of Parisian origin is the trimming of gowns and mantles with fringes made of fur.

A belt novelty is one of crushed leather with metal medallions united by chains in imitation of metal girdles.

Ermine is employed as a trimming for all descriptions of garments and is frequently mingled with mink and chinchilla.

The Henri Deux hat, with pointed peak, high crown, and sharply turned up brim at the back, is greatly in favor just now.

Spangled robes appear in brilliant colorings such as red, blue and gold, the sequins being closely massed in Van Dyke effect.

Becomingness is the first rule with regard to a veil, and for general wear the most becoming is a fine diamond-meshed net, without spots.

Navy blue is a leading color and a relieving note is introduced in pipings, facings, strappings and machine stitching in fawn, ivory and white.

A heavy machine stitchery is being largely employed as decoration on the latest tailor mades of best repute. It is in the nature of an ordinary stitch worked with a very loose tension, and in close lines.

HIS PRESCRIPTION.

School Trustee Knew What Was Best for the Tired Teacher to Do.

The school trustee was not popular with the teachers, but somehow the voters seemed to like him. He was very old fashioned, but he secured results. He was strict and gruff, and there was no foolishness that he could prevent, writes Elliott Flower, in Brooklyn Eagle.

The teacher thought she needed a rest from her strenuous labors.

"You may resign," he told her in his severely practical way.

But she didn't want to resign; she merely wanted a rest, with the assurance that she would not lose her rank in the service.

"The procession moves on," he said. "If you step out, you can only fall in again at the rear."

"That isn't fair to me," she insisted. "I have worked for my position."

"Others are also working," he returned. "They have a right to the rank they attain, and it wouldn't be fair to the one who takes your place, if she proves satisfactory, to set her back again as a matter of accommodation to you. We cannot shift back and forth to suit the whim of anyone."

Then the teacher's mother advanced to the attack.

"It that an ironclad rule?" she asked.

"Except in the case of serious illness, yes," he replied.

"This is such a case," said the mother triumphantly. "My daughter is utterly worn out by her duties."

"Do you think so?" inquired the trustee.

"I know it," said the mother. "She is weary at the very beginning of the day; she has spells of faintness and dizziness; she can hardly drag herself to school. Her work is killing her."

"Do you think so?" repeated the trustee.

"I know it," said the mother.

The trustee beckoned her to one side.

"Tell your daughter," he said, to either give up her school and marry the young man or give up the young man and stick to the school. She'll be sadly overworked as long as she tries to give her undivided attention to both."

"Do men find that necessary?"

"Well, love is a temporary aberration with man, but an absorbing, permanent occupation for woman."

Habit of Neatness.

Comparatively few men are distinguished for habits of neatness, yet none can forgive a lack of it in their wives. Yet neatness is one of the rarest of feminine qualities. Early and persistent must be the training which carries the girl into womanhood with her "bump of neatness" well developed. Unless inherently fastidious during school days she is liable to drift into careless habits which she never outgrows. One girl may have a trick of leaving shoes about her room. As a mere tot she was permitted to do this, and as she grew older the untidy custom was never abandoned, for the simple reason that she herself did not notice anything unusual about it, and probably nobody else took the trouble to correct her. Without thinking anything about it, some girls, otherwise above reproach in their personal habits, leave bunches of combings on their dressing tables, while the combs themselves are permitted to retain for days at a time their harvest of dead hairs. This is one of the habits which, when carried into the matrimonial state, sends young husbands back to their clubs.—Chicago American.

ART ENTHUSIASM.

It Did Beat All How Much Animation There Was in the Picture.

When the artist son of John Harper was a art student his father was very much interested in his work. One day he saw a newly finished picture on the easel, relates the New York Times.

"Ah! that's fine," he burst out. "Noel There's lots of life, lots of animation in that my boy. You've struck the right thing now—life and action."

"But, father, I don't understand what you mean."

"Why, that picture has action, movement in it. Look at those horses, rearing and tearing ahead, tugging at the reins—and their riders are standing up in their stirrups, shouting and waving their sabers over their heads—the whole picture is movement and animation. What is it—Napoleon's last charge at Waterloo?"

"No, father, that's your best patch in a strong wind."

Mrs. L. C. Glover, Vice-President Milwaukee, Wis., Business Woman's Association, is another one of the million women who have been restored to health by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was married for several years and no children blessed my home. The doctor said I had a complication of female troubles and I could not have any children unless I could be cured. He tried to cure me, but after experimenting for several months, my husband became disgusted, and one night when we noticed the testimonial of a woman who had been cured of similar trouble through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, he went out and bought a bottle for me. I used your medicine for three and one-half months, improving steadily in health, and in twenty-two months a child came. I cannot fully express the joy and thankfulness that is in my heart. Our home is a different place now, as we have something to live for, and all the credit is due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Yours very sincerely, Mrs. L. C. GLOVER, 916 Grove St., Milwaukee, Wis." DISCIPLES OF CHRIST

Proves to Be the Most Rapidly Growing Religious Body.

Convention Just Held at Detroit Comprised 6,000 Delegates Representing a Membership of 1,200,000.

Nearly 1,300,000 members and 6,000 delegates representing them! These figures give some idea of the importance of the convention of the Christian churches,—or the Disciples of Christ, as they are sometimes called—just concluded at Detroit. Annually the four missionary societies of this great brotherhood gather together. Their churches are entirely independent, but many of them are associated together in contributing to and helping on missionary effort at home and abroad.

This year the societies reported the greatest progress they have ever had. The Disciples of Christ are the most rapidly growing of all religious bodies. During the past year they added over 100,000 to the church, with a net increase of over 33,000 to their ranks. They organized 225 new churches. Although they are strongest in the country districts, and especially in the Mississippi valley, they show a 138 per cent. gain during the past decade in 17 of the largest cities of the United States, and they raised nearly $1,000,000 this year more than last, their total from all sources being $7,135,063. For missionary work carried on by three societies they raised $681,000; for education and benevolent work, $339,000, and for local church work, $6,116,000. In 1809 they numbered one congregation, with a membership of less than 20. Now there are 11,000 congregations—in every state of the union save New Hampshire and Nevada, and in many countries abroad. Generally speaking, they hold the evangelical belief common to most churches, but emphasize the importance of a closer observance of New Testament practice and teaching. They were the first, as they have been the most persistent people in pleading for the union of Christian forces. They take the Bible as their rule of faith and practice, and reject all human creeds and confessions that claim to be authoritative. They have founded 18 high-class colleges and universities, having over 6,000 regular and 900 ministerial students. They have created a great literature and sustain missions in all parts of the world. They are the first people to enter Thibet, the least unoccupied field of the world, with missionaries. All their work is under the control of elective boards, but most of it is carried on under the direction of a few able men. A. McLean is the devoted president of the Foreign Christian Missionary society, and F. M. Raine its secretary. Benjamin L. Smith is the capable secretary of the American Missionary society, and Ranshaw his right hand man. G. W. Muckley is the secretary of the Church Extension society, and George Snively the secretary of the Benevolent association. There is also a board of ministerial relief, and this convention has just taken the important step of appointing a board of evangelization. Women, too, play an important role in this work, the Christian Women's Board of Missions having raised $147,500 last year for the support of their own or the help of the other societies' missions. A feature of their work is the university lectureships which they maintain for instruction in the Bible at four great centers of learning.

Although the annual convention has no legislative control over the churches, it does express the sentiment of the body at large, and it passes some resolutions. This year the business men attending the sessions passed an unusual resolution condemning any tendency of a preacher to dabble in speculative stocks or company promoting. Their explanation was that a preacher, though perfectly sincere, may himself be the tool of sharpers and used as a decoy for wrecking the savings of those who invest in a scheme because they believe in the preacher's honesty and the value of his advice.

The missionaries from the foreign field pleaded for more workers; the great opportunities in the southwest and the great northwest were pointed out by the home society's workers, and it was resolved that $1,000,000 for missionary work should be the cry for next year, when the convention will meet at St. Louis and will erect a building on the world's fair grounds.

You never know a man until he has owed you a debt of honor, either social political or financial.

IN MONOPOLY'S GRIP.

Trusts Are More Rampant Than Ever and the Administration Is Paralyzed.

The anthracite monopoly has a firm hold of he country, and has gradually advanced prices until the increase is over one dollar a ton above the rate charged before the great coal strike was inaugurated. That a complete monopoly exists in the supply of anthracite coal is apparent, for the trust not only controls the vast majority of the mines, but also the railroads that carry the coal to market. The trust makes the price of coal at the mines comparatively low, and charges enormous freight rates. In this way it keeps the independent mine owners at its mercy. The soft coal trust is equally exacting, and has increased the price even more in proportion than the anthracite has been raised. The Hocking Valley coal combine, in which Senator Hanna is interested, has pushed up the price of coal until the demand has fallen off, and the mines are being run on half time, and some have closed down.

In the western states another coal combine has the people at its mercy, so that even that ardent advocate of protective tariff and monopoly, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, says:

"In the public of St. Louis helpless in dealing with the existing corner in coal, a situation that has existed for two years, and takes an aggravated form again as soon as there is a hint of cold weather? Reforms were promised last year, as a result of the strike commission, but conditions in St. Louis have not been improved in the smallest degree. A monopoly here has absolute control. It could place the price at 10 cents a bushel, and would do it but for fear of the wrath of the people. It will charge all that it dares, and it is by no means lacking in audacity. Can the people do nothing to defend themselves against the rapacious and dangerous combine? Coal must be had, cost what it will. The many are trampled under shamefully in this matter. If they are defenseless, the legislature should be called in extra session to provide relief."

Thus this republican newspaper calls for relief from the legislature, when it well knows that these coal monopolies are interstate corporations, and can soon be broken up if President Roosevelt will order his attorney general to prosecute the trust magnates under the criminal section of the anti-trust law. The example of one monopolist in jail would have more effect in suppressing the extortion of the coal and other trusts than all the proceedings under the civil law that can be forced through the courts until doomsday. The two actions against the trusts which the administration relies on for popular approval are the railroad merger suit and the injunction proceedings against the beef combine. Both of these cases are now in the supreme court, and may be decided at the fall term, but is anyone innocent enough to imagine that the decision in these cases will curb the rapacity of the railroads or the beef combine. These two suits are not intended to stop the rapacity of those trusts or to stop other trusts from preying upon the people, but to lull the voters into believing that the republicans are opposed to trusts, and are trying to do everything possible to stop their exactions. No trust has reduced the price or profit on their products since these trust suits have been commenced, neither has the merger of competing lines of railroads been stopped, for new combinations are constantly being reported, and freight rates have been advanced on a majority of the railroads during the past year. It is plain, therefore, that the railroads understand that these suits are harmless.

That the beef combine is still doing business on the old scale, and with increased profits, is shown by the market reports from Omaha and other cattle centers. The New York World, October 15, says:

"For beef steers, the trust pays the producer 25 per cent. less than last year, while charging ten per cent. more to its customers. Profit to the trust increased by 35 per cent.

"For pork the packers pay 40 per cent. less than last year, and charge 15 per cent. more. Increased profit, 55 per cent."

The farmers and stock growers are obliged to send cattle and hogs to market, when ready, if fed beyond that point there is no extra profit. The beef and hog combine fixes the prices to be paid at the stock yards, and is practically the only buyer. The farmers and the consumers are both squeezed by this predatory combine, and all the people are robbed for the benefit of a few men who are piling up millions.

In the meantime the executive of the government seems paralyzed and unnerved by the hypnotic influence of the trusts. With the plain provision of the anti-trust law constantly before them, the law officers of the government stand idle.

All the protected trusts which fatten under the Dingley tariff, while selling goods cheaper to foreigners than to Americans, are with the republican party. Hurrah for the G. O. P!

There are 800 trusts with $14,000,000,000 capital. Whew! No wonder it costs money to live during these Dingley days.

The workingman sells his labor in the cheapest and buys his goods in the dearest market. Cause, tariff on goods but none on labor.

The cost of living is 37 per cent. higher than in 1897, when the Dingley bill was passed. Are your wages 37 per cent. higher?

"The manufacturers and the trusts get the protection and the profits of the tariff—the farmer gets the husks and the bumbug."—Hon. Ben Butterworth, May 14, 1890.

BLUNDER OF REPUBLICANS.

Leaders Are Nearly All Committed to the Notorious Ship-Subsidy Scheme.

The incompetence of the administration in many matters of great importance, especially to the Philippine islands, is shown by a provision of the act of March 8, 1902, which was prepared by the war department and enacted by congress almost verbatim as it came from the president and Secretary Root. The act provides that, after July 1, 1904, all ships engaged in traffic among the islands, or between island ports and the United States, must have an American registry. The entire internal commerce of the islands is now carried on in ships built and owned by foreigners and it will be physically impossible to secure American vessels by July, 1904. There are over 18,000 vessels and boats engaged in this inter-island trade and the enforcement of the law will completely paralize the commerce of the archipelago. After July 1, 1904, however, unless the present law is amended, the only ships which will be permitted to touch at the six ports of entry in the Philippine islands will be those with American registry or with Spanish registry under the terms of the treaty of Paris.

As no ship can obtain American registry unless built in the United States or allowed registry by special act of congress, we may expect to see a stubborn fight by the American ship building interests against a change in the law.

The republican leaders are nearly all committed to the notorious ship subsidy scheme, or in place of that discriminating duties in favor of American built ships, to bolster up our merchant marine, which has so sadly declined under the protective tariff and the republican policy. With the tariff reformed and the enormous protection that the steel trust and the other trusts enjoy, reduced or abolished, the price of the material that enters into the construction of modern ships would be vastly decreased. With the tariff reduced on commodities that include the necessaries of life, the cost of living for all would also be lowered and our artisans and workmen would be quite willing to have their wages proportionately decreased and thus another part of the great cost of building ships would be reduced. Monopoly, backed by high protection is the cause of most of our economic troubles.

BREAK-DOWN OF PROSPERITY.

It Has Never Been Real Prosperity for the People, But for the Trusts.

The republicans are still shouting "prosperity" on the stump. Their bureaus at Washington are busy sending out prosperity statistics and their newspapers are faithfully printing these "facts and figures."

The Boston Transcript of October 23 contains some of this prosperity matter. The headlines of one column read "Prosperity Will Increase;" of another column they read "Prosperity Is Based on a Firm Foundation." But in another column, or rather two columns, are some news matter of another kind. Here are some extracts from one column:

"Chicago, October 22.—Organized labor is facing the greatest wage crisis since the panic of 1893, if the forecast of its leaders is correct. Indications of retrenchment are seen on every hand. It has been estimated that before the close of the year the big employing concerns of the country will have discharged nearly 1,000,000 men, most of them laborers and general utility workers. Of this number the railroads are expected to drop from employment 200,000 men, the mine operators 50,000, the machine shops and iron, steel and tin plate plants 250,000, and the building trades not more than 40,000.

The "prosperity" which has now broken down so conspicuously and which is the result of crop failures or of low prices for farm products, has never been real prosperity. It has been prosperity for the trusts only. The people were better off when prices were lower.

Uncle Sam Held Up.

The Columbian government boldly demands $25,000,000 for the Panama canal concessions and gives the reason for not accepting our offer of $10,000,000 that they need the larger amount. The Colombians evidently think that as we allow ourselves to be held up by most any smooth American and defrauded by our office holders and others at home, that we will stand for a good round squeeze from our South American neighbors. Why does not President Roosevelt see their bluff and at once commence negotiations for the Nicaragua route, which has many advantages over the Panama. Is the administration waiting until the transcontinental railroads give permission to go ahead and build the canal or cease to oppose it? The people of the United States long ago decided that they wanted the Nicaragua canal built and were defeated in their purpose by a senatorial coterie led by Senator Hanna. Has President Roosevelt joined forces with them, or is he opposed to the building of any canal? The law authorized and required him to proceed to acquire the Nicaragua route, if the Colombians rejected our proposition, but he has done nothing.

The Dinley tariff has been a boon to the trusts. How has it treated you?

You pay tariff taxes to 800 trusts—"infants," the republicans call them. Why?

Your tariff taxes are $100 a year. Do you get your money's worth?

Don't blame the trusts! You voted for high prices when you voted for a high tariff.

One of our 800 protected trusts has more capital than have all of the so-called trusts in free trade England.

"Equal rights to all, and special privileges to none," has been good democratic doctrine for 100 years.

THE WRONG SIMILE.

That Is in the Case of a Young Lady Who Was a Scale Breaker.

He kneels at the feet of the heiress.

Now, in order to make plain what is to follow, let us state that the heiress weighs 300 pounds, says Judge. True love, however, we will concede for the sake of argument, knows no waist-lines. And no woman is ever so fat as her fortune. Therefore, to proceed, messieurs.

He kneels, as we have previously said, at the feet of the heiress.

"You are all the world to me!" he exclaims.

"What?" she pants. "You wretch! are you aware of the fact that the equator is the largest diameter of the world?"

In vain does he argue that the equator is an imaginary line. This only makes it worse.

Metaphorically, she sits down on him; metaphorically, he is crushed.

Has He Found It?

Polk, Ark., Nov. 9.—A remedy that will absolutely cure Rheumatism has been discovered by Mr. George Hiland of this place. Mr. Hiland is satisfied that the remedy he has used is a sure cure, for it cured him of a very serious case of Acute Rheumatism when he was so bad that he could not move. This is what he says:—

"I was troubled with what is called Acute Rheumatism in 1900. I was in such shape that I could not move without help. I was treated by a physician, who helped me some, but I was still in great pain when my wife saw Dodd's Kidney Pills advertised as a cure for Rheumatism. She insisted on my trying them, and I felt better after taking the first box. I continued, and now I am well and able to work all the time. I have found Dodd's Kidney Pills to be just what they are claimed to be, a perfect cure for Rheumatism."

Mr. Hiland's very positive statement seems to settle all doubt as to whether or not Rheumatism can be cured.

MARSHALL FIELD AND CO.'S WAREHOUSE MANAGER

Cured of Catarrh of Kidneys by Pe-ru-na.

HON. JOHN T. SHEAHAN, OF CHICAGO.

Hon. John T. Sheahan, who has been for seventeen years manager of Marshall Field & Co.'s wholesale warehouse, and is corporal 2d Regiment Infantry, I. N. G., writes the following letter from 3753 Indiana avenue, Flat Six, Chicago, Ill.:

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen:—"Last summer I caught a cold which seemed to settle in my kidneys and affected them badly. I tried a couple of kidney remedies largely advertised, but they did not help me any. One of my foremen told me of the great help he had received in using Peruna in a similar case, and I at once procured some.

"It was indeed a blessing to me, as I am on my feet a large part of the day, and trouble such as I had affected me seriously, but four bottles of Peruna cured me entirely and I would not be without it for three months salary."—JOHN T. SHEAHAN.

Mr. Jacob Fleig writes from 44 Sumner avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.:

"I am now a new man at the age of seventy-five years, thanks to your wonderful remedy Peruna."—Jacob Fleig.

Catarrhal inflammation of the mucous lining of the kidneys, also called "Bright's disease," may be either acute or chronic. The acute form produces symptoms of such prominence that the serious nature of the disease is at once suspected, but the chronic variety may come on so gradually and insidiously that its presence is not suspected until after it has fastened itself thoroughly upon its victims.

At the appearance of the first symptom Peruna should be taken. This remedy strikes at once at the very root of the disease.

More than 60,000,000 bushels of corn, more than 50,000,000 bushels of wheat, live stock to the value of $32,000,000, hay to the value of $12,000,000, and products of the mines above $12,000,000 are some of the returns from South Dakota for 1903. With a population of 450,000 and the production of new wealth for 1903 above $146,000,000 it can be readily understood why South Dakota people are prosperous and happy. BOONE CO., RECORDER
Wednesday, - - Nov. 11, 1903.
W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

FOR the first time in its history the annual budget of New York will exceed the sum of $100,000,000.

THE result of the election in Maryland gave Senator Gorman's presidential boom a tremendous boost.

SOME of the defeated candidates in the city of Louisville will contest the election of their opponents.

LET everybody settle down to business now, for in a few months the presidential election will be in full swing.

WHEN it comes to collecting and compiling election returns, the Louisville Courier Journal has no competitor in Kentucky.

HAD Buckner, Owens and Beckner had a month more in which to make speeches, Beckham's election would have been unanimous.

THE fight between Dr. Hunter and Edwards, opposing candidates for Congress in the Eleventh Congressional District goes merrily on.

WITH President Roosevelt and Senator Hanna both candidates for the Presidential nomination there would be a hot old time in the g. o. p.

IT would be interesting to know what some of Judge Tarvin's friends who bolted a Democratic nominee for Governor a few years ago, now think of bolters.

FROM the Republican majority rolled up in Ohio at the last election it looks like about all the voters over there stood pat as Senator Hanna requested.

TWELVE thousand men laid off in Chicago because of abnormal wage demands by unions; 7,000 others to be dropped by International Harvester company.

BOONE did nothing to assist in giving Beckham his increased majority on the 3d inst. Had other counties followed the pace she set, Belknap would have won. Don't do it any more.

THE overwhelming Republican majority in Ohio, on the 3d inst., gave Senator Hanna a presidential boom of such a volume that it will be difficult for him to refuse to enter the campaign for the nomination.

THERE was too much ex-Democrats in the recent campaign to suit the old line Republicans. It did seem that the fellows who gave the Democrats so much trouble a few years since came pretty nearly having charge of the Republican campaign.

THE special Congressional election was held in the Eleventh District yesterday. The Republicans had gotten things into such a tangle, that there is no doubt but what Congress will be called on to decide the election, no matter what the face of the returns show.

GOV. BECKHAM will be inaugurated on Tuesday, December 8th; the law requiring that the Governor be inaugurated on the fifth Tuesday after the election. History gives no account of a man as young as Gov. Beckham having been twice elected and inaugurated Governor of this State.

BY some carelessness on the part of railroad postal clerks, a considerable portion of the RECORDER mail was returned to the Burlington postoffice at noon, last Thursday. The packages, all in good order, left here on time last Wednesday, and the papers should have reached the subscribers on time, had they been properly handled.

THE election returns were received at Riddell & Crisler's store on the evening of the 3d inst., the crowd being composed of both Republicans and Democrats. The first news from Louisville, read. "Louisville gone for Beckham by 6000." In two minutes after this announcement not a Republican could be found in the crowd. For an hour the Democrats felt jubilant, but their teeth began to chatter when a dispatch was received, reading: "Belknap has carried the city of Louisville by 4000." The uncomfortable feeling this dispatch caused stayed with the boys until about 11 o'clock, when the news came that the election of Beckham was no longer in doubt, and all went home in good pirits.

"Everybody ought to know," says the "Family Doctor," "that the very best thing they can do is to eat apples just before retiring for the night. The apple is an excellent brain-food, because it has more phosphoric acid in it, easily digested shape than any other fruit. It excites the action of the liver, promotes sound and healthful sleep, thoroughly disinfects the mouth, and prevents indigestion and throat diseases."

THE leaders of the Lilly White element of the Republican party in the South are jubilant over the outcome of the elections, and openly declare that the results in New York, Maryland, and Kentucky are a rebuke to President Roosevelt and his policies. On the other hand, they assert that the sweeping Republican victory in Ohio is the result of Senator Hanna's strength with the people and marks him as the man for the Republican Presidential nomination. They claim that under the leadership of Roosevelt the Republican party has been led to an abyss where it may well stop and consider the means whereby its overthrow may be checked.

THE farmers along Chesapeake Bay, in Mathews County, Md., have been visited by a new peril in the form of phosphorescent light which rises from the storm-tossed waters at night, lashing the sea with ribbons of fire that lure the cattle, browsing in the marshes to their death. The phenomenon appeared first on the night of a recent wind storm. A stiff gale had set the tide billowing in toward the pastures, which are always more or less submerged, and as the water rose the flashes of phosphorescent light began to glow stronger and stronger. From kneedeep the sea rose to the shoulders of the startled animals, completely enveloping them in a cloud of shifting, tremulous light.

The following dispatch from New Liberty, of date Oct. 8th, appeared recently in the Chicago Saturday Blade:

"This town boasts of a new club known as the "Never Sweats" which has just gone into winter quarters. The main features and by-laws are: Sit down every opportunity you have; never do anything to-day that you can put off until to-morrow; if business and pleasure interfere with each other, let business go and take pleasure; use deliberation in all things.

"No member is allowed to sweat. If he does he is fined a buckettul of ice water or turned out of the club. The password is, 'Sit Down.' Jake McNeal is president of the club.

"It is also conceded that the sun's germs are contagious and no member is permitted to sit in the sun. Any one who has a patch on the seat of his pants is eligible to membership. The badge worn is a patch on the seat of the member's pants."

THE following very pertinent editorial is from the Blue Grass Clipper:

"The Clipper said some time since that it was of the opinion that the Ewen business had been sadly overworked to the great disgust of thousands of Kentuckians. We had hoped this hero, if hero he can be truthfully called, had subsided into peaceful quiet after being so handsomely remembered by the good people of the State. Not so. He is now out on a lecturing tour, telling the people of his troubles and further exploiting before the country the shame and disgrace of his section of the State for the sole purpose of adding to his pocketbook. He was shrewd enough to know that he would get the best hearing at the North where the people are anxious to believe every evil tale they hear about the bluegrass State. His lecture would have been a miserable failure in the South. Ewen has demonstrated the fact that he is not made of the stuff that true heroes are made of. Instead of showing his appreciation of the great kindness the Kentuckians have bestowed upon him by quietly settling down to honest toil, using the means that had been given him to again get a footing in the struggle with the world, he now goes forth to tell the people of the North how vile and bad they are "down in Kentucky." Shame on Ewen and the men who are backing him in his lecture business."

ONE of the afternoon papers in Louisville carried about four columns of editorial the day before the election on a subject out of which it imagined it was making considerable capital, but when the people of Kentucky answered it the next day, a brilliant editor saw where he mistook the temper of the public.

Whether fall or spring pigs are the most desirable generally, depends upon local circumstances. However, this does not change the care that should be given to the brood sow. In many cases the animal is bred too young, under eight months old, and is weakened in consequence for several years, if not for all time. The brood sow should be neither thin nor fat; if too fat, the litter is likely to be a small one, and if too thin, the sow is either lacking in vitality or is unable properly to suckle her pigs. The corn ration should be small, the foods given mainly those that will form muscle. Particularly should attention be paid to the food if the animal is bred twice each year. The brood sow, well cared for, should be able to produce good litters for five or six years.

An authority on sheep says that grubs in sheep are as natural as hair on the tail of a horse, and the best way to care for them is to let them alone. Sheep raisers whose animals have been troubled with grubs in the head will not agree with this method, perhaps, but there is no doubt but what there is too much unskilled treatment of sheep for this pest, and much of the treatment is cruel in the extreme. There is no doubt but what good care and proper feed makes the sheep strong enough to resist the attacks of grubs, and unless the case is very bad little attention should be paid to grubs. There is no way of getting the pest out of the flock entirely. If one has a bad case in the flock and the animal is valuable it will pay to put it in the hands of a skilled veterinarian for treatment. Do not use the often advised method of running wires up the nostrils of the animals in a vain endeavor to pierce the grubs.

What to Do Until the Doctor Arrives.

"One of my children was taken with cramp colic and suffered severely," says S. B. Elzee, of Monett, Mo. The conduct of a couple of young men, who traveled the road from Constance towards Burlington, last Sunday afternoon, was very annoying to a lady traveling that road alone, and remarks of the character of that made by one of the young men the last time the lady passed them, has been known to result in serious trouble. The lady says she knows the names of the impertinent young men.

A Carpenter Caught on a Fly.

Jack Eddins, who is assisting Henry Quick build the barn at the county infirmary came near having a serious accident one day last week. Jack was putting on the rafters when he fell and Henry Quick, who is an old base ball player happened to be near by and caught him as he descended. Even had Henry muffed Jack the force of the fall would have been broken.

A Severe Blow on the Head.

While raising Dr. Crisler's barn, last Friday afternoon, a 12 foot 5x7 inch scantling struck W. J. Rice, knocking him down. A considerable gash was cut on the crown of his head, he thinks by the falling timber, while Elmer Beall and Kirb Tanner, who were working with him think his head struck a foundation stone that made the wound. He bled profusely, and both doctors being out of town it was some time before it was dressed, Dr. Duncan doing the work. He has been pretty sore but has been about all the time.

Interview.

A reporter of the RECORDER had quite an interesting chat with Mr. F. H. Hermes, who was at Walton, last week, with the Langdon Creasey Co.'s store at that place, in the Opera House building. Mr. Hermes said, among other things: "The opening of one of our stores should be hailed with delight by the people of Boone county. To trade with us means to save from 20 to 30 per cent. How is that possible? First of all, we buy direct from the manufacturer, in large quantities. This naturally means that we can buy much cheaper than the small grocer, who must pay the jobber's profit, besides their traveling men's expenses. Then, we buy for cash and sell for cash AND CASH ONLY. We credit nobody—make no exceptions—rich and poor are all treated alike by us. In this way there are no bad debts accumulated, which the honest customer must NECESSARILY MAKE UP, when trading with the LONG TIME CREDIT man. It would be doing the credit merchant an injustice to expect him to sell as cheap as our store does. He simply can't do it. Of course he may meet the price that we make on one or two items, his aim being to make up the difference on the other articles, but people can not be tooled by any such method. They generally look into the matter a little closer, and when they do that they find that in order to save money they must trade at the Langdon-Creasey Co.'s store.

It's shameful when youth fails to show proper respect for old age, but just the contrary in the case of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They cut off maladies no matter how severe and irrespective of old age. Dyspepsia, jaundice, Fever, Constipation, all yield to this perfect Pill. 25c at All Druggists.

A Sad Accident.

A very sad accident occurred in Big Bone Grange Hall neighborhood, last Sunday before noon. The two little sons of Joseph Love were out hunting with a flobert rifle. Willie, aged 10 years, was walking behind his brother, who was carrying the gun across his shoulder, cocked. The gun was accidentally discharged, the bullet lodging in Willie Love's head near the top His brother, frightened almost to death, ran to the nearest house and told of the accident, and in a short time several of the neighbors were on the scene of the accident. The little boy, in an unconscious condition, was taken home, to which place the news of the distressing accident had preceded him. Dr. Crouch, of Union, was summoned and as soon as he examined the wound he saw it was of the most serious nature, and could give the distracted parents no encouragement. Last night at 7 o,clock the child was alive.

Stomach Trouble.

A Close Call.

Thos. Rouse's barn came very near being burnt, Monday. Fodder was being stored in it, and about the time the last bundle was put in a blaze busted out of the bundle from some unknown cause. Stepped Against a Hot Stove.

A child of Mrs. Geo. T. Benson when getting his usual Saturday night bath, stepped back against a hot stove which burned him severely. The child was in great agony and his mother could do nothing to pacify him. Remembering that she had a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house, she thought she would try it. In less than half an hour after applying it the child was quiet and asleep, and in less than two weeks was well. Mrs. Benson is a well known resident of Kellar, Va. Pain Balm is an antiseptic liniment and especially valuable for burns, cuts, bruises and sprains. For sale by all druggists.

The movement for independence has been in progress since the rejection by the congress at Bogota of the Hay-Herran canal treaty, but its sudden ripening Tuesday night was due to the news of the unexpected arrival at Colon of the Colombian gunboat Cartagena with Gens. Tovar and Amaya and a number of troops.

Washington, Nov. 5.—The state department Wednesday received a prompt request from the representatives of the revolutionary government at Panama that the United States recognize the new state of Panama, but pending official advices from our consular officers at Panama, that a new government has been established and is a defacto government, the state department declined to commit itself at present.

Colon, Colombia, Nov. 6—After a conference Thursday afternoon, Col. Torres, commander of the Colombian troops here, seeing that the situation was hopeless, agreed to embark his soldiers on the royal mail steamer Orinoco, sailing for Cartagena, at 6 p. m. A special train from Panama will bring Gen. Tenar, who will also sail on the Orinoco. The arrangement to this end was made through the efforts of Commander Hubbard, of the United States gunboat Nashville, Superintendent Shaler and Assistant Superintendent Prescott, of the Panama railroad, who guarantee that both parties will fulfill the agreement.

Washington, Nov. 6.—The departure of the troops from Colon greatly relieves the seriousness of the situation and the arrival of the Dixie Thursday night relieved the general apprehension here regarding the safety of American lives and property in Panama.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The United States has recognized the new republic of Panama as a de facto government. This action was agreed upon at the cabinet meeting Friday. Instructions in accordance therewith were cabled at once to Minister Beaupre at Bogota and to Vice Consul General Ehrman at Panama. They will be ordered to notify the republic of Colombia and the republic of Panama of the action of the United States.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The secretary of state made the following statement Friday in regard to affairs on the Isthmus of Panama:

"The action of the president in the Panama matter is not only in the strictest accordance with the principles of justice and equity, and in line with all the best precedents of our public policy, but it was the only course he could have taken in compliance with our treaty rights and obligations. By our treaty, entered into with New Granada in the year 1846, New Granada guarantees that 'the right of way or transit across the Isthmus of Panama upon any modes of communication that now exist or that may be hereafter constructed, shall be free and open to the government and citizens of the United States.'

"This is a right which we acquired by the treaty not gratuitously conferred, but in return for an important compensation, for in the same article the government of the United States guarantees 'positively and efficaciously to New Granada by the present stipulation the perfect neutrality of the before mentioned isthmus with the view that the free transit from the one to the other sea may not be interrupted or embarrassed in any future time while this treaty exists; and in consequence the United States guarantees in like manner the rights to sovereignty and property which New Granada has and possesses over the said territory.'

"The close connection thus created between the two governments was well set forth by President Polk, in his message transmitting the treaty to the senate. He said:

"'The importance of the concession to the commercial and political interests of the United States can not be overrated. The route by the Isthmus of Panama is the shortest between the two oceans and from the information herewith communicated it would seem to be the most practicable for a railroad or canal. The vast advantages to our commerce which would result from such a communication not only with the west coast of America, but with Asia and the islands of the Pacific, are too obvious to require another detail. Such a passage would save you from a long and dangerous navigation of more than nine thousand miles around the Horn and render our communication with our own possessions on the northwest coast of America comparatively easy and speedy. The treaty does not propose to guarantee a treaty to a foreign nation in which the United States will have no common interest with that nation. On the contrary, we are more deeply and directly interested in the subject of the guarantee than New Granada herself or any other country.'

"The control in the interest of the commerce and traffic of the whole civilized world, of the means of undisturbed transit across the Isthmus of Panama, has become of transcendent importance to the United States. The right to this control we have never forfeited by any laxity of our own, either in the assertion of our rights or in the performance of our duty under the treaty. In 1853 Mr. Everett assured the Peruvian minister that we should not hesitate to maintain the neutrality of the isthmus in the case of war between Peru and Colombia. In 1864 Colombia, which has always been vigilant to avail itself of its privilege conferred by the treaty, expressed its expectation that in the event of war between Peru and Spain the United States would carry into effect the guarantee of neutrality. There have been few administrations of the state department in which this treaty has not, either by the one side or the other, been used as a basis of more or less important demands.

"In 1856, when Colombia was under the menace of hostilities from Italy in the Cerruti case, Mr. Bayard expressed the serious concern that the United States could not but feel that as a European power should resort to force against a sister republic of this hemisphere as to the sovereign and uninterrupted use of part of whose territory we are guarantors under the solemn faith of a treaty. The United States has not only constantly protected Colombia from foreign invasion on the strength of the rights and the duties created by the treaty of 1846, but has time and again intervened to preserve the freedom of traffic from disturbance in the course of domestic dissension. In these cases we have intervened some times at the suggestion of Colombia, some times on our own impression of the necessities of the case, but always to the profit of Colombia as well as of universal commerce."

Washington, Nov. 9.—It was learned in official circles Sunday night that the United States of Colombia has lodged a protest with the state department against the action of the United States in connection with the events which have occurred on the Isthmus of Panama. The terms of the protest could not be ascertained Sunday night, but it is known that strong objections is made to the attitude of the United States in general and against interpretations made by this government of the treaty of 1846 between the United States of America and the United States of Colombia. The state department has the protest under serious consideration but the nature of its reply, if any, or the time when it will be made is not known.

Word reached the navy department Sunday of the arrival of the United States cruiser Boston at Panama Saturday. Commander Diehl, in reporting her arrival, announcing also the receipt of instructions from the navy department which directs the keeping open of the transit of the Isthmus. He also said that at this time the traffic was undisturbed.

The president's yacht, the Mayflower, left the navy yard here Sunday for Colon. Aboard her is Consul General H. A. Gudger, the United States consul general at Panama, who goes to that place to assume full charge of the American consular affairs.

Adm. John G. Walker, president of the isthmian canal commission, also was a passenger on the Mayflower. His departure was considerable of a surprise, no announcement to this effect having been heretofore and the news of his going to Panama being given out by Secretary Moody when he came from the white house at midnight. Adm. Walker, it is stated, goes to Panama for the purpose of observing conditions on the ground and reporting to the president on the situation and on any changes that have occurred since the isthmian canal commission made its last report.

Rr. Adm. Joseph B. Coghlan, who is to assume command of the naval forces on the Atlantic side of the isthmus, was also on the Mayflower.

The Mayflower is expected to reach her destination in about eight days. On his arrival at Panama, Mr. Gudger will do business with the new government at Panama. He has full instructions from the secretary of state governing his dealings with the new government. M. Philippe Burnau-Varilla, whose appointment as diplomatic agent of the Panama republic was announced Saturday, and who reached here Saturday night from New York, saw Assistant Secretary Loomis, of the state department, Sunday. It is expected that the new diplomatic agent will be presented to Secretary Hay and to the president in a day or two, the state department probably accepting as satisfactory the telegraphic credentials of the new envoy and waiving the usual requirements of mere formal credentials. The envoy did not see the president or Secretary Hay Sunday.

SECRETARY ROOT ARRIVES.

Thinks It Will Not Be Necessary to Send Troops to Panama.

New York, Nov. 9.—"Yes, there is a possibility that troops may have to be sent to the isthmus," said Secretary of War Root in speaking of the Panama situation on his arrival from Europe Sunday. "There always is a possibility; that is what the army is for, but he declined to be quoted, pleading lack of information about the situation but he readily acoabrdiu aounrsa. tion, but he read eagerly a number of press dispatches which were shown him on the steamer, commenting on the statement of Secretary Hay and the instructions cabled to the minister at Bogota and the acting consul at Panama that "this is very interesting, very, very."

NAVAL SUPPLY FUND.

The Paymaster General Recommends That It Be Increased.

Washington, Nov. 9.—Urgent recommendation is made by Rr. Adm. H. T. B. Harris, in his first annual report as paymaster general of the navy, for an increase in the naval supply fund to enable the bureau of supplies and accounts to respond promptly to the numerous emergency calls which it receives from the navy. The present fund of $2,700,000, the paymaster declares, is totally inadequate to fulfill the purpose for which it was authorized and he recommends that it be increased to $4,000,000. To further augment the fund he asks that the proceeds of all condemned and obsolete supplies, with a few exceptions, be carried to its credit.

Cortelyou as secretary of the department of commerce and labor." Secretary Cortelyou, it is said, has decided not again to be the head of the department and may go back to the position of private secretary to the president.

The most valuable were an artistic diadem enrrusted with precious stones, a belt of solid gold, and several rings of beautiful shapes. There was also found a number of coins of different values. The government authorities took possession of the treasures on the ground that it was national property, but they will compensate the proprietor of the estate according to an estimate which will be made by experts.

FAR EASTERN QUESTION.

Russia and Japan Have Not Come to a Settlement as Yet.

Yokohama, Nov. 9.—It is said in official circles at Tokio that the rumor that negotiations between the Russian and Japanese governments had come to the verge of a final settlement is misleading, but that the Tokio government is now awaiting Russia's reply, which is due at any moment, but which will only advance the question of the far eastern difficulty to another stage.

CONGRESS CONVENES.

Both Houses Organize For Business of Extra Session.

Old Officers of the House Were Re-Elected and Sworn In—The Speaker Administered the Oath to the New Members.

Washington, Nov. 9.—The first week of the extra session will be devoted to the usual preliminaries of a new session of congress. The program for the week is to have four brief sessions and an adjournment on Thursday until the following Monday. Monday there was the usual roll call of senators and the proclamation of the president calling the congress in extraordinary session was read. These were followed by the appointment of a committee to notify the president that a quorum of the senate has met and is ready to receive any communication he has to make. On Tuesday the president's message will be received and read. Adjournment will follow its reading as a caucus of republican senators is to be held in the afternoon. Wednesday will be devoted largely to the introduction of bills and Thursday will be a short legislative session, unless discussion of the Panama situation is precipitated by the introduction of resolutions asking for information. It is the intention of Senator Morgan to introduce resolutions on the subject, and these may be discussed under the rules on the day following their presentation. The republican members of the senate will interpose no objection to a discussion of the Panama and canal questions, but it is not likely that any action will be taken until after the committees are reorganized.

The house of representatives was called to order at noon Monday by Alexander McDowell, the clerk. The proclamation of the president convening congress in extraordinary session having been read, prayer was offered by the chaplain, and then the roll was called by states. Mr. Cannon, who has been selected as the unanimous choice of his party for speaker, was formally elected. After the oath of office was administered to him by the "Father of the House," a title bestowed upon the member who has seen the longest continuous service, the speaker administered the oath to the members generally. The old officers of the house having been made the nominees of the republican caucus, were re-elected and sworn in. Speaker Cannon appointed a committee to a joint committee of the senate to notify the president that a quorum of the two houses had assembled, and that congress was ready to receive any communication he may desire to make.

After adopting resolutions agreed on in the republican caucus making the rules of the 57th congress, the rules of the 58th congress, and fixing an hour for the convening of the daily sessions, the drawing of seats took place. The necessary preliminary work having been disposed of, the house adjourned out of respect to the memory of members who have died.

On Tuesday the house will listen to the reading of the president's message. For the remainder of the week little can be accomplished, but it is understood to be the desire of the house leaders that consideration of the question of reciprocal trade with Cuba be pushed as rapidly as possible.

Chicago's First Railway Half Century.

Under the above heading the Railway Age, in referring to the recent centennial celebration of the city of Chicago, said:

The world had not heard of railways in 1803. It was about 25 years after the starting of Chicago before the first locomotive went into service in the United States. As early as 1836 a few far-seeing men among the pioneers in the country between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi river determined that a railway ought to be built to Galena, an ambitious town in the lead mining regions, 170 miles to the northwest of this point. They secured a charter for the Galena & Chicago Union railroad, giving Galena the honor of precedence in the title, because it was the more important place. Why was it determined that the first railroad should start for Galena from this little town on Lake Michigan? Simply because there were a few men here of the railway building spirit. These men might have started a Chicago at some other point on the lake more attractive by nature than this. The pioneer railway was to determine the location of the greatest railway center in the world, and when William B. Ogden and his associates determined that here should be the starting point of the railway to unite Galena with the lake, they did the thing which made Chicago.

It was 12 years after the charter was granted before the first piece of road was completed. The panic of 1837 stopped the surveys, and construction was not begun until 1847, but on November 20, 1848, the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad ran its first train from Chicago west to Harlem, 10 miles. Within three years it had reached Elgin, 43 miles, and by 1854 had been extended to Freeport, 120 miles westerly from Chicago, where it stopped for good. The Galena road never reached Galena. The gap of 61 miles between Freeport and the original goal of its ambition was substantially filled by the construction of the Illinois Central on its way to Dubuque, and the Galena & Chicago Union company, having decided on a more direct line to the Mississippi river, built the "Dixon Air Line" from Turner Junction on the old road, 30 miles west of Chicago, on to the Mississippi, which was reached at the end of 1855. The pioneer road had built a branch, from Belvidere, Ill., into Wisconsin and was proposing an extension to the northwest when a competitor, under the name of the Chicago, St. Paul & Fond du Lac, began to build a road direct from Chicago into the same Wisconsin territory. That road became the Chicago & Northwestern, and its line now forms the Wisconsin division of the present company. In 1864 the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad company was consolidated with the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company and disappeared from the scene of action. In 1866 the Chicago & Northwestern absorbed the Chicago & Milwaukee and Milwaukee & Chicago railroad companies, which had built a line between the places named in their titles, and this was the origin of the Milwaukee division of the Northwestern road. The Chicago & Northwestern system and the entire railway system of the Northwest therefore, started in 1848 from the Galena & Chicago Union road, and it was fitting that to commemorate the inauguration of the tremendous interest to which Chicago owes so much the city should place in the wall of the modern Northwestern Railway station a tablet marking the site of the first railway depot in Chicago.

Wise.

Though worth several millions, Hugh McLaughlin, the Brooklyn democratic boss, spends very little money on himself, his clothing at times being absolutely shabby. His chief tailor is James Sheviln, a relative by marriage and a dealer in shoes, says a New York exchange. "Come over to my store," said Sheviln one day, "and get you a pair of good shoes made." The old man demurred at first, but finally consented and was measured for a line pair. Shortly afterward he received a bill for $12, just about three times as much as he is accustomed to pay for footwear. He looked at the document gravely for a minute, wrote across the face of it: "Collect from Sheviln; he's responsible," resealed it to the sender and heard nothing more about the matter.

Which?

The president had an informal reception in his office recently and a number of visitors were presented to him. One lady introduced herself as from Jacksonville, Fla., and said: "Mr. President, I have come all this way just to see you. I have never seen a live president before." Mr. Roosevelt seemed much amused. "Well, well," he said. "I hope you don't feel disappointment now that you have seen one. Lots of people in these parts go all the way to Jacksonville to see a live alligator. I wonder which kind of a tourist feels the most sold."

HAPPY WOMEN.

Mrs. Pare, wife of C. B. Pare, a prominent resident of Glasgow, Ky., says: "I was suffering from a complication of kidney troubles. Besides a bad back, I had a great deal of trouble with the secretions, which were exceedingly variable, sometimes excessive and at other times scanty. The color was high, and passages were accompanied with a scalding sensation. Doan's Kidney Pills soon regulated the kidney secretions, making their color normal and banished the inflammation which caused the scalding sensation. I can rest well, my back is strong and sound and I feel much better in every way."

THREE LANDSLIDES.

TAMMANY'S PLURALITY IS 63,617

Gov. Beckham Elected by the Largest Majority Given Gubernatorial Candidate in Kentucky For Years.

Gov. Cummins' Plurality in Iowa is 80,802—The Entire Democratic Ticket in Maryland Was Elected By About 8,000.

OHIO.

Cincinnati, Nov. 4.—Complete returns from the city of Cincinnati give Herrick 44,149, Johnson 17,335, a plurality for Herrick of 26,814, making a republican gain of over 11,000. The entire republican ticket of Hamilton county is elected, including three senator and ten representatives. The republicans carried every one of the 24 wards of the city.

Cleveland, Nov. 4.—At midnight Chairman Salen, of the democratic state executive committee, conceded the county to be republican by 5,000 majority. He also conceded the election of the entire republican county and legislative ticket. At the same time Mayor Johnson sent a message of congratulation to Col. Herrick on his election.

Columbus, O., Nov. 5.—The republican plurality in Ohio is about 115,000 for governor and the majority in the legislature on joint ballot for senator is 92.

Chairman Dick, of the republican state committee, who Wednesday secured reports from all his 88 county committees and Wednesday night announced that Herrick, rep., had carried 62 counties and Johnson, dem., 26 for governor, most of the latter by small and the former by large pluralities. On a total vote of less than 800,000 Herrick's pluralities in the counties aggregate 153,122, and Johnson's 20,476, so that Herrick has a net plurality in the state of 114,798 on estimates that may be increased from one to two thousand by the official count. The plurality on the rest of the republican state ticket will likely be from four to five thousand less than that for Herrick. The total vote for Johnson was less than that for any democratic candidate for governor for years.

On the legislative ticket, the democrats carried four less counties than for governor, or less than one-fourth, as follows: Adams-Pike, Allen, Ashland, Holmes, Auglaize, Brown, Darke, Fairfield, Henry, Marion, Mercer, Monroe, Ottawa, Pickaway, Putnam, Sandusky, Seneca, Shelby, Wayne and Wyandotte. In addition, the democrats carried Richland, Coshocton and Licking counties for their state ticket.

Of the senatorial districts, the democrats carried only the 32d, 31st, 28th and 17th. The senate stands 25 republicans, 4 democrats; majority, 25.

The house stands 83 republicans and 21 democrats; majority 62. The majority on joint ballot for the re-election of Senator Hanna will be 92. These figures will not be changed by the official returns. The counties carried by the democrats were all in the rural districts, all of the larger cities being in the counties that gave republican pluralities. The republicans carried every county that they had two years ago except Sandusky, which is strongly democratic, and they carried other counties that they did not have two years ago or any other year. They carried all the senatorial districts in which they won in the tidal wave two years ago and others that they never had before.

Secretary Richardson, of the democratic state committee, said that the result in his opinion was due to the fear of single tax and two cent fare.

"These two things cost the ticket thousands of votes all over the state. The voters were afraid of the two cent fare proposition and argued that to reduce the railroad fare would be to force a reduction in the wages of the railroad workers."

KENTUCKY.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 5.—Returns which are complete, save for a few scattered precincts in remote parts of the state, give Gov. Beckham, dem., for governor, a majority of 30,408 over Morris B. Belknap, his republican opponent in Tuesday's balloting. The missing precincts are both republican and democratic strongholds, yet the assertion seems warranted that the governor's majority will not be less than 25,000. This is the largest majority given a democratic gubernatorial candidate in 15 years.

Returns from the mountainous country comprising the 11th district give Belknap a majority of 15,363, with two or three precincts yet to be heard from. This indicates a falling off in the republican vote in this district usually returning about 20,000 majority for that party. Gov. Beckham's total vote, according to Wednesday night's incomplete figures is 45,761.

Although the socialist and socialist-labor parties had full tickets in the field, their vote was so small that it was disregarded in the count.

The republicans are preparing charges of fraud alleged to have been perpetrated in Louisville, which they will probably present to the grand jury in a few days.

Following are the majorities of counties as far as heard from:

NEW YORK.

New York, Nov. 5.—By a vote so overwhelming that it assumed the proportions of a landslide the democratic ticket was swept to victory in Greater New York.

The greater city gave to Col. George B. McClellan, the democratic candidate for mayor, a plurality of 63,617. His two principal running mates—Controller Edward M. Grout and Charles V. Fornes, president of the board of aldermen, both candidates for re-election—ran ahead of the ticket in each of the five boroughs. McClellan received 314,906 votes in the five boroughs against 254,289 for the mayor, Low. The greater city gave Controller Grout 315,287 votes, against 248,491 for Hinrichs, the fusion candidate—a democratic plurality of 66,796. Mitchell K. Erlanger, democratic candidate for sheriff of New York county, was elected by 165,067 votes, against 119,569 for Trautman.

The pluralities on mayor, controller, president of the board of aldermen in the several boroughs were:

Manhattan and the Bronx: McClellan, 56,529; Grout, 57,948; Fornes, 57,188. Brooklyn: McClellan, 1,896; Grout, 3,272; Fornes, 2,361. Queens: McClellan, 5,795; Grout, 5,619; Fornes, 5,402. Richmond: Low, fus., 218; Grout, 54; Fornes, 22. Nearly complete returns from this city on the canal amendment (25 districts missing) give a majority in favor of it of 382,967; 489,992 of the 623,136 registered and 564,627 actual votes expressing their opinion on the proposition.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston, Nov. 4.—John L. Bates was re-elected governor of Massachusetts Tuesday by a plurality of about 37,000 over Col. William A. Gaston, the democratic candidate. With a dozen cities and towns to hear from, Bates had a lead of 32,916, but as the missing towns are all strongly republican, there was every indication at a late hour Tuesday night that the plurality of the republican candidate would be practically the same as that of last year, although the total vote may run higher.

The legislature remains practically unchanged so far as the democrats and republicans are concerned, but the socialist party, which had three members last year, will be represented by only one, a member from Brockton. The socialist vote fell off considerably from that of last year, and the failure to re-elect Representative Carey, of Haverhill, one of the party leaders and a member of the lower branch of the legislature for the past five or six years, was one of the features of the election.

Boston, Nov. 4.—With returns complete from every town and city in the state, the total vote for governor was: Bates, rep., 199,393; Gaston, dem., 163,544.

MARYLAND.

Baltimore, Nov. 5.—At midnight the returns of Tuesday's election from Baltimore city and the state of Maryland had not all been received. Two missing precincts in the city had been counted by the election judges, but owing to the long vigil of the clerical force in the city and the supervisors of election it was decided to close the office. They will not materially change the result. In Baltimore city the entire democratic state ticket was elected by about 5,000 plurality. The democrats elected in Baltimore city three state senators and 18 members of the house of delegates by large majorities. The republicans elected one state senator and six members of the house of delegates. William H. Green, republican, is apparently elected sheriff of the city by a plurality of between 100 and 200.

From returns received it is conceded that the democrats will have on joint ballot 82 votes in the general assembly to 57 republican. Gen. Warfield's plurality for governor in the state will probably reach 3,000.

COLORADO.

Denver, Col., Nov. 5.—The latest returns from the election in Colorado show that the plurality for Campbell, rep., over Wilson, dem., for justice of the supreme court, will not be far from 7,000. Wilson carried but 11 of the 60 counties in the state, his only large plurality being in Denver, which he carried by 5,300. Less than 50 per cent. of the normal vote of the state was cast. An incident of the election was the victory of W. S. Keat, miners' union candidate for assessor in Teller county (the Cripple Creek district), over both party candidates by a plurality of 200.

NEW JERSEY.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 4.—The republicans in New Jersey Tuesday elected four of the six state senators and enough of the state assembly to claim both houses. The republicans in the assembly ticket was elected in Union county, which is a defeat for United States Senator Kean. The republican nominees who were favorable to his return to the senate were openly opposed at the polls by the Kean faction in that county. The next senate will stand 14 republicans and 7 democrats. The house will stand 38 republicans and 24 democrats.

IOWA.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 5.—Complete returns from every county in Iowa show Gov. Cummins' plurality over J. B. Dolliver, democratic candidate for governor to be 80,802. The size of the plurality was a surprise in all quarters. Gov. Cummins had confidently predicted a plurality of 60,000 or more, but at republican headquarters no more than 50,000 was claimed at any time, while at democratic headquarters not more than 30,000 was conceded. In a large measure the result is considered a personal victory for Gov. Cummins.

NEBRASKA.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 5.—The last estimate Wednesday night by the republican state committee sets down the plurality for Barnes to 8,000. The committee claims the election of all but 6 of the 27 republican district judges. Complete returns from this (Lancaster) county shows the republican majority to be the largest in its history. Not a candidate on the ticket fell below 2,000 majority, and some were as high as 3,400.

MISSISSIPPI.

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 4.—From returns received at midnight it is doubtful if the vote will reach thirty thousand. The ticket, headed by J. K. Vardaman for governor, is elected. An entirely new legislature was elected which will elect two United States senators. Senators H. D. Money and A. J. McLaurin, who were nominated in the August primary, will have no opposition.

RHODE ISLAND.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 4.—At midnight the returns indicate the re-election of Gov. Garvin, dem., by a greatly reduced plurality. The vote is very close, however, and the result probably will be in doubt until the last district is heard from. The republican state central committee claimed that later returns would overcome Garvin's lead.

VIRGINIA.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 4.—The elections in Virginia, which was for members of the assembly, have resulted in a democratic sweep of the state. There were few contests, the field as a rule being left open to the democrats. At 11:30 o'clock the outcome at the hardest fought points was still undecided.

CALIFORNIA.

San Francisco, Nov. 4.—Incomplete returns received up to 9:30 p. m. indicate the probable re-election of Schmitz, the union labor candidate for mayor by a small majority. Partial returns from 117 precincts give Schmitz, 1,450; Crocker, rep., 1,333; Lane, dem., 760.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 5.—Complete returns from all but 11 counties of the state indicate a plurality for Wm. L. Matheus, republican candidate for state treasurer, approximating 256,000.

UTAH.

Salt Lake, Nov. 4.—Returns from 11 of the 52 city election precincts give Knox, rep., for mayor, 1,936; Morris, dem., 2,280. The returns indicate Morriss' election by at least 1,000 plurality.

KILLED IN A BOOTH.

A Political Dispute Ends in the Murder of Two Men.

Bristol, Tenn., Nov. 4.—A fatal election row occurred in an election booth at Fairview, Scott county, Va., Tuesday. Two men were killed, one other fatally injured and one seriously. The dead are John Osborne and Ezekiel Nickels. The wounded are J. H. Catron, shot through the neck, will die; Alexander Keys, shot in the right hip. The trouble arose over objections being made to C. P. Roller serving as a republican judge. Roller, it is claimed, had been selected by democratic election commissioners for service. Osborne and Nickels, the two dead men, were democratic judges and were brought into the quarrel on account of their official connection with the election. The two men who were killed shot Catron and Keys. More trouble is feared.

THROAT AFFECTION.

Polypus Removed From the Larynx of Emperor William.

Berlin, Nov. 9.—Emperor William Saturday underwent an operation for the removal of a polypus from his larynx. The bulletins announcing the result of the operation caused much astonishment, even among court officials, who had no suspicion that his majesty was suffering from any affection of the throat.

The emperor himself appears not to have known of the growth in his larynx until a few days ago and to have suffered no discomfort from it.

"Potsdam, Nov. 7.—His majesty today underwent an operation for the removal of a polypus from his larynx. The operation was performed by Prof. Moritz Schmidt and was most successful. His majesty is only enjoined not to speak until the wound caused by the operation is healed. (Signed)

"VON LENTHOLD.
"SCHMIDT.
"ILBERG."

The North German Gazette also publishes the report of Prof. Johannes Orth, the famous cancer specialist, who succeeded the late Prof. Virchow in the chair of pathological anatomy in the University of Berlin. Prof. Orth made a microscopic examination which shows that the polypus consisted of a very soft connective tissue containing very few cells. This tissue was covered all over with a scaly epithelium, sharply defined from the tissue. A portion of the connective tissue cells contained fine brown pigment and granules, which evidently were the result of former slight hemorrhages. The polypus also contained a large number of thin walled corpuscles. "It is, therefore," says Prof. Orth, "only a question of a benign connective tissue polypus."

The Court Circular Sunday morning made the following announcement:

"The emperor yesterday went for a walk. No guests were invited to luncheon or dinner yesterday, but Count Von Buelow at noon Sunday and afterwards lunched with the empress and the count in his bedroom. Count Von Buelow found the emperor as chatty and animated as usual. The emperor wore a dressing gown instead of a coat. He took liquid foods and did not indulge in the courses served. His general health has never been so good. He has not felt the ear affection which troubled him for years and has quite outgrown the nervous trouble that formerly impelled him to incessant physical activity. It is stated that the emperor will continue to receive visitors on official business. The growth in the larynx at once suggested that the emperor might be suffering from something worse than a simple polypus, but Profs. von Leuhold, Ilberg, Schmidt and Orth supplement the bulletins in replying to inquirers by the most positive personal declarations that the affection was merely a "good natured polypus which is not likely to return or to be followed by any evil effects."

ISTHMIAN SITUATION.

Italy Is Pleased Over the Turn of Affairs in Panama.

Rome, Nov. 9.—The formation of the new republic of Panama and its recognition by the United States is looked on with satisfaction all over Italy. Old disputes between Italy and Colombia have never been settled, as the latter always succeeded in eluding its obligations to the Italian government. On one occasion President Cleveland was called on to act as arbitrator in these disputes; and he gave a verdict entirely favorable to Italy. The Colombian government and the Colombian congress, however, refused to accept the decision on the ground that President Cleveland had evidently been ill-advised. Italy has, therefore, hastened to recognize the new republic in the hope of contributing to the establishment of order in Central America and of hastening the building of the Panama canal.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 4.—When Gov. Beckham, of Kentucky, is again inaugurated he will, technically at least, enjoy the unique distinction of having three times assumed the office. As lieutenant governor he succeeded to the position upon the assassination of the late Gov. Goebel, but in accordance with the state constitution could not serve out the unexpired term. Because Gov. Goebel had not been in office a year. The matter was again referred to the voice of the people, and he was elected to fill the unexpired term. He has just been re-elected.

It has not been the custom to re-elect the chief executive in Kentucky, and it has been 93 years since any of Gov. Beckham's 33 predecessors have been so honored. In fact besides the present instance, only the first two, Isaac Shelby and James Garrard, have served more than one term.

REPUBLIC OF PANAMA.

The New Government Recognized by the United States.

Presence of the United States Gunboat Nashville at Colon Resulted in the Suppression of Any Serious Trouble.

Colon, Colombia, Nov. 5.—Without the firing of a shot and amid scenes of great enthusiasm the independence of the isthmus and the department of Panama was declared Tuesday evening.

The movement for independence has been in progress since the rejection by the congress at Bogota of the Hay-Herran canal treaty, but its sudden ripening Tuesday night was due to the news of the unexpected arrival at Colon of the Colombian gunboat Cartagena with Gens. Tovar and Amaya and a number of troops.

Washington, Nov. 5.—The state department Wednesday received a prompt request from the representatives of the revolutionary government at Panama that the United States recognize the new state of Panama, but pending official advices from our consular officers at Panama, that a new government has been established and is a defacto government, the state department declined to commit itself at present.

Colon, Colombia, Nov. 6.—After a conference Thursday afternoon, Col. Torres, commander of the Colombian troops here, seeing that the situation was hopeless, agreed to embark his soldiers on the royal mail steamer Orinoco, sailing for Cartagena, at 6 p. m. A special train from Panama will bring Gen. Tenar, who will also sail on the Orinoco. The arrangement to this end was made through the efforts of Commander Hubbard, of the United States gunboat Nashville. Superintendent Shaler and Assistant Superintendent Prescott, of the Panama railroad, who guarantee that both parties will fulfill the agreement.

Washington, Nov. 6.—The departure of the troops from Colon greatly relieves the seriousness of the situation and the arrival of the Dixie Thursday night relieved the general apprehension here regarding the safety of American lives and property in Panama.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The United States has recognized the new republic of Panama as a de facto government. This action was agreed upon at the cabinet meeting Friday. Instructions in accordance therewith were cabled at once to Minister Beaupre at Bogota and to Vice Consul General Ehrman at Panama. They will be ordered to notify the republic of Colombia and the republic of Panama of the action of the United States.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The secretary of state made the following statement Friday in regard to affairs on the Isthmus of Panama:

"The action of the president in the Panama matter is not only in the strictest accordance with the principles of justice and equity, and in line with all the best precedents of our public policy, but it was the only course he could have taken in compliance with our treaty rights and obligations. By our treaty, entered into with New Granada in the year 1846, New Granada guarantees that 'the right of way or transit across the Isthmus of Panama upon any modes of communication that now exist or that may be hereafter constructed, shall be free and open to the government and citizens of the United States.'

"This is a right which we acquired by the treaty not gratuitously conferred, but in return for an important compensation, for in the same article the government of the United States guarantees 'positively and efficaciously to New Granada by the present stipulation the perfect neutrality of the before mentioned isthmus with the view that the free transit from the one to the other sea may not be interrupted or embarrassed in any future time while this treaty exists; and in consequence the United States guarantees in like manner the rights to sovereignty and property which New Granada has and possesses over the said territory.'

"The close connection thus created between the two governments was well set forth by President Polk, in his message transmitting the treaty to the senate. He said:

"'The importance of the concession to the commercial and political interests of the United States can not be overrated. The route by the Isthmus of Panama is the shortest between the two oceans and from the information herewith communicated it would seem to be the most practicable for a railroad or canal. The vast advantages to our commerce which would result from such a communication not only with the west coast of America, but with Asia and the ilsands of the Pacific, are too obvious to require another detail. Such a passage would save you from a long and dangerous navigation of more than nine thousand miles around the Horn and render our communication with our own possessions on the northwest coast of America comparatively easy and speedy. The treaty does not propose to guarantee a treaty to a foreign nation in which the United States will have no common interest with that nation.' On the contrary, we are more deeply and directly interested in the subject of the guarantee than New Granada herself or any other country.'

"The control in the interest of the commerce and traffic of the whole civilized world, of the means of undisturbed transit across the Isthmus of Panama, has become of transcendent importance to the United States. The right to this control we have never forfeited by any laxity of our own, either in the assertion of our rights or in the performance of our duty under the treaty. In 1853 Mr. Everett assured the Peruvian minister that we should not hesitate to maintain the neutrality of the isthmus in the case of war between Peru and Colombia. In 1864 Colombia, which has always been vigilant to avail itself of its privilege conferred by the treaty, expressed its expectation that in the event of war between Peru and Spain the United States would carry into effect the guarantee of neutrality. There have been few administrations of the state department in which this treaty has not, either by the one side or the other, been used as a basis of more or less important demands.

"In 1886, when Colombia was under the menace of hostilities from Italy in the Cerruti case, Mr. Bayard expressed the serious concern that the United States could not but feel that as a European power should resort to force against a sister republic of this hemisphere as to the sovereign and uninterrupted use of part of whose territory we are guarantors under the solemn faith of a treaty. The United States has not only constantly protected Colombia from foreign invasion on the strength of the rights and the duties created by the treaty of 1846, but has time and again intervened to preserve the freedom of traffic from disturbance in the course of domestic dissension. In these cases we have intervened some times at the suggestion of Colombia, some times on our own impression of the necessities of the case, but always to the profit of Colombia as well as of universal commerce."

Washington, Nov. 9.—It was learned in official circles Sunday night that the United States of Colombia has lodged a protest with the state department against the action of the United States in connection with the events which have occurred on the Isthmus of Panama. The terms of the protest could not be ascertained Sunday night, but it is known that strong objections is made to the attitude of the United States in general and against interpretations made by this government of the treaty of 1846 between the United States of America and the United States of Colombia. The state department has the protest under serious consideration but the nature of its reply, if any, or the time when it will be made is not known.

Word reached the navy department Sunday of the arrival of the United States cruiser Boston at Panama Saturday, Commander Dichl, in reporting her arrival, announcing also the receipt of instructions from the navy department which directs the keeping open of the transit of the isthmus. He also said that at this time the traffic was undisturbed.

The president's yacht, the Mayflower, left the navy yard here Sunday for Colon. Aboard her is Consul General H. A. Gudger, the United States consul general at Panama, who goes to that place to assume full charge of the American consular affairs.

Adm. John G. Walker, president of the isthmian canal commission, also was a passenger on the Mayflower. His departure was considerable of a surprise, no announcement to this effect having been heretofore and the news of his going to Panama being given out by Secretary Moody when he came from the white house at midnight. Adm. Walker, it is stated, goes to Panama for the purpose of observing conditions on the ground and reporting to the president on the situation and on any changes that have occurred since the isthmian canal commission made its last report.

Rr. Adm. Joseph B. Coghlan, who is to assume command of the naval forces on the Atlantic side of the isthmus, was also on the Mayflower.

The Mayflower is expected to reach her destination in about eight days. On his arrival at Panama, Mr. Gudger will do business with the new government at Panama. He has full instructions from the secretary of state governing his dealings with the new government. M. Philippe Bunau-Varilla, whose appointment as diplomatic agent of the Panama republic was announced Saturday, and who reached here Saturday night from New York, saw Assistant Secretary Loomis, of the state department, Sunday. It is expected that the new diplomatic agent will be presented to Secretary Hay and to the president in a day or two, the state department probably accepting as satisfactory the telegraphic credentials of the new envoy and waiving the usual requirements of mere formal credentials. The envoy did not see the president or Secretary Hay Sunday.

SECRETARY ROOT ARRIVES.

Thinks It Will Not Be Necessary to Send Troops to Panama.

New York, Nov. 9.—"Yes, there is a possibility that troops may have to be sent to the isthmus," said Secretary of War Root in speaking of the Panama situation on his arrival from Europe Sunday. "There always is a possibility; that is what the army is for, but he declined to be quoted, pleading lack of information about the situation but he readily acknowledged, however, press dispatches which were shown him on the steamer, commenting on the statement of Secretary Hay and the instructions cabled to the minister at Bogota and the acting consul at Panama that "this is very interesting, very, very."

NAVAL SUPPLY FUND.

The Paymaster General Recommends That It Be Increased.

Washington, Nov. 9.—Urgent recommendation is made by Rr. Adm. H. T. B. Harris, in his first annual report as paymaster general of the navy, for an increase in the naval supply fund to enable the bureau of supplies and accounts to respond promptly to the numerous emergency calls which it receives from the navy. The present fund of $2,700,000, the paymaster declares, is totally inadequate to fulfill the purpose for which it was authorized and he recommends that it be increased to $4,000,000. To further augment the fund he asks that the proceeds of all condemned and obsolete supplies, with a few exceptions, be carried to its credit.

PRESIDENT JOHN MITCHELL.

He Will Not Be a Candidate For Re-Election, It Is Said.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 9.—John Mitchell will not be a candidate for re-election as president of the United Mine Workers' union. This statement was made by a close friend of Mr. Mitchell. Cortelyou as secretary of the department of commerce and labor." Secretary Cortelyou, it is said, has decided not again to be the head of the department and may go back to the position of private secretary to the president.

PEASANTS' DISCOVERY.

Rich Treasure of Ancient Objects From Syracuse Found.

Rome, Nov. 9.—Peasants while digging near Palazzolo Acreside, Sicily, found a rich treasure of ancient objects from Syracuse. The most valuable were an artistic diadem encrusted with precious stones, a belt of solid gold, and several rings of beautiful shapes. There was also found a number of coins of different values. The government authorities took possession of the treasures on the ground that it was national property, but they will compensate the proprietor of the estate according to an estimate which will be made by experts.

FAR EASTERN QUESTION.

Russia and Japan Have Not Come to a Settlement as Yet.

Yokohama, Nov. 9.—It is said in official circles at Tokio that the rumor that negotiations between the Russian and Japanese governments had come to the verge of a final settlement is misleading, hut that the Tokio government is now awaiting Russia's reply, which is due at any moment, but which will only advance the question of the far eastern difficulty to another stage.

CONGRESS CONVENES.

Both Houses Organize For Business of Extra Session.

Old Officers of the House Were Re-Elected and Sworn In—The Speaker Administered the Oath to the New Members.

Washington, Nov. 9.—The first week of the extra session will be devoted to the usual preliminaries of a new session of congress. The program for the week is to have four brief sessions and an adjournment on Thursday until the following Monday. Monday there was the usual roll call of senators and the proclamation of the president calling the congress in extraordinary session was read. These were followed by the appointment of a committee to notify the president that a quorum of the senate has met and is ready to receive any communication he has to make. On Tuesday the president's message will be received and read. Adjournment will follow its reading as a caucus of republican senators is to be held in the afternoon. Wednesday will be devoted largely to the introduction of bills and Thursday will be a short legislative session, unless discussion of the Panama situation is precipitated by the introduction of resolutions asking information. It is the intention of Senator Morgan to introduce resolutions on the subject, and these may be discussed under the rules on the day following their presentation. The republican members of the senate will interpose no objection to a discussion of the Panama and canal questions, but it is not likely that any action will be taken until after the committees are reorganized.

The house of representatives was called to order at noon Monday by Alexander McDowell, the clerk. The proclamation of the president convening congress in extraordinary session having been read, prayer was offered by the chaplain, and then the roll was called by states. Mr. Cannon, who has been selected as the unanimous choice of his party for speaker, was formally elected. After the oath of office was administered to him by the "Father of the House," a title bestowed upon the member who has seen the longest continuous service, the speaker administered the oath to the members generally. The old officers of the house having been made the nominees of the republican caucus, were re-elected and sworn in. Speaker Cannon appointed a committee to a joint committee of the senate to notify the president that a quorum of the two houses had assembled, and that congress was ready to receive any communication he may desire to make.

After adopting resolutions agreed on in the republican caucus making the rules of the 57th congress, the rules of the 58th congress, and fixing an hour for the convening of the daily sessions, the drawing of seats took place. The necessary preliminary work having been disposed of, the house adjourned out of respect to the memory of members who have died.

On Tuesday the house will listen to the reading of the president's message. For the remainder of the week little can be accomplished, but it is understood to be the desire of the house leaders that consideration of the question of reciprocal trade with Cuba be pushed as rapidly as possible.

Chicago's First Railway Half Century.

Under the above heading the Railway Age, in referring to the recent centennial celebration of the city of Chicago, said:

The world had not heard of railways in 1803. It was about 25 years after the starting of Chicago before the first locomotive went into service in the United States. As early as 1836 a few far-seeing men among the pioneers in the country between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi river determined that a railway ought to be built to Galena, an ambitious town in the lead mining region, 120 miles to the northwest of this point. They secured a charter for the Galena & Chicago Union railroad, giving Galena the honor of precedence in the title, because it was the more important place. Why was it determined that the first railroad should start for Galena from this little town on Lake Michigan? Simply because there were a few men here of the railway building spirit. These men might have started a Chicago at some other point on the lake more attractive by nature than this. The pioneer railway was to determine the location of the greatest railway center in the world, and when William B. Ogden and his associates determined that here should be the starting point of the railway to unite Galena with the lake, they did the thing which made Chicago.

It was 12 years after the charter was granted before the first piece of road was completed. The panic of 1837 stopped the surveys and construction was not begun until 1847, but on November 20, 1848, the Galena & Chicago Union railroad ran its first train from Chicago west to Harlem, 10 miles. Within three years it had reached Elgin, 43 miles, and by 1854 had been extended to Freeport, 120 miles westward from Chicago, where it stopped for good. The Galena road never reached Galena. The gap of 51 miles between Freeport and the original goal of its ambition was substantially filled by the construction of the Illinois Central on its way to Dubuque, and the Galena & Chicago Union company, having decided on a more direct line to the Mississippi river, built the "Dixon Air Line" from Turner Junction on the old road, 30 miles west of Chicago, on to the Mississippi, which was reached at the end of 1853. The pioneer road had built a branch, from Belvidere, Ill., into Wisconsin and was proposing an extension to the northwest when a competitor, under the name of the Chicago, St. Paul & Fond du Lac, began to build a road direct from Chicago into the same Wisconsin territory. That road became the Chicago & Northwestern, and its line now forms the Wisconsin division of the present company. In 1864 the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad company was consolidated with the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company and disappeared from the scene of action. In 1866 the Chicago & Northwestern absorbed the Chicago & Milwaukee and Milwaukee & Chicago railroad companies, which had built a line between the places named in their titles, and this was the origin of the Milwaukee division of the Northwestern road. The Chicago & Northwestern system and the new railway system of the Northwest therefore, started in 1848 from the Galena & Chicago Union road, and it was fitting that to commemorate the inauguration of the tremendous interest to which Chicago owes so much the city should place in the wall of the modern Northwestern Railway station a tablet marking the site of the first railway depot in Chicago.

Wise.

Though worth several millions, Hugh McLaughlin, the Brooklyn democrat, spends very little money on himself, his clothing at times being absolutely shabby. His chief lieutenant, James Shevlin, is a relative by marriage and a dealer in shoes, says a New York exchange. "Come over to my store," said Shevlin one day, "and get you a pair of good shoes made." The old man demurred at first, but finally consented and was measured for a fine pair. Shortly afterward he received a bill for $12, just about three times as much as he is accustomed to pay for footwear. He looked at the document gravely for a minute, wrote across the face of it: "Collect from Shevlin; he's responsible," reinsided it to the sender and heard nothing more about the matter.

Which?

The president had an informal reception in his office recently and a number of visitors were presented to him. One lady introduced herself as from Jacksonville, Fla., and said: "Mr. President, I have come all this way just to see you. I have never seen a live president before." Mr. Roosevelt seemed much amused. "Well, well," he said. "I hope you don't feel disappointment now that you have seen one. Lots of people in these parts go all the way to Jacksonville to see a live alligator. I wonder which kind of a tourist feels the most sold."

HAPPY WOMEN.

Mrs. Pare, wife of C. B. Pare, a prominent resident of Glasgow, Ky., says: "I was suffering from a complication of kidney troubles. Besides a bad back, I had a great deal of trouble with the secretions, which were exceedingly variable, sometimes excessive and at other times scanty. The color was high, and passages were accompanied with a scalding sensation. Doan's Kidney Pills soon regulated the kidney secretions, making their color normal and banished the inflammation which caused the scalding sensation. I can rest well, my back is strong and sound and I feel much better in every way."

THREE LANDSLIDES.

TAMMANY'S PLURALITY IS 63,617

Gov. Beckham Elected by the Largest Majority Given Gubernatorial Candidate in Kentucky For Years.

Gov. Cummins' Plurality in Iowa Is 80,802—The Entire Democratic Ticket in Maryland Was Elected By About 8,000.

OHIO.

Cincinnati, Nov. 4.—Complete returns from the city of Cincinnati give Herrick 44,149, Johnson, 17,335, a plurality for Herrick of 26,814, making a republican gain of over 11,000. The entire republican ticket of Hamilton county is elected, including three senator and ten representatives. The republicans carried every one of the 24 wards of the city.

Cleveland, Nov. 4.—At midnight Chairman Salen, of the democratic state executive committee, conceded the county to be republican by 5,000 majority. He also conceded the election of the entire republican county and legislative ticket. At the same time Mayor Johnson sent a message of congratulation to Col. Herrick on his election.

Columbus, O., Nov. 5.—The republican plurality in Ohio is about 115,000 for governor and the majority in the legislature on joint ballot for senator is 92.

Chairman Dick, of the republican state committee, who Wednesday secured reports from all his 88 county committees and Wednesday night announced that Herrick, rep., had carried 62 counties and Johnson, dem., 26 for governor, most of the latter by small and the former by large pluralities. On a total vote of less than 800,000 Herrick's pluralities in the counties aggregate 135,125, and Johnson's 20,476, so that Herrick has a net plurality in the state of 114,706 on estimates that may be increased from one to two thousand by the official count. The plurality on the rest of the republican state ticket will likely be from four to five thousand less than that for Herrick. The total vote for Johnson was less than that for any democratic candidate for governor for years.

On the legislative ticket, the democrats carried six counties in addition to for governor, or less than one-fourth, as follows: Adams-Pike, Athen, Ashland, Holmes, Auglaise, Brown, Darke, Fairfield, Henry, Marion, Mercer, Monroe, Ottawa, Pickaway, Putnam, Sandusky, Seneca, Shelby, Wayne and Wyandotte. In addition, the democrats carried Richland, Coshocton and Licking counties for their state ticket.

Of the senatorial districts, the democrats carried only the 32d, 31st, 28th and 11th. The senate stands 29 republicans, 4 democrats, majority, 25.

The house stands 83 republicans and 21 democrats; majority 68. The majority on joint ballot for the re-election of Senator Hanna will be 93. These figures will not be changed by the official returns. The counties carried by the democrats were all in the rural districts, all of the larger cities being in the counties that gave republican pluralities. The republicans carried every county that they had two years ago except Sandusky, which is strongly democratic, and they carried other counties that they did not have two years ago or any other year. They carried all the senatorial districts in which they won in the tidal wave two years ago and others that they never had before.

Secretary Richardson, of the democratic state committee, said that the result in his opinion was due to the fear of single tax and two cent fare.

"These two things cost the ticket thousands of votes all over the state. The voters were afraid of the two cent fare proposition and argued that to reduce the railroad fare would be to force a reduction in the wages of the railroad workers."

KENTUCKY.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 5.—Returns which are complete, save for a few scattered precincts in remote parts of the state, give Gov. Beckham, dem., for governor, a majority of 30,408 over Morris B. Beiknap, the republican opponent in Tuesday's balloting. The missing precincts are both republican and democratic strongholds, yet the assertion seems warranted that the governor's majority will not be less than 25,000. This is the largest majority given a democratic gubernatorial candidate in 15 years.

Returns from the mountainous country comprising the 11th district give Belknap a majority of 15,383, with two or three precincts yet to be heard from. This indicates a falling off in the republican vote, in this district usually returns about 20,000 majority for that party. Gov. Beckham's total vote, according to Wednesday night's incomplete figures is 45,781.

Although the socialist and socialist-labor parties had full tickets in the field, their vote was so small that it was discarded in the count.

The republicans are preparing charges of fraud alleged to have been perpetrated in Louisville, which they will probably present to the grand jury in a few days.

Following are the majorities of counties as far as heard from:

NEW YORK.

New York, Nov. 5.—By a vote so overwhelming that it assumed the proportions of a landslide the democratic ticket was swept to victory in Greater New York.

The greater city gave to Col. George B. McClellan, the democratic candidate for mayor, a plurality of 63,617. His two principal running mates—Controller Edward M. Grout and Charles V. Fornes, president of the board of aldermen, both candidates for re-election—ran ahead of the ticket in each of the five boroughs. McClellan received 314,806 votes in the five boroughs against 251,289 for the mayor, Low. The greater city gave Controller Grout 315,287 votes, against 248,491 for Hinrichs, the fusion candidate—a democratic plurality of 66,796. Mitchell L. Erlanger, democratic candidate for sheriff of New York county, was elected by 183,067 votes, against 119,549 for Trautman.

The pluralities on mayor, controller, president of the board of aldermen in the several boroughs were:

Manhattan and the Bronx: McClellan, 56,329; Grout, 57,948; Fornes, 57,183. Brooklyn: McClellan, 1,886; Grout, 3,272; Fornes, 2,361. Queens: McClellan, 5,798; Grout, 5,619; Fornes, 5,402. Richmond: Low, fus., 218; Grout, 54; Fornes, 22. Nearly complete returns from this city on the canal amendment (25 districts missing) give a majority in favor of it of 382,967; 429,402 of the 625,186 registered and 554,637 actual votes expressing their opinion on the proposition.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston, Nov. 4.—John L. Bates was re-elected governor of Massachusetts Tuesday by a plurality of about 8,000, the total vote will be about the same as that of last year, although the total vote may run higher.

The legislature remains practically unchanged so far as the democrats and republicans are concerned, but the socialist party, which had three members last year, will be represented by only one, a member from Brockton. The socialist vote fell off considerably from last year, and the failure to re-elect Representative Carey, of Haverhill, one of the party leaders and a member of the lower branch of the legislature for the past five or six years, was one of the features of the election.

Boston, Nov. 4.—With returns complete from every town and city in the state, the total vote for governor was: Bates, rep., 199,333; Gaston, dem., 163,541.

MARYLAND.

Baltimore, Nov. 5.—At midnight the returns of Tuesday's election from Baltimore city and the state of Maryland had not all been received. Two missing precincts in the city had been counted by the election judges, but owing to the long vigil of the clerical force in the office of the supervisors of election it was decided to close the office. They will not materially change the result. In Baltimore city the entire democratic "fifth" ticket was elected by about 8,000 plurality. The democrats elected in Baltimore city three state senators and 18 members of the house of delegates by large majorities. The republicans elected one state senator and six members of the house of delegates. William H. Green, republican, is apparently elected sheriff of the city by a plurality of between 100 and 200.

From returns received it is conceded that the democrats will have on joint ballot 82 votes in the general assembly to 61 republican. Gen. Warfield's plurality for governor in the state will probably reach 8,000.

COLORADO.

Denver, Col., Nov. 5.—The latest returns from the election in Colorado show that the plurality for Campbell, rep., over Wilson, dem., for justice of the supreme court, will not be far from 7,000. Wilson carried but 11 of the 60 counties in the state, his only large plurality being in Denver, which he carried by 5,300. Less than 50 per cent, of the normal vote of the state was cast. An incident of the election was the victory of St. J. Devanil, miners' union candidate for governor in Teller county (the Cripple Creek district), over both party candidates by a plurality of 200.

NEW JERSEY.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 4.—The republicans in New Jersey Tuesday elected four of the six state senators and enough of the state assembly to claim both houses. The entire democratic assembly ticket was elected in Union county, which is a defeat for United States Senator Kean. The republican nominees who were favorable to his return to the senate were openly opposed in the polls by the anti-Kean faction in that county. The next senate will stand 14 republicans and 7 democrats. The house will stand 38 republicans and 24 democrats.

IOWA.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 5.—Complete returns from every county in Iowa show Gov. Cummins' plurality over J. B. Sullivan, democratic candidate for governor to be 80,802. The size of the plurality was a surprise in all quarters. Gov. Cummins had confidently predicted a plurality of 60,000 or more, but at republican headquarters no more than 50,000 was claimed at any time, while at democratic headquarters not more than 30,000 was conceded. In a large measure the result is considered a personal victory for Gov. Cummins.

NEBRASKA.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 5.—The last estimate Wednesday night by the republican state committee sets down the plurality for Barnes to 8,000. The committee claims the election of all but 6 of the 27 republican district judges. Complete returns from this (Lancaster) county shows the republican majority to be the largest in its history. Not a candidate on the ticket fell below 2,000 majority, and some were as high as 3,400.

MISSISSIPPI.

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 4.—From returns received at midnight it is doubtful if the vote will reach thirty thousand. The ticket, headed by J. K. Vardaman for governor, is elected. An entirely new legislature was elected which will elect two United States senators. Senators H. D. Money and A. J. McLaurin, who were nominated in the August primary, will have no opposition.

RHODE ISLAND.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 4.—At midnight the returns indicate the re-election of Gov. Garvin, dem., by a greatly reduced plurality. The vote is very close, however, and the result probably will be in doubt until the last district is heard from. The republican state central committee claimed that later returns would overcome Garvin's lead.

VIRGINIA.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 4.—The elections in Virginia, which was for members of the assembly, have resulted in a democratic sweep of the state. There were few contests, the field as a rule being left open to the democrats. At 11:30 o'clock the outcome at the hardest fought points was still undecided.

CALIFORNIA.

San Francisco, Nov. 4.—Incomplete returns received up to 9:30 p. m. indicate the probable re-election of Schmitz, the union labor candidate for mayor by a small majority. Partial returns from 117 precincts give Schmitz, 1,459; Crocker, rep., 1,332; Lane, dem., 766.

PENNSYLVANIA.

KILLED IN A BOOTH.

A Political Dispute Ends in the Murder of Two Men.

Bristol, Tenn., Nov. 4.—A fatal election row occurred in an election booth at Fairview, Scott county, Va., Tuesday. Two men were killed, one other fatally injured and one seriously. The dead are John Osborne and Ezekiel Nickels. The wounded are J. H. Catron, shot through the neck, will die; Alexander Keys, shot in the right hip. The trouble arose over objections being made to C. P. Roller serving as a republican judge. Roller, it is claimed, had been selected by democratic election commissioners for service. Osborne and Nickels, the two dead men, were democratic judges and were brought into the quarrel on account of their official connection with the election. The two men who were killed shot Catron and Keys. More trouble is feared.

HANNA FOR PRESIDENT.

He Reiterates His Statement That He is Not a Candidate.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 5.—Senator Hanna, referring to the renewed suggestions made in various quarters to the effect that he is the logical republican candidate for the presidency next year, as a result of the unprecedented victory won in Ohio, at Tuesday's election, made this statement Wednesday night:

"The results of the election in Ohio yesterday in no way changes my opinion in reference to my proposed candidacy for the presidency, of which position the public has been fully advised."

THROAT AFFECTION.

Polypus Removed From the Larynx of Emperor William.

Berlin, Nov. 9.—Emperor William Saturday underwent an operation for the removal of a polypus from his larynx. The bulletins announcing the result of the operation caused much astonishment, even among court officials, who had no suspicion that his majesty was suffering from any affection of the throat.

The emperor himself appears not to have known of the growth in his larynx until a few days ago and to have suffered no discomfort from it.

"Potsdam, Nov. 7.—His majesty today underwent an operation for the removal of a polypus from his larynx. The operation was performed by Prof. Moritz Schmidt and was most successful. His majesty is only enjoined not to speak until the wound caused by the operation is healed. (Signed)

"VON LENTHOLD.
"SCHMIDT.
"ILBERG."

The North German Gazette also publishes the report of Prof. Johannes Orth, the famous cancer specialist, who succeeded the late Prof. Virchow in the chair of pathological anatomy in the University of Berlin. Prof. Orth made a microscopic examination which shows that the polypus consisted of a very soft connective tissue containing very few cells. This tissue was covered all over with a scaly epithelium, sharply defined from the tissue. A portion of the connective tissue cells contained fine brown pigment and granules, which evidently were the result of former slight hemorrhages. The polypus also contained a large number of thin walled corpuscles. "It is, therefore," says Prof. Orth, "only a question of benign connective tissue polypus."

The Court Circular Sunday morning made the following announcement:

"The emperor yesterday went for a walk. No guests were invited to luncheon or dinner yesterday, but Count Von Buelow at noon Sunday and afterwards lunched with the empress and the count in his bedroom. Count Von Buelow found the emperor as chatty and animated as usual. The emperor wore a dressing gown instead of a coat. He took liquid foods and did not indulge in the courses served. His general health has never been so good. He has not felt the ear affection which troubled him for years and has quite outgrown the nervous trouble that formerly impelled him to incessant physical activity. It is stated that the emperor will continue to receive visitors on official business. The growth in the larynx at once suggested that the emperor might be suffering from something worse than a simple polypus, but Profs. von Leuthold, Ilberg, Schmidt and Orth supplement the bulletins in replying to inquirers by the most positive personal declarations that the affection was merely a "good natured polypus which is not likely to return or to be followed by any evil effects."

ISTHMIAN SITUATION.

Italy Is Pleased Over the Turn of Affairs in Panama.

Rome, Nov. 9.—The formation of the new republic of Panama and its recognition by the United States is looked on with satisfaction all over Italy. Old disputes between Italy and Colombia have never been settled, as the latter always succeeded in eluding its obligations to the Italian government. On one occasion President Cleveland was called on to act as arbitrator in these disputes, and he gave a verdict entirely favorable to Italy. The Colombian government and the Colombian congress, however, refused to accept the decision on the ground that President Cleveland had evidently been ill advised. Italy has, therefore, hastened to recognize the new republic in the hope of contributing to the establishment of order in Central America and of hastening the building of the Panama canal.

STATE NEWS ITEMS

INAUGURATION DAY.

Gov. Beckham Will Be Installed on Tuesday, December 8.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 7.—With only 60 precincts to be heard from Gov. Beckham's plurality over Col. Morris B. Belknap is 27,252. Martin county is unreported. It contains seven precincts, and usually gives a republican majority of from 500 to 600.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 6.—Gov. Beckham is said to have made preparations to take a vacation when the legislature adjourns next March. He intends to make a trip to Yellowstone Park, accompanied by Mrs. Beckham and probably other members of the family.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 6.—Inauguration day comes earlier this year than usual, it being on Tuesday, December 8, the statute requiring the new gov ernor to be inaugurated the fifth Tuesday after the election.

The democratic majority is growing larger instead of smaller, and it looks now like it may reach 28,000.

Eli Brown, of Nelson, candidate for speaker of the house, who is here Thursday, says there will be 76 and may be 77 democrats in the house and 31 in the senate.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 4.—When Gov. Beckham, of Kentucky, is again inaugurated he will, technically at least, enjoy the unique distinction of having three times assumed the office. As lieutenant governor he succeeded to the position upon the assassination of the late Gov. Goebel, but in accordance with the state constitution could not serve out the unexpired term, because Gov. Goebel had not been in office a year. The matter was again referred to the voice of the people, and he was elected to fill the unexpired term. He has just been re-elected.

It has not been the custom to re-elect the chief executive in Kentucky, and it has been 92 years since any of Gov. Beckham's 33 predecessors have been so honored. In fact, besides the present instance, only the first two, Isaac Shelby and James Garrard, have served more than one term.

DEFIES PURSUING POSSE.

Kentuckian Who Shot a Man Entrenched in the Mountains.

Barboursville, Ky., Nov. 6.—A message from Manchester says that excitement is great there over the attempted arrest of Jake and George Woods, who are charged with the fatal wounding of Thomas Rawlins, at Sexton's Creek voting place, Tuesday.

A number of officers went to arrest the men, but when they reached the place they found the Woods and their friends, numbering more than a dozen, heavily armed. They refuse to surrender, and are well located in the mountains, according to reports. A posse will be formed and another attempt will be made to arrest the band. Rawlins can not live. He is a traveling salesman.

Barboursville, Ky., Nov. 7.—Jake and George Woods, accused of shooting T. J. Rawlins, at Sexton's Creek voting place, came into court and gave bond of $2,500 each and promised to give additional bond or go to jail if indicted. Rawlins was much worse Friday night and it is thought he can not live.

THE ISSUANCE OF A WARRANT.

It Caused a Magistrate to Kill An Enraged Farmer.

Bowling Green, Ky., Nov. 7.—Magistrate Elijah Upton Friday shot and killed Tom Stewart, a farmer, at Richardsville, this county. The shooting was the result of the issuing of a warrant by Squire Upton for Stewart's arrest on the application of the latter's son, following a quarrel over politics. Stewart had been voting the republican ticket, but Tuesday announced his intention of voting for the democratic nominee. His father entered a decided protest, which angered the young man, and father and son came to blows.

Going Into Winter Quarters.

EDWARDS WINS.

Secretary of State Hill Certifies to His Nomination.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 5.—Secretary of State Hill Wednesday certified to the nomination of D. C. Edwards as the republican candidate for congress to the Eleventh district to succeed the late Vincent Boreing, recognizing the action of the district committee of the party as the governing authority.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 7.—The republican state central committee voted 7 to 4 that Dr. W. Godfrey Hunter is the party nominee in the Eleventh district, reversing the district congressional committee. Secretary of State Hill was asked to recall his order certifying to county clerks that D. C. Edwards is the nominee. He will not do so unless forced by the courts. The matter will probably be left to congress to decide.

THE DEAL CLOSED.

A Big Acreage of Timber Land in Kentucky Sold.

AVENGED FATHER'S DEATH.

Two Men Were Killed in a Fight Near Jackson, Ky.

Jackson, Ky., Nov. 5.—Two men are dead as the result of a fight on the Middle Fork, six miles west of Jackson.

Sam Gross, 18 years old, son of Curtis Gross, sprang out of the door and stabbed Spencer to death, the knife puncturing his heart.

The shooting was due to an old grudge.

News of Progress of World's Fair Work In Kentucky.

BIG APPLE AND PEAR DISPLAY

Lawn of Kentucky Building Sown In Blue Grass—Exhibits of Women's Work Arranged For—Display of Hemp Broken by Machinery—Beets Two Feet Long For the Exhibit.

—Mr. H. R. Whitesides, of Louisville, the well known produce man, has bought 10,000 barrels of apples in Henderson county—where, by the way, fruit of this kind seems to have flourished more than anywhere else in Kentucky this year—and fifty-five barrels are being culled from the entire lot for Kentucky's horticultural display at the World's Fair next year. The varieties are Ben Davis, Wine Sap, Winter Pearmain, Black Twigs and Rome Beauty. The fifty-five barrels turned over by Mr. Whitesides to the Exhibit Association have been carefully wrapped in two different papers—each apple separately, according to instructions given out by Exposition officials—and have been shipped to Louisville, to be placed in cold storage until taken to St. Louis next April.

—The Louisville Veteran Firemen's Association has unanimously voted to attend the World's Fair next year in a body. It will carry along an old hand fire engine used in ante-bellum days, and in a parade on the grounds—every member being in old-fashioned fireman's uniform—will doubtless attract a great deal of attention. Col. E. C. Culp, the Secretary of the Committee on Ceremonies for the Exposition, is arranging a "Veteran Firemen's Day," and the Louisville "laddies," all of whom are close around three score and ten in age, will go on whatever date is selected.

—The two hundred foot lawn in front of the Kentucky State Building at the World's Fair is being sown in blue grass, so it will present an attractive appearance when the Exposition opens next April 30. This work is in charge of Mr. Henry Nanz, the Chairman of the Floricultural Committee of the Exhibit Association. In addition to sowing the lawn in blue grass, Mr. Nanz is transplanting all the beautiful shrubbery native to Kentucky. In March he will set out numerous flower beds, so the picture will become more beautiful as spring glides into summer.

—The postmaster at Woodville, in McCracken county, Mr. Wade Brown, is very enthusiastic over Kentucky's display at St. Louis next year and has collected some very fine grapes and other agricultural products. He is also gathering specimens for the Kentucky forestry exhibit at St. Louis.

—Chief Milan H. Hulbert, of the Department of Manufactures of the World's Fair, has written the Kentucky Exhibit Association that his department has decided to install all exhibits of individual women's work, such as embroidery, hand-made lace, decorated china, typography, etc. He will assign a limited area in the Varied Industries Building for a showcase to accommodate decorated china and like exhibits, and in the textiles section of the Manufacturers' Building to accommodate embroidery, general needlework, etc. The Kentucky Exhibit Association invites an Kentucky women interested in these displays to correspond with its secretary at Louisville on the subject.

—Miss Sue Sutherland, a teacher in the city schools at Owensboro, is using the Louisiana Purchase Exposition map, issued by the World's Fair at St. Louis, as supplemental matter before her pupils. The purchase of the Louisiana territory, which now embraces about one-third of the total area of the entire United States, was one of the most interesting acts in American history, and a school child of today takes very kindly to any instruction along this line, because so many of them contemplate visiting the Exposition at St. Louis next year, which is to commemorate this great event.

—Among other interesting features of the hemp display to be made from Kentucky at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition will be a sample of this fiber broken by machinery. Breaking hemp by machinery is a revolution in this great Kentucky industry. Up to this time the colored man has had a monopoly in hemp breaking, doing it by the old-fashioned method, after the hemp had been allowed to rot on the ground for several weeks. The machine which breaks hemp—and it costs several thousand dollars—takes the hemp soon after it is cut, without rotting, and gets even better results than the "darkey" with his old-time "break."

—Mr. J. T. Gilkey, who lives near Winchester, in Clark county, has sent to the Kentucky Exhibit Association a sample of the "California yard bean," grown by himself from seed sent to him from the native clime of the vegetable. These beans have the right name, being fully three feet in length, and have taken very kindly to the Kentucky soil.

—In the vegetable display to be made by Kentucky at the World's Fair there will be several beets two feet in length, grown by Mr. John Knadler of Valley Station. These have been put in dry storage and will be held there until shipped to St. Louis with the rest of Kentucky's agricultural display next spring.

—A fine collection of minerals and clays has been gathered by Mr. W. W. Simmons in and around Nelson county for Kentucky's exhibit at the World's Fair next year.

Fine Farm For Sale.

I withdraw from sale my farm of 255 acres at Hebron at the price named in a recent notice. The farm is for sale at a bargain if sold soon, but not at that price. The conditions and circumstances and opportunities existing when that offer was made, do not exist now—hence the withdrawal. This is a magnificent farm, finely located and elegantly improved. The land and improvements are all in splendid condition. This plantation and its improvements were planned, constructed, developed and finished for a superb country home, for a country gentleman, and only a man of that character can appreciate it. The whole farm is as beautiful as a city park. It is for sale at a bargain if sold soon. If not sold soon it will be for rent to good and careful men.

As Superintendent Snyder was called away on business to the forenoon, the exercises did not begin till in the afternoon. The Association opened by singing "America." Prayer by Supt. Next subject was, "the Aim of the Pupil," discussed by F. M. Hughes and Supt. Snyder. Song—"The Bell Doth Toll," was sung by the Burlington pupils. FEMALE WEAKNESS

POWERS, MAINE, Oct. 17, 1902.
I consider Wine of Cardui superior to any doctor's medicine I ever used and I know whereof I speak. I suffered for nine months with suppressed menstruation which completely prostrated me. Pains would shoot through my back and sides and I would have blinding headaches. My limbs would swell up and I would feel so weak I could not stand up. I naturally felt discouraged for I seemed to be beyond the help of physicians, but Wine of Cardui came as a God-send to me. I felt a change for the better within a week. After nineteen days treatment I menstruated without suffering the agonies I usually did and soon became regular and without pain. Wine of Cardui is simply wonderful and I wish that all suffering women knew of its good qualities.

Wilhelmina Snow
Treasurer, Portland Economic League

Periodical headaches tell of female weakness. Wine of Cardui cures permanently nineteen out of every twenty cases of irregular menses, bearing down pains or any female weakness. If you are discouraged and doctors have failed, that is the best reason in the world you should try Wine of Cardui now. Remember that headaches mean female weakness. Secure a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui today.

Some of the chronic hunters are putting on a bold front and making it hot for the game in spite of the trespass law. You had better look a leetle out, boys. Your name may be put before the big 12 when that body meets.

We do not want anyone to get the wrong impression of any of our items. We have never been requested to say anything in regard to the fox hounds in this neighborhood. What we said was from our own knowledge of our neighbors' dogs. We will furthermore say that the hunters here could not hide behind the name sport if they wanted to because they are all well known to every foxhunter in the county. They do not run their dogs for boodle therefore they have nothing to put up and no reason to shut up. They are always ready to put their dogs in a chase, and if they are beaten they know how to take it.

A says a farmer must have his land posted; B says he does not, in order to have a person arrested for trespasing. Who is right?—[S is right.—ED]

The Best Remedy for Croup,

This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighborhood. One of the most terrible things in the world is to be awakened in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of the children. The croup remedies are almost as sure to be lost, in case of croup, as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old-fashioned remedy for croup, known as hive syrup and tolu, but some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better, and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw up the phlegm" quicker, and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as the croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Marshall and family, and the biggest turkey you ever saw. More are coming, and you are invited. Am now going out to throw Tobe Marshall down—just to sharpen up my appetite. Good bye."

Noah Clore reports that he is afflicted with the "industrious back ache," and from the way he describes the trouble any reader will be enabled to tell when suffering from an attack of "industrious back-ache." He says so long as he is at work he is not annoyed, and it permits him to sleep well until about 2 o'clock in the morning, when his back begins to ache, and no relief can he get until he goes to work, when the pain subsides, and if he continues to labor it will not return again until about 2 a. m. If the disease should become epidemic, it would make hustlers of many persons who are now belly unacquainted with work. Some people will be afraid to meet Noah in the road for fear of contracting an attack of "industrious back-ache."

The UNCHANGEABLE GOD

In Character, in Judgment of Sin, in Plan of Salvation He Is Ever the Same.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1902, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Nov. 15, 1902. Text:—"I am the LORD, I change not." —Mal. 3:6.

MAN and all that pertains to him are subject to change. The created universe, the myriad stars of the heavens and the teeming earth feel the constant throb and beat of change. Of God only can it be said that He changes not. Man, in thought and purpose, and plan and desire and ambition, is here to-day and there to-morrow. He is fickle, vacillating, changeable, but the infinite God is unchangeable. This is God's own word concerning Himself: "I am the Lord, I change not." The God who walked with Adam in the garden in the cool of the day and communed with him is the same God who walks and talks with men to-day when they keep in step with the Divine will and when they have ears to hear and hearts to understand. The God who extended mercy to Noah because of his faith, and who executed judgment upon the wicked and unbelieving world, is the same God to-day who is extending His offer of mercy and His warning of judgment. The God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the covenant-making and covenant-keeping God, is the same covenant-making and covenant-keeping God to-day. The term Lord in our text is in small caps and should be rendered Jehovah, which is the covenant name of God to the Jews. "I am Jehovah God (the Covenant-God), and I change not." Such was He in the days of Israel and such is He to-day. The God who when sin had entered into the world declared that "the seed of woman should bruise the serpent's head," is the same God who so loved the world that He gave His Son as a sacrifice for sin. The God who is revealed in the Bible as the God of Light and the God of Love has always been such in character. God changes not in character. He changes not in His purpose towards man. He changes not in His attitude towards sin. And because God changes not, man ought to know God and be in harmony with Him.

MAN'S conceptions of God change, but God changes not. I want to emphasize the contrast presented here in this declaration. No matter what man thinks of God, no matter how his views may change concerning God, this remains true, that "God changes not." But man's ideas and conceptions of God do change. Human experiences, environment, training, peculiarities of thought and disposition, all are contributive causes to a misconception of who and what God is. Scarcely any two persons have exactly the same idea of God. But He is not many gods. He is one God, and a God who changes not. He is, however, the God of many, and longs to be the God of all. Everyone has some idea of God, some conception or misconception of His character. A popular view held of God to-day is that of His universal Fatherhood—that conception of God which eliminates hell and the judgment, and makes every member of the human race a child of His and entitled at last to a place in the Father's House. Another conception of God which prevails largely in the minds of people is that God is a God of favoritism—that is, that He has selected by an arbitrary act of His will certain ones upon whom to bestow His favor, while others are left to struggle and suffer and perish alone. Then there are the fatalists, whose conception is that as God is all-knowing, He is all-determinative, and hence human life is but the inevitable and unchangeable working out of the Divine purpose and will. They believe that God has fixed the limit of life, the events of life, the tendency and development of life, and to attempt to change the seemingly inevitable plan is to attempt the impossible and fight against God. At the other extreme are those who have a vague, uncertain idea of God which encourages them to believe that He is a good-natured, easy-going God who will be too indulgent and loving to punish for sin; that by some hook or crook, or clever excuse on their part, they will be able to turn aside the wrath of God and to get into Heaven. And with this conception of God stilling the troubled conscience and oiling the wheels of self-indulgence and sin, they slide through life and into eternity. Others there are who believe that God is one whose favor and esteem can be bought by good works. They eliminate the necessity of salvation by faith in Jesus Christ, and estimate a person's fitness for Heaven by those virtues which he possesses in himself, and the good deeds which he has wrought.

THESE are some of the commoner conceptions which people have of God, but, as we have said, hardly any two persons entertain exactly the same idea of God. And yet these differences are not to be accounted for by charging God with variableness and shadow of turning, for He "changes not." But they are due to human conceptions and misconceptions of who and what God is. There are two explanations or reasons for these differences of views: First, the finite mind of man in seeking to grasp and encompass the thought of the eternal and all-powerful God has mixed much of error with the true revelation of God. Second, a revelation of God, be it little or much, has come to some as the result of the study of God's Word, and prayer and meditation thereon. Those included in the first class may be likened unto a man blind from his birth attempting to understand and describe the beauties of nature, the glowing sun, the flower-decked fields, the woodland, and the graceful, verdant hills rolling skyward in the distance. The young woman who, under the skillful touch of the surgeon was made to see for the first time in her life, exclaimed, as she looked about her upon the face of Nature: "Oh, how beautiful! I have tried as I have scented the perfume of the flowers, and felt the warmth of the sun, and heard the rustle of the leaves upon the trees as the gentle breezes moved them to whispering to each other, to imagine how the flowers and the trees and the sunlight upon all looked, but no thought I ever had was true to Nature as she really is and as I see her now." And this is the way it is when the natural mind of man tries to think out who and what God is, and this is the reason there are so many misconceptions of God in the world to-day. The second includes those who have little or much light as to God's real character. His purpose towards man and His attitude towards sin.

EACH succeeding age of the world's history has had a larger and fuller revelation of God. God knows no change, and yet until the coming of Christ the world had never had a full revelation of God. But Christ came declaring that He who had seen and known Him had seen and known the Father also. The period from Adam to Noah, known as the anti-diluvian age, knew not God in the fullness in which those did who lived from Noah to the time of Moses, or during the patriarchal age. And so on through the Mosaic age to the time of Christ there was ever increasing revelation of God until God came and dwelt among men in the person of His Son. And as man studies the record left of that matchless life and sacrificial death he comes more and more to know and understand God. Paul, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, revealed more perfectly the mysteries of the Gospel and thus gave a clearer vision of God and His Christ. And more and more is man coming to know and understand what the Scriptures mean. And thus it will continue until that time when God's children shall see Him face to face and know even as they are known. This gradual revelation of God is on the manward side and for the sake of man. God in Himself is unchanged and unchangeable. God did not begin to be a God of love only at the time that He sent His Son into the world. He was a God of love from the beginning. His purpose for man, His wonderful deliverance of the sinner and punishment of sin were not a purpose and plan which came with the fall and wicked sinfulness of man, but man was "chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world," and Jesus, the "Lamb, was slain before the foundation of the world." What God has revealed Himself to be, He was from the beginning. And with the increasing revelation of God to the world has come increasing responsibility upon the world. Paul told the Athenians that the God they were worshiping was a god of ignorance. That their ideas of God were false, and now that the true God had been fully revealed unto men God could no longer excuse this ignorance, but commanded all men everywhere to repent and come to a knowledge of the truth.

THUS upon this Christian age has come a weight of responsibility which must crush to hell or lift to Heaven. Jesus' severest judgments were pronounced against those places which knew Him best and had witnessed most of His mighty works, for with the greater light which had shined in upon them had come greater responsibility. And the world cannot escape that responsibility to-day. The world cannot plead ignorance of God. The men of Nineveh, that great and wicked city, shall rise up in judgment against the world to-day, said Jesus, because Nineveh repented at the preaching of Jonah, and behold a greater than Jonah has come into the world calling it to repentance. And again Jesus said: "The queen of the south shall rise up in judgment with this generation and condemn it; for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here." It would have been no wonder if this queen, dreading the long, hard, perilous journey, had refused to seek Solomon, the wise, in his far-off kingdom, but when Jesus, the Saviour and King, has made the long journey from Heaven to earth, and dwelt amidst men, and lived that men might know how to live, and died that men might be saved, what can the world offer as excuse for not knowing God and His Christ. "How shall they escape, if they neglect so great salvation?" The unchangeable God of Heaven has so revealed Himself unto the world that the world has no possible excuse for not knowing Him or understanding His purpose for man, and His judgment against sin. The world cannot escape the responsibility. It will be without excuse before Him with whom it hath to do.

GOD is a God of holiness. We so speak of Him, because He has so declared Himself, but who can understand what all that means. We may talk of God in the various aspects of His character, as love, truth, faithfulness, mercy, but how can the finite mind of man compass the thought of God and what He is? We may read out of God's Word of God's holiness, of His love, faithfulness, truth and mercy. We may trace these different attributes through the sacred record from Genesis to Revelation, but we find all the way that they are the same. The same God in Genesis as in Revelation. And in God's dealings with men, as He has manifested Himself unto men, we may learn something of what God is. A holy God, therefore sinful man must be cast out of the garden of Eden and from His presence. A holy God, therefore, when the sin of man became so great that the world was turned hopelessly away from Him, He must destroy it. A holy God, punishing His own chosen people when they fell into grievous sin. A holy God, preparing a new Jerusalem, and declaring that "there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie." A holy God upon whom sinful man could not look and live.

A GOD of love from Genesis to Revelation. Love prompted Him to provide a covering of skins for Adam, that the shedding of blood might be a prophecy of the blood which was to take away the sin of the world. Love gave the pattern of the ark which was to shelter Noah and his family from the impending flood—the ark, a type of the Christ Who was to come and provide a sure refuge from the judgment of God. Love called Abraham out of his country to the land of promise, that in his promised seed all the nations of the earth might be blessed. This same love at last sent Jesus into the world that whosoever should believe in Him should not perish in their sins, but have everlasting life. This same love which throbbed towards man in the early days of Genesis has in these later days made known all the riches which are in Christ Jesus. Oh, the love of God! The surpassing love of God! And so it is with His faithfulness, His truth, His mercy, always constant, always the same. "I am the Lord, and I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." And it was because He was faithful to His promises, it was because His truth was to prevail, it was because His mercy is "from everlasting to everlasting," that Israel in her waywardness and sin was not consumed and utterly cast away. But because God was an unchangeable God, because He had planned the redemption of the world from the foundation of the world, because He was willing to give His only-begotten and well-beloved Son to die for the sin of the world, because of all this, the way was prepared for the coming of the Lord, and He came.

AND because God is unchangeable His plan of salvation is unchangeable, and His judgment against sin is irrevocable. In the very beginning God declared that the soul that sinneth it shall die. And He has never changed in His judgment against sin. Liberal thought of the day may belittle hell fire and the judgment, it may blind the human heart to the truth of God that the soul that sinneth it shall die, but it cannot change God or His unalterable condemnation and abhorrence of sin. Sin is sin in God's sight, whether it is the little sin or the big sin. The smallest drop of negro blood in a person's veins is enough to identify that person with the negro race, and the smallest taint of sin is sufficient to bring the soul under the condemnation of God. God has not changed in these latter days. He has not become reconciled to the presence of sin. Oh, that the world might realize this! Oh, that it might see in all the judgments which God has brought upon sin as recorded in His Word, a warning of its own fate! Nowhere in God's Word, from the opening sentence of Genesis to the closing Amen of Revelation, can there be found one single word of God which minimizes sin, or one single instance where He condones it. It is one thought and message all through, condemnation and punishment of sin. Then why will you, oh, soul, permit yourself to believe anything else? Why will you not believe God's Word?

BUT even as God is unchangeable in His attitude towards sin, so He is unchangeable in His plan of salvation. He is unchangeable in His desire and longing to have all men saved. He does not want to have anyone perish in his sins. God's plan of salvation wrought out so marvelously through the ages takes in the whole world. No one need die because of sin, if they will accept the substitute which God provided in the person of His Son. Jesus, the sinless one, bore the sin of the world in His body upon the cross. God there punished sin that the sinner might go free. But the sinner who refuses to accept the substitute which God has in His mercy provided, the sinner who refuses to wash in the "fountain filled with blood, drawn from Immanuel's veins," is lost, eternally lost. This is the plain teaching of God's Word. God changes not, and His judgment against sin can never be altered. The sinner must either bear the condemnation which his own sin brings upon him, and be shut out from the presence of the Lord forever, or he must accept the Christ who is able to cleanse from all sin and give one the right to a place in Heaven. Which shall it be? The unchangeable God stands waiting your answer. Will you enter the unchangeable way of salvation, or will you drift down on the broad road which ends in destruction and death?

Polyglot Nations.

The diversity of tongues to be found in one country is often a matter of surprise. Last year the Bible society's agents sold the Scriptures in 53 languages in the Russian empire, in 28 languages in Burmah, and in 30 in South Malaysia, and 53 in the Egyptian agency.

A CHAPTER ON HATS.

Fashionable Fancies and Fresh Novelties in the Millinery Department.

The flowers that bloom in the spring have reversed their habits, and have taken to blooming in the fall. Half of the winter hats are trimmed with flowers and with leaves, and the gay colors of Easter are seen now upon the hats of November. Evening hats are glorious in their flowers and chiffons, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

Particularly is the floral feature to be noticed in the fur hats which show a big red rose nestling in the fur. And particularly is this true also of the hats of chiffon and velvet which have a bunch of deep red roses in the velvet loops.

The beauty of a hat this season depends very largely also upon the manner in which it is worn. It must be tipped at an angle which might be called the angle of romance, and it must be carried with the head very high and in a coquettish manner. Unless a hat is properly carried it will not look modish, and the woman who does not know how to carry a large hat had best be content with a small one. There is a peculiar knack in the wearing of the big hat, which must be acquired by the woman who desires to appear in such a piece of headgear.

These are the special points to be noted in the hats of the season.

Many color combinations are seen, that of blue and white and black being a great favorite with brunettes of the clear type.

The square crown is coming in and flat hats are made into hats with high crowns by the addition of a velvet crown shirred upon the top.

Ostrich feathers are worn more than ever, and come in more expensive grades, $40 being a moderate price for an extra long and extra heavy feather.

Hats are worn more over the eyes than formerly, though the hat that is tipped over the forehead is not seen. Instead, there is the tipped hat, with a tendency toward a forward tilt.

The short-backed hat reigns, and hats are made with a brim that is astonishingly wide in the front and quite cut off in the back.

The trailing tendency is everywhere noted in the shape of feathers, flowers, chiffon, ribbon and fur, all of which have a fondness for trailing upon the hair or neck.

Fur will be worn a great deal as a hat trimming and the all-fur hat, made up in fashionable shape, is beginning to be seen.

The black hat, strange to say, is less in evidence in winter than in summer, for in the winter time, fancy runs toward something brighter than the black hat, and red of all shades takes precedence over all colors except blue.

A popular shade for a winter hat is robin redbreast red, which comes in velvet, in feathers and tips, and in chiffon. Particularly in maline and other hat stuffs is this red noticeable, and the all-red hat blossoms out on the darkest days.

A GREAT CONVENIENCE.

But More for the Neighbors Than for Members of the Family.

"Yes," he said to the friend who was enjoying a cigar with him in the library, "I've had a telephone put in."

"It's a great convenience, isn't it?"

"Oh, a very great convenience."

Just then the telephone bell rang and he went to see what was wanted. Presently his head appeared in the library doorway, writes Elliott Flower in the Brooklyn Eagle.

"Excuse me a moment," he said, "I've got to run next door and tell Mrs. Brown that someone wants to speak to her. In her pride over the possession of a telephone my wife foolishly told the Browns to use it whenever they wished, and they've told all their friends."

He came back with Mrs. Brown, who devoted several minutes to telling someone at the other end of the line that she was "so sorry baby had a cough."

"Nevertheless," he said, when Mrs. Brown had departed, "it is a great convenience. Pardon me: There it goes again."

A minute or two later he glanced into the room to say: "Got to run over and tell Mrs. Jones that her husband can't get home to dinner. Be right back."

He came back accompanied by a man who wanted to call up somebody at the club to tell him he couldn't be over that evening.

"Say!", said the man when he was through, "my friend isn't there yet, but I left a message for him. If he calls up later, will you be good enough to run over and let me know what he says?"

"Sure."

Just then a child appeared at the door with a piece of paper in her hand.

"Mamma's dressing to go out and can't come herself," she explained, "so she wanted to know if you would call up Jensen's grocery and tell them to send up the things on this list the first thing in the morning."

When this was done the host made himself comfortable in the library again.

"As I was saying," he remarked, "the telephone is a great convenience—for the neighbors."

"An Egg in a Nest."

Separate white and yolk, beat the former stiff, heap it in a saucer and drop the yolk on the top. Set it in a warm oven until the white is slightly browned. White of egg is often administered to those too weak to take anything else. It is beaten to a froth with a piece of salt and a little orange juice or rose water.—Farm and Home.

STATE NEWS PICK-UPS

MET ON A CURVE.

Six Men Killed and Two Injured, One Probably Fatally, in a Wreck.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 13.—Two heavy freight trains, one of them a double-header, collided in a dense fog near New Hope, Ky., on the Knoxville division of the Louisville & Nashville road with heavy loss and the gay colors of Easter are seen now upon the hats of November. Evening hats are glorious in their flowers and chiffons, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

Particularly is the floral feature to be noticed in the fur hats which show a big red rose nestling in the fur. And particularly is this true also of the hats of chiffon and velvet which have a bunch of deep red roses in the velvet loops.

THE SPECIAL ELECTION.

Dr. W. Godfrey Hunter Claims a Plurality of From 600 to 1,000.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 12.—Complete unofficial returns from 16 of the 19 counties composing the Eleventh congressional district, where a special election was held Tuesday to choose a successor to the late Congressman Boreing, give Dr. Godfrey Hunter, republican, 4,946; D. C. Edwards, republican, 3,436; John D. White, prohibitionist, 1,756. Hunter's plurality on the face of the returns received is 1,510, and he claims the official count will give him a plurality of from 600 to 1,000. Edwards appears equally confident and declares that the missing counties of Leslie, Letcher and Owsley will give him more than enough to offset Hunter's apparent lead. The fight between the two republicans will undoubtedly be carried to the floor of the house on account of the numerous legal complications that have arisen.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 13.—Returns from all the counties in the Eleventh congressional district, with only a few precincts missing, give Dr. Godfrey Hunter 5,022; D. C. Edwards, 3,849; John D. Wilson Hanshoe, jr., also began shooting. All the others drew knives and fought at close range.

ROOSEVELT'S TROUBLES.

Organization Leaders Secretly Opposed to Him—Pledges May Not Count.

In spite of the denial from the white house, there is no doubt that there is friction between President Roosevelt and at least two of his cabinet. The matter has been left in abeyance until the return of Secretary Shaw from his stumping tour, when further complications in the ranks of the republican leaders may be manifested. The cause of the squabble is the report of Mr. Bonaparte on the post office scandals, in which he reflects on Comptroller of the Treasury Tracewell and practically calls for his removal. Comptroller Tracewell is an Indiana man and very strong politically in the republican councils of that state, and his retention is necessary to the success of Congressman Hemenway, who has been selected by the administration as chairman of the committee on appropriations in the coming congress. There is no doubt that many of the republican leaders are not satisfied with President Roosevelt, especially those like Senator Hanna, Elkins, and Aldrich, who fear that some exuberant caprice of the president will lead their party into danger. The usually well informed Washington correspondent of the New York Post says: "The whole post office affair is rapidly developing into a controversy between the president and the republican organization in many states." Then he quoted an organization republican as saying: "The president seems to think," said an organization republican to-day, "that all that is necessary is for the country to elect him. He forgets the republican organization must first nominate him."

All this shows a strong underground sentiment against President Roosevelt in his own party by the party chiefs who have always controlled the delegation from their states to the republican national convention. The pledges already given by some of these leaders and the resolutions adopted endorsing President Roosevelt will be thrown aside and another selected in his place, if the winning combination can be made. The large and controlling delegations from New York and Pennsylvania have been pledged to President Roosevelt, not for love of him, but because the patronage depended on such action. These two states, with Ohio and Indiana can come pretty near dictating the nominee, with the delegates from the southern states ready for revolt. The revolt may never occur, because President Roosevelt may succumb to the pressure that the organization leaders will bring to bear on him, as he has done on former occasions. If he persists in the removal of Tracewell and in forcing his ideas on congress, the leaders may conclude to throw him overboard for some more pliant candidate who will think of someone else besides himself. If matters do not come to such a pass and the outlook for success of the republican ticket is doubtful, there will be a scramble by the organization leaders to save their own scalps from the political eruption that is probable and let the president care for his own fortunes.

The democrats can view with complacency the clouds gathering on the republican horizon, for in the event of President Roosevelt's rejection by the republican national convention, there would be a vast number of ardent republicans who would be at least luke warm for the slight cast upon their leader. If President Roosevelt is able to overcome the opposition in his own party and is the candidate, there will be very influential political elements that will openly and secretly oppose him, so either horn of the republican dilemma brings aid and promise of success to the cause of the people.

——Singularly enough two of the stanchest republican states, Massachusetts and Iowa, have developed more republican dissatisfaction with the party's protective tariff policy than is to be seen elsewhere and both of them will elect state officers on this occasion. Democratic triumphs are hardly to be expected, but a substantial decrease in republican majorities would be looked upon as a danger signal by republican leaders who are not quite sure that the tariff is too sacred an institution to be touched.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Secretary Shaw shouts "stand pat," but it is noticeable that a very small shove from Wall street will move him.—The Commoner.

——The president is busily engaged in preparing his message to congress, and we venture to trust that a reasonable share of his time is devoted to tearing up what he has written.—Detroit Free Press.

——President Roosevelt has pardoned a Massachusetts bank absconder because he thinks he has suffered enough already. Next in order will be Machen, Beavers, Heath, Smith et al. on the same grounds.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

LEADERS OF THE BLIND.

Republicans Fear the People, Therefore Try to Fool Them—What Democrats Believe.

It is really wonderful that any voters of ordinary intelligence can be fooled by the rubbish that cabinet officers and republican senators, not to say anything of the small fry spell-binders, declaim upon the stump. In Ohio we hear of Senator Hanna predicting disaster to the country if he is not reelected and declaring that to "stand pat" is the acme of political foresight. Then Senator Allison is reported to have said, in what the republican organs announce as "a clear and forcible exposition of the trust question" that the tariff had nothing whatever to do with the trusts. That it in no way benefited the steel trust, the meat trust or any other trust. Those are not the senator's words, but is the substance of his remarks. Yet, only a year ago, the republican platform of Iowa declared that the tariff gave shelter to the trusts and Senator Dolliver defended that position in a speech in the United States senate in reply to Senator Aldrich, who, like Hanna, is in favor of letting well enough alone. To cap the climax, Mr. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, who was congratulated by President Roosevelt on being able to stump Ohio for Senator Hanna, deliberately telling the people of that state that:

"The plan proposed by the minority party is to throw our commercial doors wide open for the free importation of the products of foreign labor. Members of that party insist that if we do this we will of necessity have unrestricted access to the markets of other countries. They urge that if we will but allow Europe to clothe us, furnish our glass, our earthenware, our hardware, our steel rails, our structural iron, and everything else we produce, we will thus secure a most wonderful export trade."

Now Secretary Shaw must have known he was romancing and enormously exagerating when he made that statement. The last national democratic platform declared: "Tariff laws should be amended by putting the products of the trusts on the free list, to prevent monopoly under the plea of protection." The platform of 1896 declared:

"We hold that tariff duties should be levied for purposes of revenue, such duties to be so adjusted as to operate equally throughout the country, and not discriminate between class or section, and that taxation should be limited by the needs of the government, honestly and economically administered."

The platform of 1892 declared:

"We denounce republican protection as a fraud—a robbery of the great majority of the American people for the benefit of the few. We declare it to be a fundamental principal of the democratic party that the federal government has no constitutional power to impose and collect tariff duties, except for the purposes of revenue only, and we demand that the collection of such taxes shall be limited to the necessities of the government when honestly and economically administered."

Are any of these declarations of the democratic party anywhere approaching "a plan to throw our commercial doors wide open for the free importation of the products of foreign labor?" Can Secretary Shaw quote any democratic speaker or newspaper in speaking of the tariff, saying anything that can be contorted into words he has put into democratic mouths?

It is so necessary to deceive the republican voters about what democrats stand for to prevent them from voting against their own frauds with which their own party is tainted?

Secretary Shaw knows and everyone who reads understands the position of the democratic party on the tariff and trust issues. Democrats believe in a tariff for revenue to yield enough to supply all the wants of the government, honestly administered. They also believe that it is wrong to tax people for millions of dollars surplus to be loaned to favored banks, like Secretary Shaw has been doing. They also believe and will probably declare in the next national platform that the tariff should be revised so that those trusts products that the trusts sell abroad cheaper than they sell the same products to our own people should be placed upon the free list.

That is the shoe that pinches Secretary Shaw, he sees the danger to his friends, the trusts and corporations, that are monopolists, in the democratic position. He fears the people if they know the truth and therefore tries to blind their eyes to the true issues between the parties.

ROBERT MILLER.

War upon the trusts; war upon monopoly; war upon special privileges—that is democracy.

——The president's attitude toward the post office department misdemeanants demonstrates that there is a good deal of advantage sometimes in being an ex.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——By the way, is there any reason why some of the phases of "high finance" manifested in the organization of the shipbuilding trust should not come under the application of the plain old-fashioned law that punishes people for obtaining money under false pretense? Is there any difference between a lying prospectus and the ordinary kind of misrepresentation?—Indianapolis Journal (Rep.).

——"And the democratic candidate for governor in no state except Iowa dare define himself on the tariff question," says Secretary Shaw. In which case all honor to the democratic candidate for governor in Iowa, and let us all hope that his example will be beneficial.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——If Senator Hanna is reelected he will have a dreadful time in Washington getting a curb on Secretary Shaw's self-appreciation. Mr. Shaw started out with a flourish of trumpets and a pathetic correspondence with the president to save the senator from harrowing defeat.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

ALUM, FLINT AND SULPHURIC ACID.

It is reported that in many localities houses are infested by peddlers trying to sell or introduce so-called "cheap" or low-priced baking powders, either directly or by an order upon a grocer. In most instances deception is used, and it is claimed that the article is a genuine baking powder and has all the merits of a pure article.

Housekeepers should be on their guard against this danger to their food. Alum powders are almost always low priced. But they are well known to be detrimental to health. In England and in some sections of this country their sale is prohibited by law. Congress has forbidden the sale of food containing alum in the District of Columbia. The highest authorities condemn their use. Dr. S. W. Johnson, for instance, Professor of Chemistry at Yale College, says: "Bread made with a baking powder containing alum must yield a soluble alumina salt with the gastric juice, and must, therefore, act as a poison."

It is well known that these so-called "cheap" goods are made from alum or the very cheapest materials. One of them was recently analyzed at Yale College and found to be one-quarter sharp pointed grains of ground flint. Others are filled with sulphuric acid, and salts of lead are also found in them.

In baking powders be sure to get a reputable well-known cream of tartar brand, and never buy from peddlers.

An Indian Elysium.

Ages before the white men came among them their ancestors had lived in a far-off country, to the west, beyond the mighty rivers and mountains, at a place where the waters constantly moved to and fro. In the belief that away toward the rising sun there existed a red man's paradise—a land of deer and salmon and beaver—they had traveled on toward the east and south to find it; but they were scourged and divided by famine, so that it was not until after long and weary journeyings, during which many, many moons had passed, that they came at length to the broad and beautiful valley of the Hudson, whose bosom forever ebbed and flowed like the waters from whose shores they had come; and here, amidst a profusion of game and fish, they had rested and found that Indian elysium of which they had dreamed before they left their own homes in the land of the setting sun.—From "Indian Legends of the Hudson," by William Walt, in Four-Track News.

In Earnest Then.

"I have noticed," said the serious, offhand philosopher, "that a woman will get a golf dress when she has no intention of playing golf."

"That's so," agreed the man with the auburn whiskers.

"And," continued the off-hand philosopher, "she will get a ball gown when she cares nothing about dancing, and a tennis dress when she wouldn't play tennis for fear she will freckle, and a bathing suit when she has no thought of going into the water, and a riding habit when the very thought of climbing on a horse gives her the chills, and—"

"Yes," interrupted the man with the auburn whiskers; "but when she gets a wedding dress she means business. Ever notice that?"—London Tit-Bits.

Her Idea of a Poet.

Walking home from school the other day some children were discussing the perfection and usefulness of their respective fathers. "My father's the best man in the world," said one little girl; "he is a minister. He makes people go to church."

"Mine is the best," piped up another; "he's a doctor. He makes sick people well so they can go to church."

Three or four more enlarged upon the benefit the world derived from their fathers, when finally a sweet, blue-eyed little girl said: "My papa's the best of all. He's a poet."

"A poet!" said another, in sympathetic surprise; "why, a poet isn't a profession! It's a disease!"

New to Him.

On his first visit to London, an Aberdeen youth visited a refreshment parlor and, noting a woman eating an ice, said to the waiter: "Hi, man, gi'e me yin o' thae." Being supplied, he took a spoonful and made a wry face. "I'm doobin' it's a bit frost bitten, mister," said he.

"Oh, no, sir," remarked the waiter, "it's an ice."

"Gosh! Do they eat ice in London?" asked the wondering Aberdeenian; "man, we slide an' skate on't in Aberdeen!"

Rushing Business.

"Oh, yes, I've opened an office," said the young lawyer. "You may remember that you saw me buying an alarm clock the other day."

"Yes," replied his friend. "You have to get up early these mornings, eh?"

"Oh, no; I use it to wake me up when it's time to go home."—Philadelphia Press.

THE "400" AND THE ZOO.

An Alliance Which Some Persons Were Consummately Ignorant About.

"Some people," said the Philadelphia woman, according to a New York exchange, "have a queer idea of what the '400' does, and it does queer things, goodness knows, without having things it doesn't do laid to it.

"I was going through the zoo the other day with a friend," she went on, "and while we were standing before a cage in the lion house my companion turned to me and asked:

"'I wonder who keeps all this up?'

"Before I had a chance to reply, we were both astonished to hear a deep Irish voice reply:

"'Sure, madam, it's the society.'

"We turned and beheld as healthy a looking specimen of the working woman as ever I laid eyes on.

"'The society?' questioned my companion, in a half amused way. 'What society?'

"The washerwoman looked us all over with contempt; then she blurted out:

"'The society—the society! What ninnies ye are! Sure, an' haven't ye ever heard of the "400," the society of Noo York? That's the society that keeps this here place up.'

"And with that she turned on her heel and left we two ignoramuses staring in blank amazement after her retreating bulk."

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER
Wednesday, - - Nov. 18, 1903.
W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

THE Boone County Telephone Company has made arrangements whereby it can give all its subscribers connection with the Bell Company, early next month.

HUNTER defeated Edwards for Congress in the Eleventh district. Edwards declares that his defeat was the result of election frauds and thefts the most outrageous. It is purely a Republican scrap.

Cole Younger accepted a compromise recently, and dismissed his suit against the Younger-James show company for $25,000 and an accounting. Younger, by the compromise, is released from his three years contract with the show and retains all of the funds he held except $1,000 which he turned over to the show. At the time he severed his connection with the show, Younger had in his possession $5,000. He says he is done with the show people and would not go back to them for a $50,000 bonus and one-fourth their profits. This closes all litigation so far as Younger is concerned.

The horse thief continues to ply his vocation in Grant county with systematic regularity as scarcely a week passes that a fine horse does not disappear from some part of our sister county and that too in the face of vigilance of officers and a Horse and Mule Protective Association. City Marshal Clark landed in the Williamstown jail last week one L. E. Rush, who is charged with stealing a fine horse from W. Ashcraft, a well-to-do Grant county farmer. The man was arrested at his home in Cincinnati. Rush is known in this county where he formerly lived. He is an ex-convict, having served a term in the penitentiary for horse stealing.—Pendletonian.

The attention of Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture, having been called to the extremely low price of tobacco, the Secretary made the following statement: "The trouble is the farmers grow too much tobacco, whereas they should rotate their crops. If they would cultivate fewer acres and get a larger yield per acre, they would be more successful. That which they should do is to give more attention to the cow and cultivate the pastures. In that way they can build up and recuperate their lands. I learned when in Tennessee that the tobacco farmers do not derive as great a yield per acre of tobacco as they formerly did. The cultivation of the leaf year after year deteriorates the land."

It is the rule of many breeders founding flocks for wool to select the common grade ewes of the country and top them with pure bred bucks, and many find that a per cent of Merino blood is a good thing in the ewes, for such a heavy fleece of wool. It has been my observation, says Prof. W. L. Carlyle of the Winsconsin station, that the more dense and close the fleece of the sheep the more hardihood and vigor they appear to possess, and that the flesh of such is much more firm, tender, and of a finer texture than where the fleece is loose and open in character. The ewes should be mated with the best type of a pure bred ram obtainable and chosen from one of the Downs or Lowland breeds, unless where a special purpose sheep is desired and used for the purpose intended.

The methods adopted by the most successful cattle feeders, the men who make the most out of the cattle and feed they grow,—is slowly being adopted by farmers generally. They realize that three and four years old beef can no longer be grown at a profit. They understand that with the increased valuation of farm land from $25 to $75 and $100 per acre means the necessity for betterment in methods of breeding and feeding. They also have object lessons around them in cattle feeders, who, by the manner in which they prepare their corn and feed stuffs, in the growth of a higher per cent of protein foods to go with corn, as well as in better blood, are growing and finishing 1,300 to 1,500 cattle at 20 to 30 months old on a great deal less food stuffs than were formerly required to finish the same weights at 3 and 4 years. These things which are to be seen in all sections of the central States are slowly but surely doing the work along advanced lines.

In December of last year, a Pastors' Sunday School Institute was held in Louisville, Ky., that attracted favorable comment all over America. About 500 pastors and prospective pastors were in attendance and ten states were represented. This year, December 15-18, is to be repeated on a much larger scale. Marion Lawrence, Int. Gen. Sec'y., Dr. H. M. Hamill, Dr. B. W. Spilman, and Mr. W. C. Boarce, four of the most noted leaders and Sunday school experts of America will be the conductors. Besides these, the Institute will be addressed by the presidents of the three Theological Seminaries of the State. Dr. S. H. Green, of Washington, D. C., will deliver a course of lectures at the same time at the Baptist Seminary and these will be free to all. In addition to this, The International Educational Committee, one of the most important Sunday School Committees in America, will hold a meeting here at that time, and we will also hear from these. This brings together, ten of our most noted Sunday school workers. Surely no pastor can afford to not come But we want it clearly understood that while the Institute is especially for pastors, all Sunday school workers are invited and expected. A rate of one fare for the round trip has been asked for. Pastors will be entertained free, and we are recommending to Sunday schools that they send their pastor and pay his way. They could not possibly make a better investment. Program and full particulars may be obtained by writing the General Secretary, F. A. Fox, Room 19, Louisville Trust Bldg., Louisville, Kentucky.

Martin county, which has a big Republican majority, there being only a few Democratic votes in the county. John Hale had secured the Republican nomination for Circuit Clerk, but for some cause his name was accidentally left off the ballot, a fact not discovered until after the election. Three friends wrote the name of G. W. Jarrell, Democrat, on the ballot and these three votes elected him.

At the meeting of the Tobacco Growers' Association held in Lexington, last week, the proposition that had been made the Association to furnish $7,500,000 if the Association would furnish $2,500,000 was accepted, those present at the meeting meeting saying that the Association will, without doubt, be able to raise its money in time to handle this year's crop. The meeting was very enthusiastic, those who are on the inside claiming that everything is in excellent condition, and that the Association is a sure go. If there is no slip of the cup, it will be a very short time now until the growers who have signed the contracts will be notified of points at which their tobacco will be received.

"The origin of the term 'grass widow,'" said a philologist, "is puzzling. Some say it came from the French—that it was originally 'grace widow,' that is, widow by grace of courtesy. Others say it derives from the old English custom of a man's hanging out a broom when his wife was away over night. To hang out the broom was a common phrase. When the thing was done the meaning was that the house had been swept clear of the wife's presence, and the husband's friends were to visit him and do as they pleased. In time, instead of hanging out a broom, the husband came to hang out only a bunch of grass. Thus he grew to be called a 'grass widower,' and his wife a 'grass widow."—Philadelphia Record.

A statesman recently on a business trip to this city gave it as his opinion that the importance of the men of national affairs and their relation to the government and its service can be determined in no better fashion than by observing the actions of Ross, the veteran colored doorkeeper to the private office of the postmaster general. Ross has been in the government service for many years and has served under several postmaster generals. He knows every man of prominence in the country, and they all know and respect him. It is said that the importance of any person can be gauged by the manner in which he is greeted by this privileged individual. Ross is said to be all that stands between the postmaster general and nervous prostration, and he has certainly earned such a reputation. He has guarded his charge carefully from all intruders for many years and has turned away many persons whose business with the head of the postoffice department could be just as easily transacted with some one else. Ross is the firm friend of all the newspaper men that visit the department, and he is never more polite and attentive than when answering their questions and arranging for interviews between them and his chief.—Washington Star.

A number of farmers in Cass county, Iowa, have gone into the undertaking business, along with other lines of trade, all together with their relatives and possibly some of their friends will be buried at absolute cost, thus eliminating the heavy profits said to be gleaned by the average undertaker in preparing a man for his final sleep. The Farmers' Supply company is the name of the new corporation which is capitalized at $25,000, $20,000 of which is paid up. The headquarters of the company will be at Anita and many prominent farmers as well as some business men are stockholders in the company, which will do a general merchandise business and handle hardware, furniture and undertaking goods, beside farm implements. Under the laws of the corporation each member will receive a rebate at the end of the year on the total volume of his purchases, besides a dividend apportioned from the earnings of the business

Alfalfa is found to be fine to feed to young and growing draft horses on account of the high per cent of protein in the plant. The Livestock Journal says that draft horse breeders west of the Missouri river, where so much alfalfa is grown, find that they can grow draft horses on alfalfa that develop large size and fine action cheaper than in any other county or clime. A good draft horse that sells at $200 costs but little more than a steer to raise. There are several large breeding studs of pure bred Percherons in Kansas, Colorado and the West that have demonstrated the success of draft horse raising. Alfalfa with very little oats and corn is producing ton horses in the West cheaper and faster than in any other country. They can breed draft horses out there and mature the geldings fitted for market, keeping the mares for breeding as worth double as much as the geldings. And so this plant is found as valuable for growing young horses as for other classes of livestock. These things will cause the sowing of more plats of alfalfa in these central States than heretofore; we say plats, because it has been found wise to first determine suitable soils for alfalfa. When this is settled by trial larger fields may readily be sown.

J. M. Conner sent a considerable drove of western horses to his wife's farm down on Clore's Ridge, one day last week. They are in excellent condition to appreciate a liberal contribution of hay and corn. No doubt Mr. Conner purchased them as a bargain lot, as he is always alert for that kind of a snap.

Chas. Westbay and Owen Conner engaged in an argument about the length of an ear of corn we have in this office, the other day, and Chas. wanted to wager a V that the ear was 14 inches long, but when the rule was applied to it, it was scant 12 inches in length. The length of an ear of corn is very deceiving in looks.

Another Accidental Shooting.

Frank Hammon, of the Gunpowder neighborhood, met with a peculiar and painful accident, one night last week. He was present at a dance, where a colored band furnished the music, and at the conclusion of the amusement one of the musicians was in a stooping position putting his violin in its case, when a revolver fell out of his inside coat pocket. When the gun struck the floor the jar caused it to explode one chamber, the ball from which took effect in one of Hammon's legs; lodging just beneath the skin on the opposite side of the limb from where it entered. It made quite an ugly wound, and the unfortunate young fellow has been laid up ever since.

What to Do Until the Doctor Arrives

"One of my children was taken with cramp colic and suffered severely," says S. B. Elzee, of Monett, Mo. You Can Now Shoot Quails.

It is now lawful to kill quails, but the nonresident hunter must keep hands off unless he has a license, but the hunters from Covington and other large cities in the state are not required to have a license, neither are land owners required to allow strangers, no matter where they are from, to hunt on their premises. The nonresident law as it is known is n. g. It ought to apply to nonresidents of the county.

A Warning to Vandals.

Some of the trustees of the public schools have made complaint to me that their school property is being broken into and abused in many ways. This is contrary to both moral and statute law, and the school officials will put forth every effort to convict and punish the offender, especially in district No. 18. Please refrain from so doing and save expense and trouble.

An Old Lady Badly Hurt.

Mrs. Clarissa Ashley, one of the oldest citizens in Florence, fell and fractured one of her hips, one day last week. Mrs. Ashley lives alone and had laid on the floor where she fell, for about two hours, when her grocer, who called to deliver some goods, discovered her. She had exhausted all means at her command to attract attention of someone. At last accounts she was resting easy, and doing as well as could be expected.

A Pleasant Birthday Party.

Miss May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Clore, celebrated her seventeenth birthday with an elegant supper last Saturday night, which was enjoyed by about all of her young acquaintances and associates. The hospitality of the occasion was unbounded, and the culinary art was exhausted in the preparation of the repast. Each of the guests presented Miss May with 17 cents, and her presents, in the aggregate, amounted to quite a neat little sum, which she will invest in something handsome to serve as a reminder of the very pleasant occasion. Parlor games were enjoyed until nearly midnight, when the guests wished Miss May a long and happy life, and took their departure.

The Gaines Tin Wedding.

The leading social event of the season in this neighborhood, was the tin wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Gaines, which was celebrated last Saturday, at their pleasant home two miles west of town. Saturday was an ideal fall day, and at an early hour friends from far and near began putting in their appearance, each bringing a tin or granite present for the bride and groom, and by noon their supply of tin and graniteware was of large proportions, articles of all sizes and patterns, both useful and ornamental, constituting the very liberal contribution. The marriage ceremony was not repeated, but the bridal feast of ten years ago was duplicated, and all the surroundings bore the air of a bridal occasion, except that Mr. and Mrs. Gaines on this occasion were busy receiving the guests and looking after their comfort and enjoyment in that very pleasant manner that is peculiarly their own. After the very elegant dinner had been discussed, Mrs Gaines excused herself, but soon appeared in her wedding dress that she has carefully preserved. It is a beautiful white satin, and not so far from the present style.

After spending a most delightful day the guests took their departure, hoping that Mr. and Mrs. Gaines may live to celebrate their diamond wedding.

It's shameful when youth fails to show proper respect for old age, but just the contrary in the case of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They cut off maladies no matter how severe and irrespective of old age. Dyspepsia, jaundice, Fever, Constipation, all yield to this perfect Pill. 25c at All Druggists.

Of Inierest to the Tobacco Growers.

To the Tobacco Growers:—We take this means of communicating with you in regard to our Association. On the 12th inst., we attended a large and enthusiastic meeting at Lexington, in which the tobacco growing counties of Ky. and Ohio were represented by over 300 earnest workers for the Association. On the call of counties we learned that some were now ready for business and those that were not ready gave assurance that they would be ready at the time appointed for receiving. Brethren, we were chagrined to be compelled to report Boone as one of the laggards. Why is this the case? Surely not for lack of wealth, for other counties with less than one-half the ability, announced themselves ready. We prefer to think that it is from the fact that the growers and farmers of Boone have not fully realized the condition that confronts us. Your representatives have given their promise to use their best efforts to put Boone in line with her neighboring counties, and they ask the assistance of every friend in the county in doing this. There is only one thing that is necessary, and that is to take stock in sufficient quantity to cover one-fourth of the crop pledged in the county, and we are assured all the money we need. This can be done without paying out a dollar in money. This is certainly a very fair proposition, and we expect to accomplish it. The following named gentlemen attended the meeting at Lexington, and know the situation and will take pleasure in giving you any information desired. Make it your business to see them at once and do not wait for them to hunt for you; for they are not working on either salary or commission: T. G. Willis, N. S. Walton, John C. Bedinger, R. L. Huey, J. G. Kennedy, Joe W. Cleek.

If you have any trouble with your stomach try a box of these Tablets. You are certain to be pleased with the result. Price 25c. For sale by all druggists.

Stepped Against a Hot Stove.

A child of Mrs. Geo. T. Benson when getting his usual Saturday night bath, stepped back against a hot stove which burned him severely. The child was in great agony and his mother could do nothing to pacify him. Remembering that she had a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house, she thought she would try it. In less than half an hour after applying it the child was quiet and asleep, and in less than two weeks was well. Mrs. Benson is a well known resident of Keller, Va. Pain Balm is an antiseptic liniment and especially valuable for burns, cuts, bruises and sprains. For sale by all druggists.

THE CUBAN TREATY.

President's Message to the Extra Session of Congress.

He Urges Its Ratification and Deems Such Legislation Is Demanded, Not Only By Our Interests, But By Our Honor.

Washington, Nov. 10.—The following message of the president was sent to the congress Tuesday:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I have convened the congress that it may consider the legislation necessary to put into operation the commercial treaty with Cuba, which was ratified by the senate at its last session and subsequently by the Cuban government. I deem such legislation demanded not only by our interest but by our honor. We can not with propriety abandon the course upon which we have so wisely embarked. When the acceptance of the Platt amendment, which required from Cuba by the action of congress of the United States, this government thereby definitely committed itself to the policy of treating Cuba as occupying a unique position as regards this country.

It was provided that when the island became a free and independent republic she should stand in such close relations with us as in certain respects to come within our system of international policy, and it necessarily follows that she must also to a certain degree become included within the lines of our economic policy. Situated as Cuba is, it would not be possible for this country to permit the strategic abuse of the plan by any foreign military power. It is for this reason that certain limitations have been imposed upon her financial policy and that naval stations have been conceded by her to the United States. The negotiations as to the details of these naval stations are on the eve of completion. They are so situated as to prevent any idea that there is the intention ever to use them against Cuba, or otherwise than for the protection of Cuba from the assaults of foreign foes, and for the better safeguarding of American interests in the waters south of us.

These interests have been largely increased by the consequences of the war with Spain, and will be still further increased by the building of the isthmian canal. They are both military and economic. The granting to us by Cuba of the naval station above alluded to is of the utmost importance from a military standpoint, and is proof of the good faith with which Cuba is treating us. Cuba has made great progress since her independence was established. She has advanced steadily in every way. She already stands high among her sister republics of the new world. She is loyally observing her obligations to us, and she is entitled to like treatment by us.

The treaty submitted to you for approval secures to the United States economic advantages as great as those given to Cuba. Not an American interest is sacrificed. By the treaty a large Cuban market is secured to our producers. It is a market which lies at our doors, which is already large, which is capable of great expansion, and which is especially important to the development of our export trade. It would be indeed short-sighted for us to refuse to take advantage of such opportunity and to force Cuba into making arrangements with other countries to our disadvantage.

This reciprocity treaty stands by itself. It is demanded on consideration of broad national policy as well as by our economic interest. It will do harm to no industry. It will benefit many industries. It is in the interest of our people as a whole, both because of its importance from the broad standpoint of international policy and because economically it intimately concerns us to develop and secure the rich Cuba market for our farmers, artisans, merchants, and manufacturers. Finally it is desirable as a guaranty of the good faith of our nation toward her young sister republic to the south, whose welfare must ever be closely bound with ours. We gave her liberty. We are knit to her by the memories of the blood and the courage of our soldiers who fought for her in war; by the memory of the wisdom and integrity of our administrators who saved her in peace, and who started her so well on the difficult path of self government. We must help her onward and upward, and in helping her we shall help ourselves. The foregoing considerations caused the negotiation of the treaty with Cuba and its ratification by the senate. They now with equal force support the legislation by the congress which by the terms of the treaty is necessary to render it operative. A failure to enact such legislation would come perilously near a repudiation of the pledged faith of the nation.

DETAINED BRITISH SHIPS.

The State Department Notified That They Have Been Released.

Washington, Nov. 12.—The state department has been informed that the two British steamships which were detained at the port of Buena Ventura by the Colombian government with the intention of using them to transport troops to the isthmus have been released and have left that port.

The British government knew nothing of the detention of these British vessels until notified by the state department through the embassy here. It was the intention of the navy department to have the Colombian authorities informed that no troops could be landed on the isthmus from these vessels, but their release and departure from Buena Ventura without troops made this course unnecessary.

The state department has decided to request the authorities at Panama to receive Gen. Reyes, who is going to the isthmus on a peace mission from Bogota. It is estimated that he can not reach his destination within two weeks.

THE ANNUAL MESSAGE.

President Changed That Portion Relating to the Canal.

Extracts From the Original Message to the Regular Session of the Congress Were Given Out For Publication.

Washington, Nov. 14.—For several weeks President Roosevelt has had in preparation his annual message to the congress, to be presented at the opening of the regular session. That part of the message in which the president discussed the negotiations between the United States and the government of Colombia for isthmian canal treaty, it is stated, was completed about two weeks ago. Events which have occurred on the isthmus and in this country since that time have made it necessary for the president to completely rewrite that part of the message touching the canal negotiations.

In the opening sentence of his discussion of the negotiations with Colombia the president said:

"I regret to report that contrary to all expectations the government of the republic of Colombia refused to ratify the treaty for building a canal across the isthmus of Panama.

"High authorities on international law hold that the canal can be dug as an incident to exercising the power to prevent the obstruction of traffic across the isthmus. Nevertheless, in accordance with our settled policy of behaving with scrupulous fairness and generosity towards our weaker sister republics of the south, taking no position that can even by implication be treated as unfriendly, unless literally forced thereto, we have endeavored to provide for the building of the canal by treaty. In this treaty we went as far as it is possible for us to go in the direction of making concessions to the United States of Colombia. No further concerns can or should be made by this government.

"A private company which in the past undertook to build the canal has failed. The events of the last few years warrant us in now saying not only that the canal shall not be constructed by any foreign government, but that it is not to be constructed by any private company. It must, therefore, be dug by the government of the United States."

Referring further along to the territory bisected by the canal the president wrote:

"On the one hand, the United States desires to safeguard with scrupulous care the interest and the honor of such country or countries. On the other hand, in my judgment, it is time to declare that the beginning of the canal can not be much longer delayed. This nation does not desire to be unreasonable or impatient; but it can not and will not permit any body of men permanently to obstruct one of the great world highways of traffic; and refusal to permit the building of the canal amounts to such obstruction. Of course, to insist upon unreasonable terms is equivalent to a refusal."

"Reasonable time in the case of such an enterprise as this, an enterprise which has been thought of for nearly four centuries, which has been planned in detail and worked at for half a century, and which, when completed, will endure for ages and will change the geography of a hemisphere and the trade routes of the world must, of course, mean whatever time is necessary to convince ourselves that the course we are following is wise and proper.

"It seems evident that in a matter such as this we should finally decide which is the best route; and if the advantages of this route over any other possible route are sufficiently marked we should then give notice that we can no longer submit to trifling or insincere dealing on the part of those whom the accident of position has placed in temporary control of the ground through which the route must pass; that if they will come to an agreement with us in straightforward fashion we shall in return act not only with justice, but with generosity; and that if they fail to come to such agreement with us we must forthwith take the matter into our own hands."

The Doctor's Statement.

St. John, Kans., Nov. 10th.—This town has a genuine sensation in the case of a little boy, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William McBride. Dr. Limes, the attending physician, says:

"Scarlet Fever of a very malignant type brought this child very near to death and when the fever left him, he was semi-paralyzed in the right leg and right arm. He also lost hearing in his right ear and his mind was much affected.

"His parents tried another treatment for a time and when I was recalled I found that he was having spells very like Epilepsy and was very bad and gradually growing worse. I advised the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills and in a short time the child began to improve. Inside of a week the nervous spasms or epileptic seizures ceased altogether."

Mr. and Mrs McBride have made a sworn statement of the facts and Dr. Jesse L. Limes has added his sworn statement saying that Dodd's Kidney Pills and nothing else cured the Ita.

Miss Rose Peterson, Secretary Parkdale Tennis Club, Chicago, from experience advises all young girls who have pains and sickness peculiar to their sex, to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many beautiful young girls develop into worn, listless and hopeless women, simply because sufficient attention has not been paid to their physical development. No woman is exempt from physical weakness and periodic pain, and young girls just budding into womanhood should be carefully guided physically as well as morally.

If you know of any young lady who is sick, and needs motherly advice, ask her to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., who will give her advice free, from a source of knowledge which is unequalled in the country. Do not hesitate about stating details which one may not like to talk about, and which are essential for a full understanding of the case.

Miss Hannah E. Mershon, Collingswood, N. J., says:

"I thought I would write and tell you that, by following your kind advice, I feel like a new person. I was always thin and delicate, and so weak that I could hardly do anything. Menstruation was irregular.

"I tried a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and began to feel better right away. I continued its use, and am now well and strong, and menstruate regularly. I cannot say enough for what your medicine did for me."

How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Fannie Kumpe.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have derived from your advice and the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The pains in my back and womb have all left me, and my menstrual trouble is corrected. I am very thankful for the good advice you gave me, and I shall recommend your medicine to all who suffer from female weakness."—Miss FANNIE KUMPE, 1922 Chester St., Little Rock, Ark. REVOLT IN COLOMBIA.

Minister Beaupre Says it is Not Impossible.

Bogota, Tuesday, Nov. 10.—Gens. Reyes, Holguin and Ospina left here today for Panama on a diplomatic mission with full powers to offer the Isthmians a satisfactory treaty and such other concessions as may bring the Isthmus back to the Colombian union.

It is expected that amicable arrangements will be made and such are heartily desired here. News from the state department at Washington is anxiously awaited.

Washington, Nov. 16.—A revolution in Colombia is not impossible, according to an opinion expressed in a dispatch received at the state department from United States Minister Beaupre, at Bogota. It was dated Thursday, November 12, and at that time Mr. Beaupre described the feeling in the capital city as panicky.

The minister has delivered to the Colombian government the instructions sent to him by the state department on the 6th instant, advising him that the United States has entered into relations with the government at Panama and commending to both governments of Colombia and Panama "The peaceful and equitable settlement of all questions at issue between them."

The Colombian government, according to Minister Beaupre, was disposed to ask for an explanation of the instructions, but the minister informed it that he regarded them as self-explanatory. Mr. Beaupre still appears confused about the instructions sent to him regarding his leave of absence, probably because of the delay in the receipt by him of cablegrams regarding the matter. He has been again informed that he is at liberty to leave Bogota whenever he desires and it is expected that he will take early advantage of the opportunity.

Mr. Bunau-Varilla, the minister from Panama, continued his efforts Sunday to secure recognition of the new government by the European nations. Twice he saw the French ambassador in this behalf and Sunday night M. Bunau-Varilla expressed the opinion that France soon would accord the recognition desired. The French government is anxious that the republic of Panama shall guarantee to the Panama Canal Co. and the French citizens interested therein all the rights, privileges, etc., now held by them. This guarantee is desired before any steps looking to the recognition by France is given, and Sunday night M. Varilla cabled his government for authority to make such representations. Sunday he received a long cablegram from Panama expressing thanks to the government of the United States for its courtesy in offering the privileges of a United States warship to Gen. Reyes on his arrival at the Isthmus of Panama should he desire to go aboard one.

The state department received information Sunday night that the president's yacht, the Mayflower, had arrived at Colon, with Adm. John G. Walker, the president of the Isthmian canal commission, who is to make an investigation of affairs on the Isthmus, and report to the president and Rr. Adm. Coghlan, who is to assume command of the American fleet on the Atlantic side of the Isthmus. The Mayflower made a rapid run to Colon, having steamed the 1,800 miles between Washington and that place since last Sunday.

TWO COUNTS' CLAIMS.

They Will Ask For $20,000,000 From the Prussian Government.

London, Nov. 16.—The Daily Mail's St. Petersburg correspondent says that the two Counts Muennich, descendants of the famous Russian field marshal, are about to claim $20,000,000 from the Prussian government, the value of the estate, with interest, which Frederick the Great presented to the field marshal in 1741 for the latter's assistance in arranging a favorable treaty with Russia. It is said the proofs of the claim are indisputable.

Anarchist Meeting.

Barcelona, Nov. 16.—The police dispersed the meeting of anarchists which had been arranged to celebrate the anniversary of the execution of the Chicago socialists in 1886. The action of the authorities was taken because violent speeches were made at the meeting advocating an active propaganda of anarchistic doctrines.

FETES IN DENMARK.

President Roosevelt Sends His Best Wishes to King Christian.

Copenhagen, Nov. 16.—Fetes were held throughout Denmark Sunday in honor of the 40th anniversary of King Christian's accession to the throne, the population everywhere rendering homage to their aged and beloved sovereign. King Christian, who is in excellent health, desired to spend the day quietly with his family at Fredensburg castle, but notwithstanding this desire, an enormous crowd went to the castle and cheered him and he was compelled several times to return his thanks.

Thousands of telegrams and addresses of congratulation as well as gifts and flowers have been received. Many of the messages of congratulation came from the United States. Under cabled instructions from Washington, United States Minister Swenson telegraphed to the king President Roosevelt's hearty felicitations coupled with the best wishes for his majesty's health, and for a continuation for many years to come of his peaceful, happy and prosperous reign.

DIED IN A BATHROOM.

Chevalier Petich, Scientist, Inventor and Scholar, Passes Away.

New York, Nov. 16.—In the bathroom of his home at Ninth avenue was found Sunday the body of Chevalier Luigi Petich, former ambassador of Italy to Mexico. He had been dead three days and apoplexy is said to have been the cause of death. Petich, who was 65 years old, was a man of many attainments, a scientist, inventor and scholar, but withal a recluse.

Luigi Petich was the man who found and owned the famous "Smiling toltec heads." These were among the first early American archaeological finds which went to prove the relationship of the earlier races of this continent with Asiatics. The heads were found in Mexico in sepulchural mounds in which skeletons and broken relics were also discovered. Replicas of them have been made and sent all over the world.

The Petich collection, as it was known, consisted of 1,620 objects, all of Mexico relics, and in scientific value it was second only to that in the museum of the City of Mexico.

SANTO DOMINGO ATTACKED.

The Forts Around the City Were Engaged With the Insurgents.

The town was not damaged and the situation is unchanged. The United States cruiser Baltimore arrived this afternoon. Business is at a standstill.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Confirmatory information of the attack on Santo Domingo by the revolutionists reached the state department Sunday in a dispatch from Minister Powell. He reported that the revolutionists were attacking the city on three sides. There were no other details in Minister Powell's cablegram. The cruiser Baltimore, which was ordered to San Domingo waters, is now there so that American interests will be given full protection.

RIOTING IN CHICAGO.

Scenes of Disorder Result From Street Car Men's Strike.

Several Cars Were Wrecked and a Number of Non-Union Motormen and Conductors Injured by Flying Stones.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—A general strike of the 3,000 employes of the Chicago City railway was decided on Wednesday night at a mass meeting of the men. They quit work at 4 o'clock Thursday morning.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Constant scenes of disorder over a district approximately 50 square miles in extent resulted Thursday from the inauguration of a strike by the employes of one of the two principal surface street railway companies in Chicago. All along the lines wherever cars were started strike sympathizors made desperate onslaughts on the crews, beginning at dawn Thursday and continuing as long as cars remained on the tracks. The tie-up was made complete.

A number of cars were wrecked and that no person was killed is no fault of the rioters. One man had his back broken and the first shot of the strike was fired at Wentworth avenue and West Sixty-Ninth street, where a mob of several hundred persons tried to hold up a train.

Many persons, chiefly non-union street car men, were injured by flying stones or splintered glass. Two women were among those hurt.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Twenty-five cars run on the Wentworth avenue line without damage to the cars or injury to the non-union employes operating them was what the Chicago City Railway Co. was able to accomplish Friday with the assistance of the police department. The cars were run at three different times. In the first two runs the round trip was made in about three hours; in the third in about one-half the usual time, which is one and one-half hours.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—A victory, temporary at least, was scored Sunday by the management of the Chicago City railway against its striking employes. From early in the morning until dark the company succeeded in maintaining a regular service on its Wentworth avenue line, which extends from 79th street to the down-town district, a distance of eight miles. The first car, manned by a newly-hired non-union crew, left the car barns guarded by a dozen policemen at 8 o'clock and was followed four minutes later by another train.

Twenty-five cars in all were put into the service but the schedule was frequently interfered with by delays caused by obstructions being placed on the tracks and the inexperience of men in charge of cars. The most serious trouble occurred during the morning when a number of arrests were made, but clashes between the police and the crowds that the streets were frequented with during the afternoon and when darkness set in it was not considered safe to send more cars from the barn. The last car returned to the barns at 4:30 o'clock and after it had been safely housed the day's work came to an end. More arrests were made during the day than at any time since the strike was declared. The most trouble was experienced between 22d and 39th streets.

In the blocks bounded by these thoroughfares crowds of men, women and children congregated and as the first cars passed hooted at the police and non-union employes. This was soon followed by more violent demonstrations. Huge barricades were piled upon the tracks, stones were thrown at the cars and a hand-to-hand conflict between the police and the crowd followed in several instances. Several patrol wagons which had previously been called were soon filled with prisoners.

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Extra Session.

Washington, Nov. 10.—Congress met Monday in extra session, organized and adjourned until Tuesday.

Washington, Nov. 11.—The house was in session less than half an hour Tuesday, an early adjournment being taken out of respect to the memory of two deceased members. The president's message was read and referred to the committee on ways and means, the membership of which is yet to be announced. The message also was ordered printed. The speaker announced the committees on rules and mileage. Aside from making provision for the payment of mileage of members no further business was transacted.

Washington, Nov. 12.—Senator—Several hundred petitions protesting against Reed Smoot's retaining his seat as junior senator from Utah were filed in the senate Wednesday. Most of these were offered by Senator Burrows, chairman of the elections committee, though nearly every state registered objections through petitions filed by their senators. Churches, religious organizations of all kinds, universities, colleges and other educational institutions are among the organizations which have filed protests. Some of these petitions charge that Senator Smoot has practiced polygamy while others rest their objections on the charge that he is a member of an organization which countenances the practice of plural marriage. Among the public bills introduced Wednesday were: To repeal the bankruptcy act; to establish a service pension and give to each man who served for 90 days in the army or navy of the United States during the civil war a monthly pension of not less than $12; to amend the immigration laws; to reorganize the consular service; to erect a monument to John Paul Jones; to prevent the desecration of the flag; to place hides on the free list; to provide for the repayment of unexpended money deposited for platting mining claims; to authorize the purchase of lands in Shanghai, China, on which to erect wharves, warehouses, etc., for the encouragement of commerce; to prohibit the adulteration of food; to prohibit the introduction of misbranded salmon from one state into another; providing for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people; extending the right of suffrage to women; making it a misdemeanor for an unauthorized person to wear the insignia of Spanish war veteran societies; increasing the salaries of rural free delivery carriers, making them $900 per annum; establishing the University of the United States; to promote the efficiency of the life saving service.

House—But little business was transacted Wednesday. Representative W. W. Kitchin introduced a resolution providing an article to the constitution prohibiting national or state legislation establishing or supporting any religion or prohibiting the free exercise of religion. Also a resolution repealing the 15th amendment to the constitution.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Senate—The following bills were introduced in the senate Thursday: By Senator McComas to establish the eight-hour day and also a bill creating a commission to inquire into the condition of the colored people of the United States; by Senator Hopkins, authorizing the taking of an agricultural census in 1905. Senator Allison appointed the following committee to reorganize the committees of the senate: Hale, chairman; Gallinger, Hansbrough, Burrows, Foraker, Penrose, Foster (Wash.), Quarles, Scott. Senator Clapp introduced a bill appropriating $50,000 for a suitable monument in Washington to Gen. Frederick William Steuben, of the revolutionary war.

House—Representative Payne Thursday introduced in the house a bill making effective the Cuban reciprocity treaty. The measure was at once referred to the ways and means committee. Mr. Roberts (rep., Mass.) introduced a bill removing the tariff on bituminous coal containing less than 90 per cent. of fixed carbon and slate; also a bill removing the duty on hides. Representative Lovering (Mass.) reintroduced his bill of last session to make the currency responsive to the varying needs of business. The speaker announced the ways and means committee as follows: Republicans—Messrs. Payne (N. Y.), Dalzell (Pa.), Grosvenor (O.), Tawney (Minn.), McCall (Mass.), Babcock (Wis.), Metcalf (Cal.), Hill (Ct.), Bontelle (Ill.), Watson (Ind.), Curtis (Kan.). Democrats—Messrs. Williams (Miss.), Robertson (La.), Swanson (Va.), McClellan (N. Y.), Cooper (Tex.), Clark (Mo.).

Washington, Nov. 14.—House—The following among other bills were introduced in the house Friday: Extending the privileges of national soldiers' homes to veterans of the confederacy; reducing letter postage to one cent; providing a penalty of ten years' imprisonment for the crime of train robbing and imprisonment for life for the crime of obstructing a passenger train; authorizing the secretary of treasury to reimburse governors of states for money expended by them toward the expenses of state troops mustered into the volunteer service during the war with Spain; authorizing the issuance of currency redeemable in bonds of the United States; providing for "post check notes" of the denominations of $1, $4 and $5.

Nature's Greatest Cure for Men and Women

"Swamp-Root Saved My Life."

A FARMER'S STRONG TESTIMONIAL.

I had an awful pain in my back, over the kidneys, and had to urinate from four to seven times a night, often with smarting and burning. Brick dust would settle in the urine. I lost twenty pounds in two weeks and thought I would soon die. I took the first dose of your Swamp-Root in the evening at bed time, and was very much surprised; I had to urinate but once that night, and the second night I did not get up until morning. I have used three bottles of Swamp-Root and to-day am as well as ever.

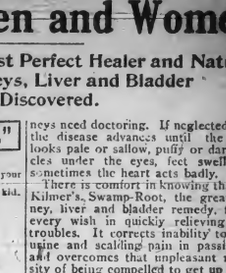
I am a farmer and am working every day, and weigh 170 pounds, which is more than I weighed before I was taken sick.

Gratefully yours,



Sec. F. A. & I. U. 304. T. S. APKER.
April 9th, 1903. Marsh Hill, Pa.

There comes a time to both men and women when sickness and poor health bring anxiety and trouble hard to bear; disappointment seems to follow every effort of physicians in our behalf, and remedies we try have little or no effect. In many such cases serious mistakes are made in doctoring, and not knowing what the disease is or what makes us sick. Kind nature warns us by certain symptoms, which are unmistakable evidence of danger, such as too frequent desire to urinate, scanty supply, scalding irritation, pain or dull ache in the back—they tell us in silence that our kidneys need doctoring. If neglected now, the disease advances until the face looks pale or sallow, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, feet swell, and sometimes the heart acts badly.

There is comfort in knowing that Dr. Kilmer's, Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, fulfills every wish in quickly relieving such troubles. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. In taking this wonderful new discovery, Swamp-Root you afford natural help to nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect helper and gentle aid to the kidneys that has ever been discovered.

Swamp-Root a Blessing to Women.

My kidneys and bladder gave me great trouble for over two months and I suffered untold misery.

MRS. E. AUSTIN.

I became weak, emaciated and very much run down, I had great difficulty in retaining my urine, and was obliged to pass water very often night and day. After I had used a sample bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, sent me on my request, I experienced relief and I immediately bought of my druggist two large bottles and continued taking it regularly. I am pleased to say that Swamp-Root cured me entirely. I can now stand on my feet all day without any bad symptoms whatever. Swamp-Root has proved a blessing to me. Gratefully yours,

Mrs. E. Austin,
19 Nassau St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Parrots Increasing.

Each year the burden of Chicago landlords is added to by the sale of 2,000 parrots to flat dwellers, and the demand is increasing rapidly. The birds are usually brought to this country from Cuba, Mexico and Africa by sailing vessels, the slow voyage gradually accustoming them to the climate. Any good parrot should say a word or two at three months of age, and at the end of a year should pick up expressions readily. So common have they become that unless a varied vocabulary is used they are seldom noticed. Where there was formerly one dealer in domestic pets, who sold parrots, there are now a dozen. This alone will give an idea of the increased demand for these birds.

Soil That Breeds Fine Horses.

In describing experiments made for the department of agriculture on the effects of lime and magnesia upon animal production, D. W. May, of the Kentucky experiment station, remarks that it is a well known fact that the greatest development in live stock has been attained in limestone regions. He says that in the bluegrass region of Kentucky, long noted for the beauty and quality of its live stock, and especially of its thoroughbred horses, the soil has been formed largely by the disintegration of a limestone very rich in phosphates. But even in that favored region experiments are under way to determine whether the quality of the animals may not be improved by the addition of certain mineral elements to the food.—Youth's Companion.

Checkmating Ants and Elephants.

In constructing the power transmission line from the Cauvery falls to the Kolar gold mines in Mysore, India, which was recently completed, the American engineers employed to do the work had to deal with some uncommon problems. The line, 92 miles long, is carried on lofty poles through the jungle. Here the depredations of white ants and wild elephants had to be prevented. The ants attacked the poles and the elephants pulled at the wires. Iron sockets seven feet high were found to be effective against the ants, and after careful measurements of the highest reach of the elephants' trunks, the wires were strung at a safe elevation.—Youth's Companion.

Told of Gladstone.

Gladstone's biography tells of a royal party at Windsor in Queen Victoria's reign which, after dining, instantly took to cards. The sums involved were not, however, enormous. "I found," writes Gladstone, for once a gambler, "I had won two shillings twopence at the end, of which eight pence was paid me by the prince. I mean to keep the twopenny piece (the sixpence I cannot identify) accordingly." This unique souvenir of his gambling prowess one would scarcely expect to be prized by a serious statesman.

Ways of the Burro.

The burro of to-day has degenerated woefully in the matter of speed. While his ancestors could outrun the swiftest horse, alas, the burro is very much opposed to movement of any kind. It requires the constant application of a stout cudgel to induce him to move even at a slow gate. But he has not lost his sure-footedness that comes to him by right of heritage. * * * Slowly but surely the burro lands his pack at its destination. He waits not for the dinner whistle to blow; he belongs to no union. He is ready to eat at all times if there be anything to eat; if there be nothing the burro does not worry. If he can't get hay, he will take whatever happens to peep above ground in the way of vegetation; if no vegetation is in sight, he contents himself with calmly waiting."—From "The Patient Burro," by Thomas H. Davies, in Four-Track News.

How Rafting Improves Wood.

German experts say that wood which has been floated in rafts, or otherwise, gives a more trustworthy material for joinery and building purposes than does that which has been carted, or otherwise carried dry, to the sawmill and workshop. The reason is that while the wood is lying in the water its sap and albuminous and salty materials are dissolved out. If these substances remain in the wood they readily absorb moisture from the atmosphere, after coming out of the drying rooms, and the wood swells. Artificial processes of washing out the hygroscopic substances from wood which has not been floated are practiced in Germany.

Aluminum in Plants.

Hitherto aluminum has not been found in phanerogamic plants, or at most only in minute traces, although cryptogams appear to use it as a food material. Mr. H. G. Smith, of Sydney, however, has recently found it in one tree belonging to the Proteaceae, viz., Orites excelsa, R.Br., in even greater abundance than it is found in any of the cryptogams. In a paper read before the meeting of the Royal society of New South Wales, Mr. Smith showed that this tree uses aluminum almost to the exclusion of other mineral elements, and that the aluminum is deposited in cavities and natural fissures as a basic succinate.—Scientific American.

Uncle Sam's Mail Bills.

We spend some ten millions of dollars a year more than any other country in the world in carrying our mails, and most of this excessive expenditure goes to pay for the unremunerative work of delivering mail on the outskirts of civilization. In spite of Russia's great size and England's remarkable efficiency in handling her mails, the mail routes of the United States are some 325,000 miles longer than those of any other country, and we employ some 2,000 more workmen to handle them, and have fully 30,000 more post offices.—St. Nicholas.

PUPILS MADE BIG MAP

California Students Show Interesting World's Fair Exhibit.

COUNTY DONE IN PAPIER MACHE

One California County Raises a World's Fair Fund of $20,000 and Devotes $3,000 to Showing Her Educational and Social Advantages.

Alameda county, California, will make an exhibit at the World's Fair that will be a credit to many a state. The supervisors of that county have appropriated about $20,000 for the purpose, and of this amount $3,000 will be used in installing the educational exhibit. F. O. Crawford, superintendent of schools in Alameda county, will have charge of the exhibit, and he will personally conduct the installation and will remain in charge during the exposition.

Alameda county is an irregularly-shaped tract, comprising about 1,200 square miles, being about the size of Rhode Island, and with a population of 160,000. It is in the extreme western part of California, and San Francisco bay forms parts of its western boundary. The assessed valuation of the property of the county is $100,000,000, and the school fund raised last year was $629,000.

One of the striking features of Alameda county's educational exhibit will be a papier mache relief map of the county, 14x20 feet, made by the pupils of the public schools. The map will be carefully compared by the county civil engineer, and at the close of the fair will be returned to Oakland, the county seat, where it will be placed in the rooms of the county surveyor and kept as the official map of the county.

The map will be inclined against the wall and every hill and valley will be developed. The highest part of the map will be about 14 inches above the sea level. Every railroad and public road in the county will be shown. Every schoolhouse, every public building, each township and city and village will be shown, and a perfect scale maintained. The school children will do the actual work of forming the map, but the coloring will be left to the county surveyor. The site of each schoolhouse will be marked by a small photograph of the school building that occupies it. Larger photographs showing the buildings in detail, will be contained in books, to which those who care to see may have access.

Another feature of interest will be the series of reproductions of Alameda county school rooms. Mr. Crawford obtained floor space in the Education Palace for this exhibit and will build a room 30x40 feet. At one time it will be fitted up to represent the Kindergarten room in a particular Alameda county school. The identical furniture will be installed, the maps and charts from the walls taken from their places and placed in the World's Fair school room. In fact it will be a perfect reproduction, so that one may see exactly what a certain room in Alameda county, California, is.

The furniture and decorations will be changed at intervals and during the Exposition a type of every school in the county will be shown. Specimens of the work from all the schools will also be shown.

In Alameda is situated the University of California, at Berkeley, the largest in the state, with 2,000 students. St. Mary's Catholic College, and Mills' College for Young Ladies, are all important institutions, and it is expected that each will make individual exhibits.

Alameda county is proud of her school system. The buildings are all up-to-date, and many of the county schools were erected at a cost of $15,000 to $20,000 each.

Among the shipments received are two barrels of coke from Bell coal, from Crittenden county, Ky. The coal was sent to the Ashland Iron & Mining Co. at Ashland, and there coked. Judge T. T. Gardner and Editor Tom Bettit of Bardwell have sent in a box containing various minerals from Carlisle county, which are being analyzed and assayed at the State College at Lexington.

Latest Information as to Kentucky's Part in the Great Exposition.

—In Kentucky's display of fruit at the St. Louis Exposition next year, there will probably be sent bunches of grapes grown from the seed which came from the city of Jerusalem and which was supposed to be of the same variety as those found by the spies of Moses. Mr. M. F. Johnson of Louisville received a seed from the grape mentioned, it being brought in by a friend from the Holy City, and planted it in Louisville soil. It grew and bore fruit. The grape is called the "Knight Templar," and is a medium size, reddish color, thin skin and sweet.

Fine Farm For Sale.

I withdraw from sale my farm of 255 acres at Hebron at the price named in a recent notice. The farm is for sale at a bargain if sold soon, but not at that price. The conditions and circumstances and opportunities existing when that offer was made, do not exist now—hence the withdrawal. This is a magnificent farm, finely located and elegantly improved. The land and improvements are all in splendid condition. This plantation and its improvements were planned, constructed, developed and finished for a superb country home, for a country gentleman, and only a man of that character can appreciate it. The whole farm is as beautiful as a city park. It is for sale at a bargain if sold soon. If not sold soon it will be for rent to good and careful men.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIX. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1903. NO. 6

County Correspondence.

WALTON.

Willis Arnold was out again, last Sunday, to see his old friend, and by the way, his cousin, Herbert Glenn, is down with typhoid fever.

James Stapleton made a visit to his old stamping ground, last week. His old friends were so glad to see him that his face was wreathed in smiles.

The pupils of the Sunday School of the Christian church will give an entertainment on Saturday evening, November 28th, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. All are invited to attend.

There seems to be symptons of an epidemic of connubiality among the the young people of this place about these times. Miss Alice Laws and Alex ander Crisler, of Hamilton, Ohio, took the train for Covington and securing the services of Bro. G. W. Hill were made man and wife in a brief time.

An attempt to do a little flim flamming in the line of frozen apples met with a failure here, last Saturday. A huckster from an adjacent county made his appearance on one of our residence streets shouting "apples—nice Baldwin's—only 20c a peck, guaranteed to keep all winter." The lady, after asking if they were specked, concluded to take a few of them and taking them to the kitchen, cut one open and found it frozen to the core. Hastening back, she to the amusement of the crowd of housekeepers now assembled, made him take them back and refund the money. The huckster hastened away to another part of the town, and it is not likely that he will put in another appearance, at least, not soon, in Walton again. It is not safe to buy from strange and wandering traders any article whatever because it is offered cheaper than the stores sell it. In this case he was not underselling them, but the convenience of getting them without tramping down town was the attraction. Delivery wagons must come sooner or later.

Unusual excitement prevailed here during the past week on account of the announcement of a game of foot-ball for Saturday, Nov. 21, between Walton Graded School and the Intermediates of Covington High School. A large and enthusiastic crowd came out to witness the first real gridiron contest in the history of the town and school. The opposing teams were about evenly matched. Walton having slight advantage in weight, while the Covington boys have had more experience in the game.

Covington kicked off at 2:15; Watson caught the ball on Walton's 10-yard line, but failed to run it back. By straight line bucks and plunges Watson steadily advanced the ball to Covington's 20 yard line where a costly fumble gave the ball to Covington—Covington played fast ball, but being unable to pierce Walton's strong line, lost the balls on the downs; with the ball in her possession again Walton took a brace and soon pushed Lathrope over the line for a touch-down. Walton failed to kick goal at a difficult angle. Walton Kicked off to Covington and both sides played near the center of the field till the first half ended. Walton kicked off to Covington in the second half. Covington ran the ball back to the 25 yard line, but lost it on downs. Walton made good gains through Covington's line, but, just at the critical moment, lost the ball on a fumble. Covington rallied and made one or two good gains, but lost on downs again. Walton got the ball again, but lost it on a fumble. Covington tried a kick to Walton's 20 yard line, where it was caught and ruu back to the center of the field, when the referee called time. The game ended amind the cheers of the crowd, with the score, Walton 5, Covington 0.

The line up was as follows:

Walton.	Position.	Covington.
Murphy	Left End	Woelful
Holder	Center	Thiesing
Cross	Right Guard	Honhorst
Gibson	Right Tackle	Blau
Craig	Right End	Moore (cap)
Houston	Quarter Back	Jackson
Watson	Right Back	McCarty
Lathrop	Full Back	Noek
Jones (cap)	Left Back	Reed

Officials—Referee and Umpire, Deckey. Timer—Ransler. Time—15 and 20 minute halves.

A says that the governor of Kentucky has the power to commute the sentence of a person sentenced to hang, by exchanging the death penalty for life imprisonment. B says that the governor can not change the death sentence for one less severe. To settle a dispute which is right?—[A is correct. —ED.]

Commissary, the answer to your problem in last week's issue, is 7 rods, 2 feet and 8 inches, or 117 feet and 9 inches. The solution of the problem is: Reduce one acre to square inches, divide by 3.1417 and extract square root of the quotient, and then reduce to rods, feet and inches. Don't be so easy Bro. Commissary.

HATHAWAY.

She united with Big Bone church and was baptised into the fellowship of the church in 1900. She married Sanders Horton 13 months and 19 days ago. The remains were interred in Big Bone cemetery, last Friday, Rev. W. S. Taylor delivering a very consoling sermon to the wounded hearts of the bereaved family and relatives. She is clothed in robes of white, with a crown of glory and honor. She is a shining light, which Jesus has bestowed upon her. Oh how sweet it will be, when we meet to part no never. Her sweet face once more we'll see, it will be forever and ever.

FLORENCE.

The teachers of magisterial district No. 6, held their meeting at Florence on the 21st inst. The Association opened with prayer by Rev. Slater, followed by an address of welcome by the Superintendent.

Recitations by Lena Tanner. Oce Castleman, Clarence Cody aud Willie Boyers, were highly applauded.

Rev. Utz being unable to be present, "Disciplin" was ably discussed by our Superiutendent.

Hon. Benjamin Stephens, on "How Lengthen the School Term," gave us a good talk and advocated the idea of getting redress through the coming Legislature.

After a delightful dinner prepared by the patrons of the school, the Association resumed business at 1 p. m.

In the absence of Miss Blanche North cutt, "The Very Dull Child" was thoroughly discussed by Prof. North cutt. We gleam from his most impressive talk that dull pupils are few in number, and that teachers often call slow pupils "dull."

The topic assigned to Prof. Northcutt, "The Obstinate, Headstrong Boy," was well discussed by all the teachers present, and the impression left was to use all means available and the rod to be used only after all other efforts had ceased to control.

Superintendent Snyder gave us a short talk on our course of study, which was adopted by him. He stated that he had received very flattering reports from teachers who have put it in operation. The teachers in district No. 8, already see the benefit from it.

After a recitation by Edith Carpenter, the Association adjourned, all feeling a day had well been spent.

STELLA CARPENTER, Secretary.

There are many people that are good, kind and charitable; but their goodness, kindness and charity never gets beyond the front door without becoming very lonesome.

There was a scene in Amsterdam—in Rome it did appear. It was twice in every moment and not once in seven years." Who can give correct answer to above?

W. I. Rouse is the crack shot of this vicinity. He carries a gun that never fails to go when called on, while his aim is so true he never fails to bring down his game.

We wish to say to the two bright pupils of Locust Grove: Your reading of our punctuation is correct. We do practice what we preach. The errors alluded too are not of our making, but were typographical. If you were as bright as you would have us to believe, you would have noticed them.

We would be pleased to have Dr. Mot Rouse to send a few of his free recipes down here. We would like to have a few packages to hand to those who give us items for publication that are not true in every particular. Items have been reported to us that were not true in all respects, and after they were published those who furnished them, pointed them out, in order to make it appear that our communications are not reliable. This has been done for the purpose stated: Their senses of smell and memory are not impaired, but the habit of untruthfulness, at certain times has a deep hold on them. We are on to their racket.

They returned to town very much disappointed, but are confident that they will have a good chase there in the near future.

Not A Sack Day Since.

"I was taken severely sick with kidney trouble. I tried all sorts of medicines, none of which relieved me. One day I saw an ad. of your Electric Bitters and determined to try that. The death angel has visited this community again and taken from our midst Martin L Blankenbeker, and Miss Maud Blankenbeker, his only daughter. Mr. Blankenbeker who departed this life on the 15th inst., was in his usual health until two days before his death, and his friends little expected that the end was so near, when he was first stricken, as he frequently had a few days illness and had to lay off from his work. He had for several years been a useful helper in the way his blacksmithshop of Mr. Fred Rich, at Florence, and had succeeded in securing a nice, comfortable home in the business part of the town, and was living nicely and comfortably; but it was the Master's will to take him away from his family even when he was in the prime of life, his age being forty two years. Why he was called away we do not know nor can we know, but we do kuow that what the Lord does is for a wise purpose, even though it seem to be a mystery to us and hard for us to bear. We should bow submission to his will. Mr. Blankenbeker was united in marriage to Miss Cora Tanner in the year 1885. To this union two children were born, the first dying in infancy. In the death of Martin the town of Florence loses one of its best citizens, the wife a kind and loving husband. Miss Maud Blankeubeker had been complaining for several days previous to her father's death, but no one thought there was any cause for alarm, and while arrangements were being made for her father's funeral, she became seriously sick and the day arranged for her father's funeral, the 18th inst., she also passed to her reward at the age of 16 years. Miss Maud was a faithful member of Hopeful church, having united with that body about a year ago. She demonstrated her love and loyalty to her church one week before her death, at which time she was hardly able to be up, but asked permission of her parents to go to church, which they granted and arranged for her to go. Miss Maud was a kind and unassuming girl, and to know her was to love her. She possessed all of the characteristics of a christian, and even though she was young she had won for herself many friends, and was a great favorite with her associates. The pallbearers were her Sunday school classmates, Misses Ottie Surface, Virgie and Susie Snyder, Lottie Utz, Hazel Thomson and Edna Barlow. Miss Emma Clutterbuck carried the flowers. Appropriate services were conducted by pastor Slater at Hopeful church last Thursday, after which she and her father were buried in the same grave n Hopeful cemetery, in the presence of a large concourse of friends and relatives.

The bereaved mother and widow, and the grandparents, have the sympathy of the entire community. W. H. Tanner and wife and Mrs Cora Blankenbeker regnest me to say through the RECORDER that they extend their heartfelt and sincere thanks to the friends who so kindly aided through the illness of Martin Blankenbeker and daughter.

Mr. Commissary if 3 is ½ of 6, 10 is ½ of 20 and 3-3 of 30—10; then ½ of 30—7½. Therefore if 3 is ½ of 6, 7½ is ½ of 10. The rope to tie the horse of your last week's problem should be 7-1384† rds long.

The BOUNTIFUL GOD

Every Good and Perfect Gift Is Bestowed by His Loving Hand.

Thanksgiving Day Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Nov. 22, 1903.—Text:—"Every good and perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of Lights, with Whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."—James 1:17.

CUSTOM has established in this country an annual Thanksgiving day, and the nation has again been called to recognize in a special and fitting manner on that day the blessings and mercies of God to us as individuals, as well as a nation. There has been a tendency, since the day became fixed as a national holiday, and was regularly designated each year as such, to subordinate the true spirit and purpose of the day to the sports and festivities which have crowded into its observance. It is the day of the great football contests, it is the day of feasting, and parties and merry making and pleasure seeking, but it is no longer the day which fills the churches with their devout congregations whose hearts rise to God in thankful recognition of His goodness and mercies. In old New England, where the day as observed in this country had its origin, Harriet Beecher Stowe tells us that, "great as the preparations were for the dinner and the festivities of the day, everything was so contrived that not a soul in the house should be kept from the morning service of Thanksgiving in the church." But to-day it is not so. Church attendance is the exception rather than the rule. In most places the union service of half a dozen different churches has hard work mustering a respectable audience. Instead of every church being filled with its thank-offering, praise-giving people, the large majority of them stand mute and empty, while the families which should be there are busy with the pleasures and festivities of the day. This is dishonoring to God, a violation of the purpose of the day, and disrespectful indifference to the request of the president, that the people of the land shall gather in their respective houses of worship and there render unto God thanksgiving for the blessings which He has bestowed during the past year.

THUS is lost to the individual and, through the individual, to the nation the real power and blessing of Thanksgiving day. Our text reminds us that God is the giver of all good. The tremendous crops of grains and fruits and vegetables of which this nation boasts and of which abundance thousands of tons of food stuffs are sent to feed other nations, all come from God. The coal and iron and gold which man takes out of the bowels of the earth and by which he is warmed and his industries created and run were first hidden in the ground by God. The fish of the rivers and lakes and seas, the fowls of the air, the cattle and sheep and horses on the thousand hills and the plains are the gift of God for the blessing of man. The very life which throbs in man's veins and makes him different from the rocks which lie cold and motionless at his feet comes from God. The sunshine and the rain are sent by God. All, all comes from God, for "every good and perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father of Lights." And because this is true we call our Heavenly Father the Bountiful God, and at Thanksgiving time His bountifulness should receive special recognition. Devout and humble thanksgiving should rise from every heart to God Who gives all good and perfect gifts. Our Thanksgiving message is of the Bountiful God, and we want to take away the indefinite and meaningless thought of God and engraft in its place a deep consciousness of the personal relations of God the Creator and Giver to man the creature and the recipient. The farmer needs to lift his gaze above the tasseling corn tops and the crowded barns and granaries; the man in commercial life must look above the gold which jingles over his counter as he buys and sells; the clerk at his desk or behind the counter and the workman at his bench should see beyond and above the task and the pay envelope which the employer passes out; the professor's books should lift higher than the human; the scientist's telescope should reach beyond the stars. There should be a consciousness of God in the heart of all—that He is the Bountiful God, the Giver of all good. This is not merely sentiment; it is a definite conception of God based upon fact.

GOD as the Giver of all good must be the source of all good. Consider this proposition carefully. It suggests God as the proprietor of the vast supply house of the universe. As Creator, God has filled this supply house with every good and perfect gift for man. As Ruler of the universe, He has maintained the supply throughout the ages of man's existence upon earth. And as Giver He has bestowed these inexhaustible gifts upon man. Let us consider first, then, God as Creator. Evolution cannot eliminate God as the primary factor from His universe. The theory of evolution may explain the orderly methods by which God's infinite power has called into [illegible] every created thing, but it does not account for God away, neither does it [illegible] the story of creation as recorded in the first [illegible] Word of God. God has planted the earth with the myriad forms of plant life that man might be supplied with food, and raiment, and shelter. He has swung the great sun in the blue vault of the heavens that it might give light and warmth and perpetuate the various forms of life which had been placed upon the earth. He sends the rain and the dew to refresh the earth and make it bring forth abundantly. He stored within the bosom of old Mother Earth every conceivable treasure—the coal, the gas, the oil, the gold, the silver, the baser metals, the precious stones—everything which man has discovered and utilized for comfort, for utility, for adornment, was first molded into form by the touch of God and placed where man could find it. And the fact that the devil, the original squatter and claim jumper of the world, has perverted to his uses the created things of God, and has spread himself over the earth as sole proprietor and owner, does not give man his warrant for a like attitude. The evil heart of man has fallen into the devil's way of thinking and acting, and God is forgotten as the Creator. Man gathers and enjoys the wealth and bounty of the earth, and lifts never a thought toward God as the Creator of all that the earth contains.

GOD as Ruler of the universe maintains that which He has created. God at all times sustains an intimate relationship to His created world. Man usually is not conscious of it. The tendency to materialism blinds the heart to the thought of God as an active agent in every manifestation of nature. The farmer sows his seed, and cultivates his field and gathers his crop and says: "I sowed the seed, I tended the growing grain, I reaped and gathered into the barns. My fields produced so much. It is all mine." And God's part in the whole transaction is forgotten. As the farmer sowed the seed he forgot that each tiny grain had within its heart the germ of life which God and God only could place there. While he waited for the seed to push its tender sprout up through the yielding soil, he failed to consider the mighty forces of nature at work to transform that seed into a growing, productive plant. But sun and rain and nourishing soil were busy with that mysterious something called life, which man knows exists in its myriad forms, but which he cannot understand or explain. As the farmer cultivated the growing grain he forgot that it was not he who was making it grow. He could help it grow, but it was not his effort nor power which transformed sunshine and rain and black soil into green stalk and tasseling ear. As he reaped the grain and the noisy thresher sent forth its golden stream of ripened seed he only saw so much flour and so much seed corn for sowing in the springtime. He did not think of God's power which had packed each little kernel full of nourishing food and creative life, but it was what God put there which made the grain worth cultivating and gathering. Man forgets, until sometimes the drought dries up the grain and makes him turn to God and pray for the needed rain, or the excessive rains drown out the crops and force the earnest supplication for the blessed sunshine. But to-day even God's control over the weather is lightly spoken of and the weather forecasters of the country are credited with making the rain and the sunshine, the storm and the calm. It is not done seriously, we know, but the jest oft repeated becomes the prevailing thought. What is the weather man going to give us to-day? is the way the question is asked. What the weather man gave is the way it is talked about. And he is praised or scolded, according to the quality of the weather experienced and the kind wanted. This criticism may seem trivial, but when you consider how the thought of God's rule and control is being crowded out of every condition and circumstance of life, I believe you will admit that in this jesting there is real peril.

THE Psalmist exclaims of the Bountiful God: "Thou crownest the year with Thy goodness; and Thy paths drop fatness." God is the Giver of the good which He has created and which His power maintains. And here arises a difficulty which troubles a great many people. If God is the giver of all good, why does He seemingly distribute so unevenly? To explain this fully and satisfactorily we should have to be as wise as God and see the end from the beginning. Probably the inequalities of the lot of Lazarus and the rich man created discussion and was one of the enigmas of life which puzzled the world then as it does to-day, but in the light of eternity, as Jesus draws the curtain and reveals the mysteries of Heaven, no one finds it hard to choose between the good things which the rich man enjoyed and lost and the good things which Lazarus was denied in this life and which were found awaiting him in the realms of eternity. This parable suggests a partial explanation at least why the material bounties of this world are bestowed so unevenly. God withheld from Lazarus the good things of this world that He might give to him the treasures of Heaven. If Lazarus had had the wealth of the rich man he might have been as selfish and blind spiritually as was the rich man, and might have bartered his soul for the ease and pleasure of this world. This, as we have said, may suggest a partial explanation of the difficulty, and further light may be found by remembering that while God is the giver of every good thing in the world, man to a very great extent determines how much of that good he will be possessed of. It has been declared that any person can become rich who makes that the life's ambition and who subordinates every other thing in life to that one consuming desire. Man lays violent hands upon the material good which God has created and bestowed upon the human race and perverts it to his own selfish use. And on the other hand man may be intrusted by God with great riches and minister them under this direction to the blessing of his fellow men. But whether man has much or little, God is primarily the giver of it. And how much He is giving to man year by year! Surely, God does crown the year with goodness and His paths do drop fatness. "Oh, that men would praise the Lord for His goodness, and for His wonderful works to the children of men."

THE gifts of God to men are of two kinds—temporal and spiritual. And if God is a Bountiful God in His provision for the temporal needs of the world, what must we say for what God has bestowed upon man in the way of spiritual gifts? The latter far outweigh the former in value and importance. It is a low order of life which can feel gratitude to God only when the stomach is full and the body rests in ease and comfort. Burns' lines,

"Some hae meat and canna eat,
And some wad eat that want it;
But we hae meat, and we can eat,
Sae let the Lord be thankit," is about as far as a great many people get in the realization of the bounties of God and their gratitude to Him for His gifts. Others are thankful for what circumstances have made them, as was Thales, one of the seven wise men of Greece, who used to express thanks for three things: That he was born a reasonable creature, and not a beast; a man, and not a woman; a Greek, and not a barbarian. But God's richest bounties are found in a realm above that which involves the material life and the conditions and needs of the body. Man may well thank God that he has been born a reasonable creature, and not a beast, but that he has been endowed with an undying soul and that God's inexhaustible riches of grace are offered full and free to his soul are worthy of eternal thanksgiving. We who are born in this country may well be glad that a heathen land was not our home, but the refined and cultured soul in the civilized land without Christ is as miserably lost as the most benighted heathen, and with a greater weight of responsibility resting upon it. A greater thing to be thankful for is for spiritual birth into the kingdom of Jesus Christ by faith in Him, and that birth in a civilized land with all its enlightenment and privileges has called you and equipped you for service to the heathen world in its greatest need, which is Christ. The "good and the perfect gifts" which God has bestowed upon the world are not chiefly temporal, but are spiritual. The Bountiful God has looked beyond the span of the natural life and made provision for the eternal welfare and needs of the soul. Christ and salvation, the indwelling Spirit and the fruits of His presence of "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance," these are the greater gifts which the Bountiful God has bestowed upon mankind. Surely man ought to render unto God thanks because God's supreme thought through the ages has been the salvation and sanctification of mankind.

"WHAT, then," says the Psalmist, "shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward me?" Thanksgiving, which shall find its expression in thanksliving. A thankful heart is not dependent upon the abundance of the possessions of this world. Henry Dorsey Gough, a wealthy Maryland planter of the slavery days, and a Godly man, tells this incident: While riding one day to one of his plantations, he heard the voice of prayer and praise in a cabin, and, listening, discovered that a negro from a neighboring estate was leading the devotions of his own slaves, and offering fervent thanksgiving for the blessings of his depressed lot. His heart was deeply touched and with emotion he exclaimed: "Alas, O Lord! I have my thousands, and tens of thousands, and yet, ungrateful wretch that I am, I never thank Thee, as this poor slave does, who has scarcely clothes to put on, or food to satisfy his hunger!" He never forgot the lesson. He realized then as never before that the riches of the presence of Christ in the heart brought greater joy and blessing than could all the material comforts and possessions of the world. We must remember all of God's benefits but above all the spiritual blessings. And the thanksliving is a true gauge to the depth and genuineness of the thanksgiving. Thanksgiving which is no longer than the church service and no deeper than the stomach is a brand which may be popular in the world, but it is not acceptable to God. Thanksgiving should find expression in the attitude of the recipient towards the benefactor, and in the use which is made of the gift. If it is true as Scripture declares that "every good and perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father of Lights," then the recipient should be in close sympathy and fellowship with God and loyal to His demands upon him. In the use of the gifts and blessings, be they what they may, the thought of their source should sanctify their use. In the bestowment of His gifts God "knows no variableness, neither shadow of turning," and in our thanksgiving and thanksliving we in turn should be steadfast and faithful.

He Was Averse to the Subject, But When It Was Introduced Spoke His Mind.

Walter Camp, the athletic adviser of Yale university, was recently entertaining a gathering of his undergraduate friends with experiences of his own, says the New York Tribune.

He told of a dinner where a charming young woman was seated next to an exceedingly deaf old man. She had done her best to interest him, but had found it necessary to shout out each remark unto the third and fourth narration before the old man could catch the point.

So the time dragged along, till the dinner was waning and the fruit was passed. The young woman determined to make a final effort at being agreeable, so she threw her voice into saying:

"Do you like bananas?"

"How's that?" asked her neighbor, in a surprised tone.

"Do you like bananas?" she repeated.

"Well, my dear," he replied, "so long as you have introduced the topic, I will say that I much prefer the old-fashioned nightshirt."

When Gen. Ian Hamilton, of the British army, was in Washington he was the guest of Maj. Gen. Corbin and all his mail was sent in care of Gen. Corbin at the war department. One day quite a batch of letters arrived and was taken in charge by one of the brightest colored messengers in the war department to be delivered at Gen. Corbin's residence. But this messenger and others had read the addresses and commented on them. "Lieutenant General Sir Ian Hamilton, K. C. B.," they read. "What does K. C. B. mean?" asked one messenger. "Don't you know what that means?" replied the other, scornfully. "Why, K. C. B. means the 'Cat Came Back.' Thought every niggah knowed that."—Chicago Chronicle.

FIRST KIDNEY PILL MADE. THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERY. THE ONLY GENUINE.

WM. H. NEIGHBORS, the well-known jeweler of West Main Street, Wytheville, Va., says: "Some four years ago an attack of grip settled in my back, and I have suffered off and on ever since with a dull, heavy aching across the small of my back, always more severe in the morning. It was difficult for me to stoop or straighten, and if I sat down for any length of time it was hard for me to arise. I took two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and the dull, disagreeable aching left me."

H. B. MCCARVER of 301 Cherry Street, Portland, Oregon, inspector of freight cars for the Transcontinental Company, says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills for backache and other symptoms of kidney trouble which had annoyed me for months. I think a cold was responsible for the whole trouble. It seemed to settle in my kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills rooted it out. It is several months since I used them, and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

MRS. GEORGE WALLACH, JR., of Elmira, N. Y., wife of George Wallace, broker, of West Water Street, and living at 667 Baldwin Street, says: "In March, 1897, I was cured of kidney and bladder trouble by Doan's Kidney Pills. My physician said at that time that my life could be saved only by an operation. Night after night I had been kept awake for hours at a time with terrible pain in my back, and the secretions from the kidneys were in as bad a state as possible. I suffered with hemorrhages frequently and was in a weak state. Four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me, and I now gladly recommend the remedy, because during the time which has since elapsed, nearly seven years, I have never had the slightest sign of a return of the trouble."

Thanksgiving Day

THANKSGIVING DAY is as distinctly indigenous to America as is the turkey, that bird which is so indissolubly connected with due commemoration of the season. A dinner is that day without the gobbler or its mate would be no feast at all, though a hundred other viands were included in the menu.

Thanksgiving day, known nowhere else than in the United States, as a national institution, is of decided modern invention. President Lincoln, just 40 years ago, was moved by the great victories of Gettysburg, Vicksburg, and other points, these coming thick and fast after so many previous disasters, to designate a day in which the people of the entire nation might meet and render thanks to God. This first national Thanksgiving day was designed to be distinctly religious in its character, and the intent of the president was understood and carried out by the people. The churches of the cities and towns and villages were filled that day with fathers and mothers and sisters who offered grateful prayers to God for the victories won and for the preservation of their loved ones who moved daily amid scenes of imminent danger.

True, the Thanksgiving day idea dates back of this. The landful of Pilgrims in Massachusetts, in the year following their landing at Plymouth, met in their church in obedience to the governor's proclamation to return thanks for a generous harvest. Intermittently thereafter for many years, and then regularly each year, the day was commemorated, spreading throughout the New England states. It did not reach New York state until 1821, and was regarded indifferently by many states until Lincoln gave it national standing.

Washington did make two Thanksgiving proclamations, but only at the suggestion of the congress. Two subsequent presidents flatly declined to issue such proclamations, insisting that the silence of the constitution as to religion forbade any such exercise of power by the chief executive.

Hence, it is within reason and right to say that Thanksgiving day, as a national festival, began in 1863, and was instituted by President Lincoln.

But by a rapid process of evolution the religious feature, that which gave rise to the day, has been diminished. In larger cities but a limited number of churches open their doors for services, while in the smaller ones a single house of worship will conduct what is termed "union service" for all denominations. Usually there are many vacant pews in those churches that are opened.

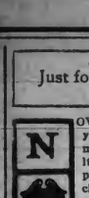
The day has developed into "home" day, one in which the loved ones meet with glad hearts, and doubtless thankful ones, too, and felicitate one another that it is as well with them as it is. Those who live at a distance, and those who are traveling upon the road, turn their faces towards the home roof in advance of the coming of Thanksgiving day, that they of one blood may be together on that day, and spend the hours in recalling the past, so much of it as is pleasant. Or they engage in joyful songs, or innocent pastimes, all filled and thrilled with the goodness of life.

Whether or not the people are less religious than formerly does not enter into this discussion. There are 52 days in the year set apart for Sunday church observance, and the people by a sort of common consent have seen fit to spend this, the one day of the year, under their own vine and fig-tree, undisturbed by callers, holding communion with those who are bone of their bone and flesh of their flesh.

Surely there can be nothing in contravention of religion in the home sentiment, that is so marked a feature of Thanksgiving day. The home is the safety of the state. It is here that youth receives its influences for good or ill. It is here that men are made or unmade. Can there be higher tribute to the beneficent influences of home life and the happiness of it than the modern universal practice in these states of every man and woman, with their children, making a "home day" of Thanksgiving? May not the happy hearts and glad faces of these home gatherers be a pleasanter sight in God's eyes than the spectacle of long and solemn-faced couples going to church to sing solemn psalms. In any event one may not sacrifice any spirit of gratitude to the good God for His mercies because his heart is glad and warm in the surroundings of a loved and lovable home.

Yet blessed is that nation whose God is the Lord; and it was a happy suggestion that came to the great Lincoln to nationalize one day of the year in which to praise the Lord because He is God, and to give thanks to His holy name for mercies that endure from generation to generation.

WILLIAM ROSSER COBBE.



THANKSGIVING ON THE NILE.

Just for Boys and Girls

NOW, boys and girls, don't you think that a good many of you would think it a great lark to exchange places with the Plymouth children of more than 170 years ago, because on that very first Thanksgiving holiday that ever was observed on American soil, there came to town 90 Indian braves and their Chief Massasoit. They stayed for a week as the guests of the white men, and they all hunted and fished and smoked together and had a general jollification, because the crops had turned out so well.

The first public Thanksgiving came in 1630, and on the 22d of February, the day we now celebrate as Washington's birthday. In November of the next year there was another Thanksgiving, and one year there were two, but in the next 53 years there was but one Thanksgiving in about every two years. It did not always come in November, as it does now on a regular day in the month, but skipped around, sometimes being observed in January, and sometimes in August, and sometimes in other months, according to the times when the colonists thought they had most cause to be thankful for something. Sometimes it was for the full harvest, and sometimes it was for rain after a long, dry time that they feared would ruin all the crops.

In these early Thanksgiving days the children were not thought of first and foremost as they are in a good many homes to-day. They were expected to keep in the background, and the little girls had to help their mothers to keep house, and after that was kept they had to keep right on being prim and proper to such an extent that they didn't always have as much fun as their brothers. The boys used to play wicket on the commons, and football all over the place, so that in 1657 an ordinance was passed forbidding the playing of football in the streets on account of the annoyance to foot passengers.

At first there were no dolls for the girls to play with, all the funny little dolls that we see now in museums dating back to the times when our remote great-grandparents were little people, having been brought over from Europe for the benefit of the mothers, not the little girls. The mothers didn't wish the dolls to play with, but for models for their best dresses, for the dolls, you ought to know, were dressed by dressmakers and milliners in London and Paris and sent over here for fashion plates, and for many years all the dolls our great-great-grandmothers had to play with were made of rags. And pretty nice doll babies they made, too, you will admit.

"Battledoors and shuttles," which the children used to play so much, came over in 1761, and marbles got here ten years later, in October, so they must have been played in the house or else with frost-nipped fingers till spring came again.

There were no blocks of houses and big cities then, but only separate and often widely-scattered homes. If a big storm came the farmers had to get out their lumbering ox wagons just as they do in the far western country to-day and "break" the roads. Sometimes the storms were so heavy that the expected visitors couldn't get through the snow drifts, and the Thanksgiving dinner had to be eaten by the family all alone. But the family was generally a big one, and if the boys and girls didn't have their looked-for company to play with they had each other.

In one family, for instance, of which we have a record, there were eight little girls, who had been named Experience, Waitstill, Preserved, Hopestill, Wait, Thanks, Unite and Supply. Wonder how their brother nicknamed them?

In those early days there were no steam radiators or furnaces or stoves, and all the fun-making on Thanksgiving day that was done indoors had to be done in the big living-room, where the huge fireplace blazed and crackled with its great logs and piles of underbrush, and the turkey roasted sizzling on a spit before the fire that burned while you looked at it and froze your back at the same time.

Everything considered, it's a good deal easier and jollier to be a little boy or girl, on Thanksgiving of this year of grace, 1902, than it was in 1630 or for a good many years after that. Don't you think so too?

Thanksgiving.

Though half-backs, quarter-backs and guards
To-day may gather thick,
The turkey really is the one
Who makes the biggest kick.

TRACING THE LEAKS.

How Important Treasury Information Is Gained Outside Circulation.

"I have stopped talking to you fellows about the plans of this department," bluntly declared Secretary Shaw to a newspaper friend the other day, reports the Capital, "I know, of course, that I can trust you, but I have learned that it is better not to talk to anybody when I am maturing an important movement. Now, take this last refunding operation of the treasury, involving $200,000,000. Why, man, I said nothing to anybody about that, and still news of it leaked out before I was ready for it."

"How did it get out?" asked the newspaper man.

The keen, gray eyes of the secretary of the treasury twinkled. He screwed up his face until it looked like a funny mask.

"That's what I'd like to know," he said. "Do you know," he went on to say, "since I came to think it over, I do remember that I wrote one letter about it."

"To whom?" insisted the inquisitorial journalist.

"To the president, sir; to the president, sir," exclaimed Mr. Shaw, "but I can't forget to tell him to say nothing about it."

His Victory.

Mr. Lewis had just come in from his club. He appeared in the best of humors, and his wife soon found out why.

"You've heard me speak of Stafford, haven't you?" he asked.

"The man who knows so much about the tariff?" ventured Mrs. Lewis.

"The man who talks so much about it," Lewis corrected. "Well, we had a long argument about it this evening, and I came out ahead."

"You did?" said Mrs. Lewis, in a flutter of delight.

"Yes! I got him to admit that he knows no more about it than I do."—Youth's Companion.

A Remarkable Woman.

Kokomo, Ind., Nov. 23.—Mrs. Anna M. Willis, of this place, a charming old lady of 74 years, has given for publication a very interesting letter.

Mrs. Willis is widely known and highly respected, and the recommendation she gives is well worth the consideration of anyone who may be interested. Mrs. Willis' address is R. R. No. 6, Kokomo. Her letter reads as follows:

"I have been troubled with Kidney Trouble for 20 years. It was so bad that it affected my heart and my back. It hurt so that I could not get up when down, and I began to think that I would be past doing anything. I was recommended to get Dodd's Kidney Pills and purchased some at the drug store of Mr. J. E. Meek. After using several boxes, I was completely restored. I feel twenty years younger, and am able to do all the usual work in the house and garden which a person who lives on the farm has to do, although I am 74 years of age."

Patron—"I suppose the leading lady is very happy after getting all those bouquets." Usher—"Oh, no. She only got five." Patron—"Gracious! Isn't that enough?" Usher—"No; she paid for 'em, I believe."—Philadelphia Press.

SISTERS OF CHARITY

Use Pe-ru-na for Coughs, Colds, Grip and Catarrh—A Congressman's Letter.

In every country of the civilized world Sisters of Charity are known. Not only do they minister to the spiritual and intellectual needs of the charges committed to their care, but they also minister to their bodily needs.

With so many children to take care of and to protect from climate and disease, these wise and prudent Sisters have found Peruna a never failing safeguard.

Dr. Hartman receives many letters from Catholic Sisters from all over the United States. A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in Detroit, Mich., reads as follows:

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sir—"The young girl who used the Peruna was suffering from laryngitis and loss of voice. The result of the treatment was most satisfactory. She found great relief, and after further use of the medicine we hope to be able to say she is entirely cured."—Sisters of Charity.

The young girl was under the care of the Sisters of Charity and used Peruna for catarrh of the throat with good results as the above letter testifies.

Send to The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio, for a free book written by Dr. Hartman.

The following letter is from Congressman Meckison, of Napoleon, Ohio: The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen:—I have used several bottles of Peruna and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head, and feel encouraged to believe that its continued use will fully eradicate a disease of thirty years' standing.—David Meckison.

David Meckison

Dr. Hartman, one of the best known physicians and surgeons in the United States, was the first man to formulate Peruna. It was through his genius and perseverance that it was introduced to the medical profession of this country.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THE OLD AND NEW THANKSGIVINGS.

FAIR Autumn has painted the fringe of the wildwood,
The rivers are clear as they sing to the sea,
And bell, from the vistas of golden-orbed childhood
Come laughter and song that are boundless and free;
The feastings of old every heart doth remember,
For the tides of the years have an echoing flow,
And again the soft skies and the fronts of November
Recall the Thanksgivings we kept long ago.

THEY will not desert us and Memory traces
With love and affection the days of the past,
We hear the sweet songs and we see the fair faces
That charmed the Thanksgivings too happy to last;
How often we looked on the fields in the morning
And saw on the corn the first furry of snow,
With the sun in the east all the landscape adorning
To welcome Thanksgivings we loved long ago.

THEY fade not, no matter how swift is Time's river,
We cherish them all for the loves that they hold,
And dearer they grow. May they linger forever,
Framed by Affection in Memory's gold!
Again in the gloaming of mutual November
The tides of another Thanksgiving doth flow,
Repeating the days we rejoice to remember—
The feasts and the smiles of the dear long ago.

WE kneel as a people, for great is the Nation
Whose banners are waving from sea unto sea;
Our power is boundless and lofty our station,
For this is the land of the brave and the free;
The bells of Thanksgiving are tunefully ringing,
They call to the chancel the high and the low,
And millions to-day are in gratitude singing
The songs that their forefathers sang long ago.

THE chorus is heard from the far-away pinelands
To the eureka shores of the occident seas;
It echoes anew in the depths of the vine lands,
And quivers the bloom of the fair orange tree;
The Nation rejoices, for Peace crowns its banner,
The rivers of plenty through all the land flow,
And hunger's unknown in the cot and the manor,
And spanned is the sky by the Thanksgiving bow.

PRAISE God for His goodness! His keptness a Nation
When darkness and trials o'ershadowed the land,
His love and His care were the Pilgrims' salvation
Who planted their faith on the wave-beaten strand;
O bells of Thanksgiving! ring out in the morning,
We've planted in love, and we reap as we sow;
The sun of God's love is the landscape adorning,
And Freedom remembers her birth long ago.

The Congressional muddle in the Eleventh District is muddling yet, and the charges of all kinds of rascality have been made.

Recent experiments again demonstrate that in order to get the best beef, cattle must be bred with special reference to their meat-producing qualities.

Fall River, Mass., cotton manufacturers cut wages 10 per cent. Other centers are expected to follow this lead until 90,000 operatives are affected. A strike, though possible, is unlikely.

Hon. Cliff E. Nadaud has announced his intention of being a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress next fall. He is the greatest hustler in the district and will make it lively for his opponents, of whom it is said there will be several.

As the paymaster of the Pennsylvania railroad was coming out of a bank at Logansport, Ind., the other day an officer seized his vilice containing $41,000 and took it to the courthouse were nearly $20,000 was counted out to satisfy two judgments against the railroad company.

Charges against nineteen firemen have been filed with the Board of Public Safety in Louisville. Three are accused of stealing from the stores that suffered in the Masonic Temple fire and the others, it is alleged, refused to give information needed in the investigation. Mayor Grainger says he will continue to sift the case and will punish every guilty man.

Circuit Court adjourned Wednesday at noon, having been in session but two days—the shortest term ever held in this county. The grand jury was in session the same period and returned six indictments, five being for misdemeanors and the other against Wm. Givens, colored, for stealing a watch from Dell Ayres, for which he was sent to the penitentiary for two years.—Warsaw Independent.

The State Board of Health has started a movement to rid Kentucky of cattle with tuberculosis. It has been instituted at the Lakeland Insane Asylum, where a herd of 60 is maintained. Tests indicate that 45 per cent of these are illicted. An autopsy will be held on two or three and if tuberculosis is certainly shown all suspected cattle will be killed. The investigation will then be carried all over the State.

The Pendletonian makes up the next contest for the Democratic nomination in this district as follow:: "Arthur Goebel, a younger brother of the late William Goebel, is being boomed for Congressional honors in this district at the next election, and in an interview states that he is inclined to think he will make the race. Judge Perkins, of Kenton, and Judge Lassing, of Boone, are also probable entries in the race. With Col. Gooch and Editor Smith, of Carorllton, already announced the entry list will doubtless be large and the race a lively and intere-ting one.'

. Two men were disputing over their respective churches. One was a Methodist and the other a Baptist. Finally one of them called to a neighbor who was passing by and asked his opinion as to which was the only church in which to be saved. "Well, neighbors," said he, "son and I have been hauling wheat to mill for nigh on to forty years. Now there's two roads that leads to the mill. One's the valley, and the other takes over the hill. Sometimes I go one and sometimes the other. And never yet, friends, has the miller asked me which road I took, but he always asks: Is your wheat good?

Complete returns from the Legislative races in Kentucky show that the next General Assembly will contain 107 Democrats and 31 Republicans.

Of the new Senators-elect 14 are Democrats and 5 are Republicans. In the list of hold-over Senators are 17 Democrats and 2 Republicans, and the next Senate, therefore, will have a membership of 31 Democrats and 7 Republicans.

The lower House will have 76 Democrats and 24 Republicans. In the last Legislature the House stood: Democrats, 73; Republicans, 27. The Senate stood: Democrats, 26; Republicans, 14. On joint ballot the last Assembly stood: Democrats, 91; Republicans, 39, a Democratic majority of 60 on joint ballot.

In the next Legislature the Democratic majority on joint ballot will be 76, which is regarded as safe.

Report of Delegates from Golden Grange to Ky. State Grange.

It was our high privilege to attend the meeting of State Grange, held in Augusta, on the 27 and 28 of October, which was a very interesting and instructive gathering of Patrons. We regret that memory is so treacherous we can not repeat to you many of the good, useful lessons taught. Words are inadequate to compliment the very beautiful and powerful address made by Worthy Master Wolcott Truths that sank deep into the hearts of every true patron, suggestions which, if practiced by the Grange in Kentucky, the organization could soon rise to a great and mighty power. The first afternoon was devoted to public speaking. The welcoming address by the City Attorney, was spirited and to the point, the introductory of which we give in his own language, "We welcome you to our county, our city and our houses." Following him, came Mrs. Woodman from Michigan, whom Bro. Wolcott introduced as the speaker of the afternoon. Patrons, that was a real treat. Would that every member of Golden Grange could have heard it. She appealed to us from every standpoint to be loyal, faithful and true to the precepts of the order. A few of the leading thoughts we mention. The power in Union, the training from childhood, the faithful few, the Grange as a means of charity, the great educational advantages and the value of a consecrated fatherhood, as well as a consecrative motherhood. In the evening Bro. Jones conferred to the sixth degree upon a class of 21, after which he entertained the audience by giving the unwritten work, where every one was at liberty to ask for any information desired. The morning of the second day was consumed in the election of officers, which still gives to Golden Grange the honor of having within her fold six of the most prominent officers of State Grange. The afternoon session was devoted to reports of various committees and installation of officers. We failed to hear the reports from the Subordinate Granges, which were voted to go to Secretary for publication, hence could not bring to you the words of encouragement and good cheer we promised. In concluding this report to Golden Grange, we wish to say it was a great pleasure to attend the State Grange meeting as your delegates and we thank you for the honor.

Gathering and storing winter apples is an important duty that must be attended to before the heavy frosts begin in the fall. Apples that are to be kept over winter should be carefully picked and placed in barrels. After picking they should be left in the open air for some time, as this tends to thoroughly ripen them. They also pass through a sweat at first, and it is much better if they can be left exposed so that all surface moisture is evaporated. Fruit should be placed in a cool, dark cellar. In some instances where there are a few barrels of specially good apples the practice is adopted of wrapping the apples in paper. This prevents them from coming in contact with one another and will insure their keeping. It usually pays to pick over apples two or three times during the winter, so that those showing signs of decay may be discarded. Windfalls should never be placed among apples that are handpicked. A plentiful supply of apples to be used in the family during the winter will contribute much to the general healthfulness of every member of the family. —Iowa Homestead.

The principle we have always followed is, when hogs are ready to go, let them go. The higher the price the more profit can be made in feeding heavy hogs, but we would not think of growing hogs over 250 pounds unless we had no youngsters coming on. We believe that when hogs are 4 cents and under the proper weight at which to sell them is 175 pounds; when they are 5 cents 200 pounds; when they are 6 cents, 225 pounds; when they are 7 cents, 250 pounds.—Wallace's Farmer.

The Best Remedy for Croup.

This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighborhood. One of the most terrible things in the world is to be awakened in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of the children. The croup remedies are almost sure to be lost, in case of croup, as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old-fashioned remedy for croup, known as hive syrup and tolu, but some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better, and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw up the phlegm" quicker, and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as the croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

That hobby passed away, and he now thinks that he is inspired, and has certain religious work to do. He had not become violent, but was calling at the houses of his neighbors at all times of night, and they were uneasy about him. It is hoped that Mr. Rouse will soon be restored to a sound mental condition.

Miss Inez Gaines narrowly escaped being badly burnt, last Sunday night. She got up to look after the fire in a stove, and when she struck a match the head flew off, and set fire to her clothing which was made of outing cloth. The flame ran over her in an instant, and frightened her sister badly, and her screams aroused the other members of the family who hastened to the room, and the flames were extinguished before any serious injury resulted.

Stomach Trouble.

"I have been troubled with my stomach for the past four years," says D. I. Beach, of Clover Nook Farm, Greenfield, Mass. If you have any trouble with your stomach try a box of these Tablets. You are certain to be pleased with the result. Price 25c. For sale by all druggists.

There came very near being a costly wreck down on the Bellevue pike one afternoon last week Balsion was pulling the stone crusher up a considerable grade on the way to a stone yard, when the chain by which the engine was drawing the crusher, broke, and the crusher ran back down the hill, and was just about to go down a perpendicular bank 10 or 12 feet when the tongue turned to one side and prevented, what, otherwise, would have been a bad smashup, and probably killed ordisabled R. A. Brady, who was on the crusher.

Rev. Milo Atkinson, at the last meeting of the Warsaw Christian church, tendered his resignation as its pastor to take effect Jan. 1st. The congregation wanted a resident pastor and requested Rev. Atkinson to move here and take the pastorate of the Sparta and Glencoe churches, giving them the time outside of the Warsaw church, but Rev. Atkinson was offered better conditions to remain at Petersburg, Boone county, and give the balance of his time, two Sundays in each month to the church at Bullittsville, Boone county, hence his resignation. The church here has not yet decided whom they will employ as pastor but will endeavor to get a minister who can make his home here.—Warsaw Independent.

ARE IN SYMPATHY.

Teamsters Deeply Involved in the Chicago Carmen's Strike.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—The strike on the Chicago City railroad is still unsettled. Peace negotiations, which have been in progress for nearly a week, were confined Sunday to the consideration by the board of directors of the road of a proposition submitted to the company Saturday night by the strikers. This proposition, it is said, provides for the arbitration of the grievances of the unions on the system that struck in sympathy with the trainmen. What action the directors took on this demand is not known, as their answer will not be given to the union as yet. A basis of settlement of all the other differences in the controversy has been agreed upon and unless the company refuses to accede to this new demand of the union an amicable adjustment of the whole dispute should be reached not later than Monday night.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—The teamsters have become more deeply involved than ever in the strike of the street car men. At a meeting Sunday night of representatives of all the locals of the union in Chicago the stand taken last week when the drivers employed by the Chicago City railway were ordered on strike in sympathy with the trainmen and all teamsters belonging to the union were notified to cease deliveries to the plants of the traction company was approved. When the order was first issued it was declared by the associated teaming interests of the city to be in direct violation of contracts, and an ultimatum was presented Saturday to Cornelius Shea, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, demanding that the order be rescinded or the employers would abrogate every contract existing between them and the teamsters' union. Sunday night's meeting was to consider this ultimatum, and the result was a refusal to comply with the demand. President Shea advised the teamsters against antagonizing the employers, but his words went unheeded and the decision to ignore the ultimatum of the employers was almost unanimous.

It also was decided to call a strike of the teamsters employed by the R. H. Jones Transfer Co., who have been making deliveries to the Chicago City railway. This action, together with the stand taken on the ultimatum of the employers, it is believed, may result in a general lockout or strike of the 30,000 union teamsters employed throughout the city.

The employers will hold a meeting to decide upon what action will be taken. While none of them would discuss the matter, still the impression was given out that the teamsters would be summarily dealt with.

DISASTER IN A MINE.

Eleven Miners Lost Their Lives in an Explosion.

Ten Injured and One Missing—Only One of the Dead Was Disfigued, Showing Death Was Due to Suffocation.

Connellsville, Pa., Nov. 23.—Sunday was a sad day in the little mining settlement of Ferguson, nestled in the hills a mile and a half above Dunbar. When the books of the company were consulted Sunday to determine the identity of the dead and injured in Saturday night's explosion in the Ferguson mine, it was found there were 21 men in the mine at the time of the explosion. Ten bodies were taken from the mine Saturday night. Of the ten injured one died Sunday and one man is missing whose body is supposed to be still in the mine.

All day long the trolley cars have been crowded with curious people going to and from the scene of the disaster. Hundreds have stood for hours around the little blacksmith shop, which was turned into a morgue Saturday night, where the ten bodies of the unfortunate miners were prepared for burial Sunday morning.

Coroner Arthur F. Hagan, of Uniontown, went to Ferguson early Sunday morning and viewed the bodies as they lay in the blacksmith shop and summoned a jury of inquest. Coroner Hagan says he will not hold the inquest until some of the injured men at the hospital recover. Strange to say, only one of the bodies at the morgue was disfigured. All the other bodies were in good condition and scarcely a scratch could be found on them, indicating that death was due to suffocation.

The officials declare that no fire exists in the mine, but this is not established as it is believed the fire is burning further back than where the explosion actually occurred. Pit Boss McGurk is the only one who can give any definite details of the disaster and the scenes that followed it. He was seen at his little home Sunday and said:

"I think the explosion was caused by the flames from the old hill farm breaking through the wall that had been erected when the Ferguson slope was opened. Ferguson mine is practically the old 'Hill farm' mine.

"When the explosion occurred I was standing in a room with ten or twelve miners about me. The place was rent with a terrific noise and men were thrown in all directions. I must have been knocked unconscious for a few minutes. When I regained consciousness I felt the blood streaming from a cut in my feet and called to the men to follow. None of them moved and, going to several of them, I shook them roughly. Then I lost consciousness again. In a few minutes I was back on my feet. The room was filled with some broken timbers and flames. I made for the mouth of the mine and fought my way through the smoke and flames, but fell exhausted 30 yards from the pit mouth and was picked up and assisted from the mine by the rescuing party."

The doctors fear that McGurk can not get well. The flesh is burned from his face and hands and in many places the bone is exposed.

THIRTY LIVES LOST.

Italians Met Horrible Deaths in Burning Lodging Shanty.

Johnstown, Pa., Nov. 23.—While more than 100 Italian railroad laborers were asleep in a shanty near Lilly, Pa., the building caught fire, and before the foreigners could escape at least 28 were burned to death and 32 were seriously injured.

Two of the Italians who were burned in the lodging shanty fire at Lilly Saturday morning died at a hospital in this city Sunday. This brings the total death loss up to 30, and it is thought four others will die. All the victims were Italians and most of them leave families in the old country. The bones and pieces of charred flesh, all that remained of 28 men, have been gathered up and placed in 12 caskets. They will be buried Monday.

TERRITORY OF OKLAHOMA.

Gov. Ferguson's Annual Report to the Secretary of the Interior.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Gov. Ferguson, of Oklahoma, in his annual report to the secretary of the interior, estimates the present population of the territory at 650,000 and the actual value of taxable property at practically $400,000,000, although only $84,134,472 is returned by the assessors for 1903. The territorial indebtedness is $461,766. The report says that speculators and prospectors have harassed many of the lessees of lands in Kiowa, Comanche and Caddox counties by prospecting for mineral, cutting timber and attempting to locate mining claims on school lands, but the state board has uniformly declined to recognize that the mining laws applied to these reserved lands and have treated all prospectors as intruders. Rules have been amended to prevent the hypothecating of leases as security for loans and their transfer in blank and in the future all leases and transfers must be executed before a notary public or other officer empowered to take acknowledgments as in real estate transfers.

A TRAIN WRECKED.

Two Persons Killed and a Half Dozen Others Injured Near Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Nov. 23.—Two persons were killed and a half dozen others were injured late Saturday night in a wreck near Gwynedd, a short distance from this city on the Philadelphia & Reading railway. The dead are C. L. Custer, 57, a passenger, who lived in this city, and Harry Roderick, of Doylestown, Pa., fireman of the wrecked train. While the injuries to some of the passengers are serious, all of them will recover.

The railroad officials believe the accident was due to a deliberate attempt at train wrecking. The train was a local one from Doylestown and had just passed the station at Gwynedd when the engine jumped the track and went over an embankment followed by one car. An investigation, the railroad officials say, showed that spikes had been drawn from a plate connecting the tracks and the rails had been spread apart.

A FIVE-DAY BATTLE.

Three Hundred Moros Are Known to Have Been Killed.

Maj. H. L. Scott, of the 14th Cavalry, and Five American Privates Were Wounded—Several Insurgent Dead Were Carried Off.

Manila, Nov. 23.—Three hundred Moros are known to have been killed and many others were carried off dead or wounded as a result of five days' severe fighting in Jolo between the American troops under Gen. Leonard Wood and the insurgents. Maj. H. L. Scott, of the 14th cavalry, and five American privates were wounded.

Gen. Wood landed near Siet Lake in Jolo November 12. The Moros were soon located and fighting began immediately and continued until November 17. Maj. Scott was taking Panglima Hassen, the Moro leader, who had been taken a prisoner, to Jolo. While en route Hassen asked to be allowed to see his family. His appeal was granted and he thereon led Maj. Scott into an ambuscade, where the American detachment was fired on. Maj. Scott was shot in both hands. Hassen succeeded in escaping during this unexpected attack, but is supposed to have been killed the following day.

The fighting took place in a country covered with swamps and rocks. The Moros were driven across the country from Siet Lake to the town which Hassen has made his headquartera and where it was reported the Moros were 2,000 strong. The rebel position was attacked in the flank by the American troops who occupied the town and inflicted a loss of 50 killed on the Moros. Hassen, with a small party, surrendered. The rest of the Moros went into the swamps out of which they were driven on November 16, leaving 76 dead behind them. On November 17 the American forces renewed the attack on the remaining Moros, of whom 40 more were killed. The rebel forces have been literally destroyed by these operations by Gen. Wood, who says the indications are that there will be no extension of the uprising, which was handled without difficulty.

On November 18 Gen. Wood started on an expedition against a body of 2,000 Moros, who are in the mountains back of Tablibi. No news has as yet been received as to the result of this movement. Gen. Wood has under him two battalions of the 28th regiment, one of the 23d regiment, a platoon of Capt. George S. Saltey's battery, two troops of the 14th cavalry and a detachment of engineers. Maj. Scott assisted with a force composed of three companies of the 17th infantry, a platoon of Capt. D. J. Rumbaugh's battery and a troop of the 14th cavalry.

HOW CHEAP BAKING POWDER IS MADE.

A recent seizure of a lot of "cheap" baking powders by the authorities of a neighboring city has exposed the character of the low priced brands of baking powders which many manufacturers are offering throughout the country. The price of the powders first attracted attention to them. Samples were taken and analyzed. The official report of the analysis showed the stuff to be "alum powders," composed chiefly of alum, sulphuric acid and pulverized rock. The powders were declared dangerous to health and several thousand pounds were confiscated and destroyed.

Physicians have frequently cautioned consumers against mixing food with these so-called "cheap" baking powders. They are all found, when analyzed, to contain large percentages of alum and sulphuric acid to which are added various sorts of filling matter sometimes both injurious and nasty.

The high class, cream of tartar baking powders, are the most economical and wholesome and should always be selected for use. They will be found cheaper in the end, besides making the food better and more healthful.

Mrs. Anderson, Jacksonville, Fla., daughter of Recorder of Deeds, West, who witnessed her signature to the following letter, praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—There are but few wived and mothers who have not at times endured agonies and such pain as only women know. I wish such women knew the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a remarkable medicine, different in action from any I ever knew and thoroughly reliable.

"I have seen many cases where women doctored for years without permanent benefit, who were cured in less than three months after taking your Vegetable Compound, while others who were chronic and incurable cases got cured, happy, and in perfect health after a thorough treatment with this medicine. I have never used it myself without gaining great benefit. A few doses restores my strength and appetite, and tones up the entire system. Your medicine has been tried and found true, hence I fully endorse it."—Mrs. R. A. WOOD INVESTIGATION.

Maj. Rathbone Reiterates Charges Made Against Him.

Senate Military Affairs Committee Issues Summonses for a Number of Witnesses to Appear Before Them and Give Testimony.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Maj. Estes G. Rathbone, formerly director of posts in Cuba, was given a hearing by the senate committee on military affairs, which is investigating the charges against Gen. Leonard Wood in opposition to his confirmation as major general. Maj. Rathbone reiterated the charges made several times before the secretary of war, the senate committee on relations with Cuba and in public statements following his trial in connection with Cuban postal frauds. Maj. Rathbone filed specific written charges with the committee. He alleged that Gen. Wood while military governor of Cuba had accepted money from the Jai Alai, which was, he said, a gambling concern, and asserted that he had made a personal friend and boon companion of an ex-convict.

At the afternoon session of the committee Maj. Rathbone submitted a transcript of the records of the courts of Havana, showing that Gen. Wood, as military governor, gave orders to the courts as to what they should do in the matter of giving bail and the conduct of some other business.

Summons issued by the senate military affairs committee were served Friday night on Ernst Lee Consnt, of the New York law firm of Page & Conant, citing him to appear before the committee Saturday in connection with the investigation of charges against Brig. Gen. Leonard Wood. It is understood the subpoenae was issued at the request of Maj. Rathbone, who learned late Friday of Mr. Conant's presence in the city. Mr. Conant will be expected to give testimony as to the character of the Jai Alai, the alleged gambling establishment which Gen. Wood is charged with having given a ten-year concession to operate in Havana.

Mr. Conant went to Cuba as an attache of the evacuation commission, and while there he acted as the legal adviser of Gen. Ludlow, in command of the department of Havana. Later he served Gen. Wood in the same capacity, and it is declared he is competent to give some inside facts relating to the manner in which the concession to the Jai Alai was obtained.

Another witness summoned Friday night by the military affairs committee is Herbert J. Brown, a newspaper man, who was in Cuba during American occupation, who is said to have made an inquiry into the character of the Jai Alai company.

The murder and burning are to be committed within one week, according to the threat.

It was John Kilgour who got Henry Burkhold out of the Franklin bank when the former made discoveries of alleged irregular methods. The letter has been turned over to the police.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 21.—Barney Oldfield broke the world's automobile record for a mile on an oval track, going the distance in 55 seconds flat. The record was made in a speed trial at Agricultural Park.

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Senate—Among other bills introduced Monday were the following: By Mr. McCumber (N. D.), permitting the use of the entire proceeds from public land sales for irrigation systems; by Mr. Quarles (Wis.), to repeal the desert land law, the timber and stone act and the commutation clause of the homestead act; by Mr. Perkins (Cal.), to amend the immigration laws so as to exclude aliens over 16 years old who can not read and write.

House—The house Monday made a fair start on the legislation for which it was convoked in special session, adopting a rule under which a vote will be taken at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon on the bill to make the Cuban reciprocity treaty effective and entering on debate of the Cuban bill. The rule was adopted by a party vote with the exception that six republican members from Michigan and California joined the minority in opposition to the rule.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Senate—Messrs. Cockrell and Dryden Tuesday presented to the senate an address from a committee representing the insurance companies of the country, asking for legislation looking to the prohibition of the use of the mails by bogus insurance companies by so extending the lottery laws as to make them applicable to those concerns, and Senator Dryden introduced a bill to carry the petition into effect.

House—The house resumed consideration of the Cuban bill. The notable incidents of the day were the speeches of Mr. Stevens (rep., Minn.), who spoke in opposition to the bill, and the speech of Mayor-elect McClellan (N. Y.). Mr. Stevens argued that the bill was a "cruel blow" at one of the most promising agricultural industries of this country and that the measure will imperil our vast foreign trade. Mr. McClellan delivered his valedictory to the house, making an argument in favor of the bill, during the course of which he criticised the administration of Gen. Wood in Cuba.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Senate—Among the bills introduced Wednesday were the following: By Senator Platt (Ct.), providing for the restoration to citizenship of American women who have married aliens, when such women have become separated from their husbands and foreign alliances either by death or divorce; by Senator Callinger, providing for the erection in Washington of a monument for private soldiers of the civil war. The bill carries an appropriation of $100,000.

House—The opposition to the Cuban bill was heard in the house and in vigorous speech. The features of the day were the speeches of Mr. Grosvenor (O.), who opened the discussion in advocacy of the bill, and of Mr. Fordney (rep., Mich.), who spoke in opposition. Mr. Grosvenor spoke for more than an hour, during which he was frequently interrupted by questions emanating from the democratic side. Mr. Fordney emphatically expressed his disapproval of the measure. He made an attack on Mr. Francis Thurber (N. Y.), and criticised Gen. Leonard Wood in severe terms for paying money to Mr. Thurber for distributing literature in the interest of Cuban reciprocity two years ago.

Washington, Nov. 20.—Senate—No business of general importance was transacted in the senate Thursday.

House—The house, by a rising vote of 235 to 21, passed the bill to make effective the Cuban reciprocity treaty. The dissenting votes were about equally divided between republicans and democrats, but there was no record vote, the minority having too few votes to order the yeas and nays. The democrats, under the leadership of Mr. Williams, sought to the last to secure amendments to the bill in accordance with the action of the democratic caucus, but were defeated steadily. Mr. Williams made the final effort when he tried to have the bill recommitted to the ways and means committee with instructions to amend, but a point of order under the special rule providing for a vote on the bill without intervening motion was sustained. Mr. Cannon received the result of the democratic side when he entertained the appeal from his ruling made by Mr. Williams, the speaker saying he preferred to correct if he erred at all in giving the house the right to express its will. The appeal was tabled by a strict party vote. The debate began Monday was continued up to within a few minutes of the hour of 4 o'clock, the time appointed to take a vote on the final passage of the bill.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Senate—The senate held its longest sitting of the session Friday, beginning at noon and concluding at 3:15 p. m. The entire time was consumed in debating a motion to refer the Cuban reciprocity bill to the committee on foreign relations. The political line was sharply drawn in the discussion, the republicans advocating such reference and the democrats contending that the measure should go to the committee on finance. The motion prevailed without division. The debate served to bring out some incidental references to the merits of the bill. Mr. Teller took occasion to correct published reports that he has hope of defeating the bill or that he intends unduly to obstruct its consideration. Messrs. Allison and Aldrich announced their willingness to have the bill go to the foreign relations committee, but they united in an expression of opinion that such reference should form no precedent for the reference of revenue bills in the future. Mr. Allison also denied that there was any purpose of revising the tariff by reciprocity treaties.

House—Two bills were introduced in the house allowing free transportation of pension vouchers through the mails. One was introduced by Representative Marshall and the other by Representative Dick.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Senator Fairbanks introduced a bill providing for the purchase of a site and erection of a public building to be used for a department of state, department of justice and a department of commerce and labor.

To Consider Cuban Bill on its Merits.

Washington, Nov. 21.—The democratic senators, at a caucus, decided to consider the Cuban bill on its merits and confine the discussion to the bill itself without bringing in tariff amendments.

THE ELEPHANT—HERE'S A FRIDGE THAT'S GOT TO BE CROSSED

THE TRUSTS EXPOSED.

Court Proceedings Have Done More for Publicity Than Congress and the President.

The exposure of the way the shipbuilding trust was wrecked by Schwab and others has been shown up by the receiver appointed by the court and more than verified by the evidence adduced at the court proceedings. Receiver Smith characterizes the wrecking of the trust as "an artistic swindle" and recommends the court that the swindlers be prosecuted and made to disgorge. There is not much doubt that other corporations and trusts have been handled in the same way and more exposures may be expected in the near future. The asphalt trust was manipulated in a similar manner and many of the railroads have been reorganized on a like basis, but the receivers in the railroad cases were friendly to the wreckers, so no punishment of the robbers was attempted and they were allowed to get away with the swag. The receiver of the asphalt trust was not so complacent and Gen. Greene, the republican commissioner of police of New York city, is being prosecuted by the receiver with a strong probability that he will have to disgorge some of the ill-gotten gains. There are a good many other trust magnates on the ragged edge and with hard times coming on and business decreasing, more of the promoters of these over-capitalized corporations will be taken into court and asked to explain where all the money has gone to. Thus the quarrels of trust promoters over the cold remains of some of the trusts is doing more than congress or president for "publicity."

The public are not only swindled by extortionate trust prices to enable dividends to be paid on excessive capitalization, but those who have been silly enough to buy trust stocks and bonds find they have a depreciated security for the good money invested. If President Roosevelt had been half as strong in pushing "publicity" as in some other matters, what a vast saving might have been effected for the dupes of the trust promoters. The last congress passed a law for publicity of trust transactions, provided an army of clerks and appropriated the money to pay them, but left the option of publication of what might be discovered to the president. The bureau of corporations under which this work is being carried on, has for months been engaged with the large force of clerks in unraveling trust transactions, but the president has not authorized the publication of any discoveries that have been made, so the public are still paying the piper but have received no protection. Probably there will be no exposure of the devious ways of the "bad trusts" until after the national election, as the needs of the republican party in the coming campaign will require donations from the "bad trusts," and holding over the heads of the trust magnates the threat of exposure of their methods would be the most effective way of making them donate liberally to the republican campaign fund.

President Roosevelt has been posing as the annihilator of the "bad trusts," but this protection of their interests by not publishing their doings does not substantiate the title of the trust-killer. There he strange political happenings those days and more strange still may be expected before the next election.

——Roosevelt will not mind being called a cutthroat; he is desperately in earnest about cutting the neck of the American continent.—St. Louis Republic.

——Henry O. Havemeyer, president of the sugar trust, said on June 14, 1899, that "the mother of all trusts is the customs tariff bill. It is the government, through its tariff laws, which plunders the people, and the trusts, etc., are merely the machinery for doing it."—Albany Argus.

——Americans own half of the Isle of Pines, and are breathing threats against the Cubans who are its government. The island has been awarded to Cuba. We have territory enough without grudging this little stretch of sand to the people who were born upon it.—Brooklyn Eagle.

COURSE OF THE PRESIDENT.

In the Panama Muddle It Is Such as Threatens National Disgrace.

Theodore Roosevelt is as little likely as any president we have ever had to fall a victim to the wiles of other men, or to become the dupe and instrument of schemers. If he had ever been betrayed into folly it was of his own motion and through the mistakes of his own judgment, says the New York Times. He is not a president to set a guileless foot into the traps of other men. If, therefore, Mr. Roosevelt pursues a course which will result in the dismemberment of the republic of Colombia, and thereafter proceeds with the Panama canal undertaking, which the destruction of the sovereignty over the isthmus would leave him free to pursue, all the world will conclude that the instigation of the revolt, interference by us to prevent the suppression of it, and the recognition of the independence of the new little republic, were one and all measures of our national policy determined upon long in advance by our government, and executed by the president to the end that in that way all obstacles to the construction by us of the Panama canal might be removed. If such a policy of wrong and spoliation should provoke protests, if we should incur the censure of just men and civilized governments, if it should be felt at home and abroad that we had disgraced ourselves and put a stain upon the country's good name by such a policy of dishonorable intrigue and aggression, the president could not escape his full share of the responsibility. That it is a dishonorable business in which we are in visible danger of becoming engaged, that we should expose ourselves to just reproach, that our motives would be called ignoble, and that collusion with the insurgents would be charged against us must be plain to every one who will take the trouble to consider for a moment our relation in the present outbreak on the isthmus.

CURRENT COMMENT.

——President Roosevelt cannot complain that he has not heard of a United States judge being a president of a trust company.—N. Y. World.

——It is said that, since the election, Hon. Mark Hanna has been deluged with letters from his admirers urging him to be the republican candidate for president. What's the matter with Theodore?—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——It is the highly protected industries that are beginning to complain of over-production. Let them turn to the remedy pointed out by their great apostle, McKinley, and seek reciprocity treaties with Canada and other countries who stand ready to enter into them. To "stand pat" in regard to reciprocity and the currency is a short-sighted and cowardly policy.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——The most futile of all tariff suggestions is that made by the National Association of Agricultural Implement and Vehicle Manufacturers, that when it shall be deemed wise to revise the tariff the changes shall be advised by business men and that there should be a permanent nonpartisan tariff commission to propose changes. Whenever the tariff is changed it is on the advice of business men; pretty uniformly those who will profit from higher duties. Some business men want more duties and some want less. As long as party divisions are made by differences over the tariff a nonpartisan tariff commission is a contradiction of terms.—Philadelphia Record.

——Gov. Cummins may regard himself as a brand snatched from the burning through his submission to party discipline.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Now that Senator Hoar has given us his personal assurance that "the American republic shall not be turned into a plutocracy," perhaps some of the more timid and apprehensive will feel reassured.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——When the president expresses his hearty approval of Mr. Hanna, he is referring to Senator Hanna and not necessarily to Chairman Hanna, of the republican national committee.—Detroit Free Press.

A Knockout Believed to Have Been Dealt Louisville Poolrooms.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 19.—The decision of the court of appeals Wednesday upholding the ordinance against poolrooms passed by the republican council in 1900 is believed to be a knockout blow for the rooms in Louisville.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 19.—In a sweeping opinion delivered in the cases of the city of Louisville against Henry Wehrmhoff and others, the poolroom cases, the court of appeals holds that the general council of a city has authority to adopt ordinances prohibiting the operation of poolrooms and punishing operatives, proprietors of buildings and telegraph companies for furnishing information to poolrooms.

PRAIRIE STATE BOYS.

Young Illinoisans Prepare Great World's Fair Exhibit.

COMMISSION HAS A FUND OF $250,000.

Ten Thousand Boys Growing Corn. Strawberry Season Two and One-Half Months Long—A Great State's Resources Attractively Shown.

Ten thousand ambitious Illinois farmer boys are industriously tending 10,000 tracts of ground and are raising crops of corn, the choice of which will make up a wonderful World's Fair exhibit at St. Louis next year.

Prizes aggregating $3,000 have been offered to the boys who produce the best corn, and every farmer boy in Illinois was privileged to enter the contest. The capital required was 5 cents in cash, about one-eighth of an acre of ground, and energy. The State Board of Agriculture furnished each boy, for the consideration of 5 cents, with 500 grains of white corn of the best grade. This corn was to be planted on a tract of ground that was to be tended by the boy alone. The choicest ears are to be selected from each boy's crop and the 10,000 samples to constitute Illinois exhibit of boy-grown corn at the World's Fair.

Another corn exhibit of keen interest will be that of the Illinois Corn Breeders' Association. In the northern part of Illinois there are eight fields of corn. These eight fields represent the eight pure and distinct varieties. Scientific agriculturists claim that in order to keep the corn pure the varieties must be segregated, and that if any two of the pure varieties are planted in adjoining fields the wind will carry the pollen from one field to another, and in the course of a short time the two varieties will lose their characteristics and become identical.

MARION E. TAYLOR,

With its 400 miles of length Illinois is enabled to make an unrivaled fruit display. When the World's Fair opens April 30, 1904, strawberry growers from the extreme southern part of the state, in "Egypt," as southern Illinois is termed, will show as fine strawberries as can be grown in any section in the world. The berry belt extends north for 400 miles, and on the first of July Illinois will still be showing fine berries harvested in the northern tier of counties. Thus every day for a season of more than two months, Illinois will display fresh strawberries grown within her borders. Cold storage may add another two weeks to this remarkable record.

Following strawberries will come raspberries, blackberries, cherries, plums, peaches, pears and apples. In the latter fruit Illinois claims great distinction. Clay county is one of the most famous apple counties in the world, and the yield there, year after year, is enormous. In every county in the state apples are considered a reliable crop, but Clay county is in a class by herself. Every day during the Exposition Illinois will have fresh fruit put on the tables of the Palace of Horticulture.

Important as are her agricultural and horticultural resources, they are surpassed by her dairying and live stock industries. Illinois will take a prominent part in the model dairy to be installed in the Agricultural Building. F. D. Coburn Chief of the Live Stock Department, for the exposition, is reported as having said that if the live stock department contained no exhibits other than those of Illinois the displays would compare favorably with those made by the world at any previous international exposition.

Illinois has a World's Fair fund of $250,000 at her disposal Her state building will be one of the handsomest on the plateau of states and will cost about $75 000. It stands on high ground and a broad veranda, surrounding the building on all sides, will form the lower tier of a pyramid. Gigantic statues of Lincoln and Grant will flank the main entrance, and on each side of the drum of the dome will stand great sculpture groups symbolical of agriculture and other industries.

What is true of Illinois may be said of many of the other states to be represented at the World's Fair. The plans of the Kentucky Exposition Association only contemplate an expenditure of $100 000, but with that sum it can make a display that will equal many of Illinois' exhibits and excel others of hers. Citizens of the state should not hesitate further to make their subscriptions to the fund.

The protracted meeting at the Christian church closed last Friday night with 14 additions, and ten baptised. Three were reclaimed. Bro. Darnell conducted the services and Bro. Atkinson, of Petersburg, did most of the preaching. They were students of the Lexington Bible College and are thorough in the teaching of the Bible alone. Bro. Atkinson is not at a loss for words, and places them in the right place. Bro. Darnall cannot be excelled, for the practice he has had. He is a promising young minister.

Sister Milo Atkinson spent several days here with her husband and the members of the church during the revival. She is as well suited for a minister's wife as any lady I ever met. She meets all with a smile that is sure to win you, and not only win you but hold you afterwards. The members extend their thanks to them both for their presence and the service rendered during the revival

Crescent and Rabbit Hash, the two problems were given me for insertion. If your solutions are not correct, you will hear from the parties. I am not a mathematician. My mind don't run that way. I will deputize you, Mr. Crescent, to answer Rabbit Hash's problem.

If the members of the two churches in Bellevue would spend their time in the service of their Master, and watching themselves, instead of watching eachother, and commenting on their actions, they would be better christians, and be spending their time more profitably.

While hauling crushed stone on Friday of last week, one of Xen Scott's mules trod on his foot, which disabled him for two or three minutes. No more was thought about it until Monday night of this week, when it commenced paining him, and was so painful and swolen for two or three days that he could not wear his boot, or walk without the aid of a cane.

Quite an accident happened to John Ryle, of McVille, last Tuesday, while cutting logs on the Albert Kelly farm for Setters & Botts. In falling a tree a limb was thrown back and fell on him. The first report was that an arm and leg were broken, and the collar bone fractured in two places; but his injuries are not as bad as at first reported No bones were broken, but he is badly hurt.

During the revival at the Christian church in Bellevue there has been added 7 by confession and baptisms, 3 reclaimed and 1 from the Methodist, making a total of 11. Its not known when the meeting will close. May the new recruits live consistent, christian lives until death, is our prayer. If they allow themselves to go back to that far country they will not be as good as the moralist that so much has been said about during the meetings.

A Timely Suggestion.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful housewife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is certain to be needed before the winter is over, and results are much more prompt and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system. In almost every instance a severe cold may be warded off by taking this remedy freely as soon as the first indication of the cold appears. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains no harmful substance. It is pleasant to take—both adults and children like it. Buy it and you will get the best. It always cures. For Sale by All Druggists.

How to Prevent Croup.

It will be good news to the mothers of small children to learn that croup can be prevented. The first sign of croup is hoarseness. A day or two before the attack the child becomes hoarse. This is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the rough cough appears, and it will dispel all symptoms of croup. In this way all danger and anxiety may be avoided. This remedy is used by many thousands of mothers and has never been known to fail. It is, in fact, the only remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant and safe to take. For Sale by All Druggists.

As puzzles seem to be in order, we would like to submit the following. There is a certain number consisting of three digits or figures. The sum of these digits, increased by 3 is equal to 15. The figure in the place of units is equal to twice that of the other two, and if 594 be added to the number, the order of the digits will be reversed. What is the number?

PRAIRIE STATE BOYS.

Young Illinoisans Prepare Great World's Fair Exhibit.

COMMISSION HAS A FUND OF $250,000.

Ten Thousand Boys Growing Corn. Strawberry Season Two and One-Half Months Long—A Great State's Resources Attractively Shown.

Ten thousand ambitious Illinois farmer boys are industriously tending 10,000 tracts of ground and are raising crops of corn, the choice of which will make up a wonderful World's Fair exhibit at St. Louis next year.

Prizes aggregating $3,000 have been offered to the boys who produce the best corn, and every farmer boy in Illinois was privileged to enter the contest. The capital required was 5 cents in cash, about one-eighth of an acre of ground, and energy. The State Board of Agriculture furnished each boy, for the consideration of 5 cents, with 500 grains of white corn of the best grade. This corn was to be planted on a tract of ground that was to be tended by the boy alone. The choicest ears are to be selected from each boy's crop and the 10,000 samples to constitute Illinois exhibit of boy-grown corn at the World's Fair.

Another corn exhibit of keen interest will be that of the Illinois Corn Breeders' Association. In the northern part of Illinois there are eight fields of corn. These eight fields represent the eight pure and distinct varieties. Scientific agriculturists claim that in order to keep the corn pure the varieties must be segregated, and that if any two of the pure varieties are planted in adjoining fields the wind will carry the pollen from one field to another, and in the course of a short time the two varieties will lose their characteristics and become identical.

MARION E. TAYLOR,

With its 400 miles of length Illinois is enabled to make an unrivaled fruit display. When the World's Fair opens April 30, 1904, strawberry growers from the extreme southern part of the state, in "Egypt," as southern Illinois is termed, will show as fine strawberries as can be grown in any section in the world. The berry belt extends north for 400 miles, and on the first of July Illinois will still be showing fine berries harvested in the northern tier of counties. Thus every day for a season of more than two months, Illinois will display fresh strawberries grown within her borders. Cold storage may add another two weeks to this remarkable record.

Following strawberries will come raspberries, blackberries, cherries, plums, peaches, pears and apples. In the latter fruit Illinois claims great distinction. Clay county is one of the most famous apple counties in the world, and the yield there, year after year, is enormous. In every county in the state apples are considered a reliable crop, but Clay county is in a class by herself. Every day during the Exposition Illinois will have fresh fruit put on the tables of the Palace of Horticulture.

Important as are her agricultural and horticultural resources, they are surpassed by her dairying and live stock industries. Illinois will take a prominent part in the model dairy to be installed in the Agricultural Building. F. D. Coburn Chief of the Live Stock Department, for the exposition, is reported as having said that if the live stock department contained no exhibits other than those of Illinois the displays would compare favorably with those made by the world at any previous international exposition.

Illinois has a World's Fair fund of $250,000 at her disposal. Her state building will be one of the handsomest on the plateau of states and will cost about $75 000. It stands on high ground and a broad veranda, surrounding the building on all sides, will form the lower tier of a pyramid. Gigantic statues of Lincoln and Grant will flank the main entrance, and on each side of the drum of the dome will stand great sculpture groups symbolical of agriculture and other industries.

What is true of Illinois may be said of many of the other states to be represented at the World's Fair. The plans of the Kentucky Exposition Association only contemplate an expenditure of $100 000, but with that sum it can make a display that will equal many of Illinois' exhibits and excel others of hers. Citizens of the state should not hesitate further to make their contributions to the fund.

HEALTH

"I don't think we could keep house without Thedford's Black-Draught. We have used it in the family for over two years with the best of results. I have not had a doctor in the house for that length of time. It is a doctor in itself and always ready to make a person well and happy."—JAMES HALL, Jacksonville, Ill.

Because this great medicine relieves stomach pains, frees the constipated bowels and invigorates the torpid liver and weakened kidneys is necessary in the home where Thedford's Black-Draught is kept. Families living in the country, miles from any physician, have been kept in health for years with this medicine as their only doctor. Thedford's Black-Draught cures biliousness, dyspepsia, colds, chills and fever, bad blood, headaches, diarrhœa, constipation, colic and almost every other ailment because the stomach, bowels liver and kidneys so nearly control the health.

COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIX. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2 1903. NO. 7

County Correspondence.

Belleview.

Several inches of snow fell last Saturday. It was a great benefit to the small grain.

Rogers Bros. have begun to butcher porkers, to supply their customers with fresh meat and lard.

T. J. Clore & Son are supplying their store with a stock to suit their customers, as near as possible.

Miss Geuevia Powell, of Prospect Hill, Indiana, was visiting her grand parents and aunt, here last week.

Mrs. David Akin, of McVille, died of consumption, last Saturday at 2 p. m., and was buried at 2 p. m. Sunday, in the new cemetery. She leaves a husband and three children to mourn her death.

The protracted meeting at the Christian church closed last Friday night with 14 additions, and ten baptized. Three were reclaimed. Bro. Darnell conducted the services and Bro. Atkinson, of Petersburg, did most of the preaching. They were students of the Lexington Bible College and are thorough in the teaching of the Bible alone. Bro. Atkinson is not at a loss for words, and places them in the right place. Bro. Darnall cannot be excelled, for the practice he has had. He is a promising young minister.

Sister Milo Atkinson spent several days here with her husband and the members of the church during the revival. She is as well suited for a minisiters wife as any lady I ever met. She meets all with a smile that is sure to win you, and not only win you but hold you afterwards. The members extend their thanks to them both for their presence and the service rendered during the revival

Commissary.

Nov. 27.—Miss Lou Louden spent last Tuesday with her cousin, Miss Carrie Louden, of McVille.

Miss Nannie Goodridge gave the young people a party, last Saturday night, which was enjoyed by all present.

Miss Artie and Stella Ryle went to Aurora shopping, Wednesday, and brought home a buggy load of nice goods.

Crescent and Rabbit Hash, the two problems were given me for insertion. If your solutions are not correct you will hear from the parties. I am not a mathematician. My mind don't run that way. I will deputize you, Mr. Crescent, to answer Rabbit Hash's problem.

If the members of the two churches in Bellevue would spend their time in the service of their Master, and watching themselves, instead of watching eachother, and commenting on their actions, they would be better christians, and be spending their time more profitably.

While hauling crushed stone on Friday of last week, one of Xen Scott's mules trod on his foot, which disabled him for two or three minutes. No more was thought about it until Monday night of this week, when it commenced paining him, and was so painful and swollen by two or three days that he could not wear his boot, or walk without the aid of a cane.

Quite an accident happened to John Ryle, of McVille, last Tuesday, while cutting logs on the Albert Kelly farm for Setters & Botts. In falling a tree a limb was thrown back and fell on him. The first report was that his left leg were broken, and the collar bone fractured in two places; but his injuries are not as bad as at first reported No bones were broken, but he is badly hurt.

During the revival at the Christian church in Bellevue there has been added 7 by confession and baptisms, 3 reclaimed and 1 from the Methodist, making a total of 11. Its not known when the meeting will close. May the new recruits live consistent, christian lives until death, is our prayer. If they allow themselves to go back to that far country they will not be as good as the moralist that so much has been said about during the meetings.

A Timely Suggestion.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful housewife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is certain to be needed before the winter is over, and results are much more prompt and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system. In almost every instance a severe cold may be warded off by taking this remedy freely as soon as the first indication of the cold appears. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains no harmful substance. It is pleasant to take—both adults and children like it. Buy it and you will get the best. It always cures. For Sale by All Druggists.

We hope the snow will prove a blessing in the way of replenishing the supply of water, which is so scarce that some are hauling from the town well, the only local fountain for all.

Truly we felt the force of this scripture, "In life we are in the midst of death," when we heard of the sudden death of Mrs. Tom Watts," one who was so useful, so beloved, bound to all by the dearest ties of life. We can offer only our deepest sympathy to the family in their sad bereavement. Her funeral was preached at Sand Run, last Saturday by Rev. Taylor.

Died, on the 16th of November, at the home of her brother, W. S. Walton, Miss Mary K. Waltou, aged 70 years. Miss Mary united with the Hunkydory Club will give a ball in Gordon's Hall, Pt. How to Prevent Croup.

It will be good news to the mothers of small children to learn that croup can be prevented. The first sign of croup is hoarseness. A day or two before the attack the child becomes hoarse. This is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the rough cough appears, and it will dispel all symptoms of croup. In this way all danger and anxiety may be avoided. This remedy is used by many thousands of mothers and has never been known to fail. It is, in fact, the only remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant and safe to take. For Sale by All Druggists.

Nov. 30—Lewis Weaver, of Georgetown, is visiting his many friends in this neighborhood. He has been in the employ of the Southern Railroad for several years, and as a result of his faithfulness, has a 30 days' vacation.

Jim Beall and Geo. Baker came over to take a hunt, last week, and they played havoc with the rabbits—scaring them so badly. Elbert Senior says he cannot get in shooting distance of them.

Clint Blankenbeker and wife were visiting in the Beaver neighborhood, the latter part of last week. Clint took his gun along, but he has not handled in his report as to his success with the Beaver bunnies.

Lute Aylor comes to the front again as a crack shot. A few days since he saw some wild ducks on his pond and he took his gun to try his luck, and succeeded in pulling down three, two shots (that's all that was there.) Pete is very fond of their meat and he is looking better.

Jim Tanner, one of our leading sportsmen, has recently added to his outfit a very fine bird dog, and is now making his avocation a success. He was out a few days last week, and says his dog found plenty of game, but the rabbits ran the wrong way and the birds flew too swift, but notwithstanding all that he got one rabbit.

We responded to a pressing invitation to eat turkey with Harrison Clore Thanksgiving day, where we met our friends, J. C. Clore, of Cincinnati, C. T. Davis and wife, of Ludlow, J. C. Hankins and family, Uncle Geo. Utz, T. J. Allen, and Mrs. Alice Beall. The dinner consisted of all of the delicacies of the season which was tastefully prepared by the hostess.

Mrs. Fred Drinkenberg, after an illness of several months, was summoned to her reward, last Wednesday, the 25th inst. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Slater at Hopeful, last Sunday, after which the remains were placed in the vault at that place to await final interment. Mrs. Drinkenberg leaves a husband, several children and a host of friends to mourn her death. The family have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

As is their custom R. O. Beemon and wife gave their annual entertainment last Sunday, to quite a large number of their friends The bill of fare consisted of a large turkey with the necessary trimmings and all other delicacies of the season, which were very much enjoyed by all present. The bountiful dinner which was so tastefully prepared by the hostess assisted by her daughter, Mrs Aers, was not the only feature of the occasion worthy of note, but the hospitality for which the family is noted was dispensed in true Kentucky style, and ye scribe would voice the sentiment of all present when I say that Mr. and Mrs. Beemon know how to entertain.

One day last week we went to see Edward Rice, and while there saw 8 fat, juicy canvas-back ducks, and getting Ed with his trusty gun, we hied after "ducky," with thoughts of duck for dinner, but alas! the feathers carried the meat away and we dined on bed and corn bread. The sum of these digets, increased by 3 is equal to 15 The figure in the place of units is equal to twice that of the other two, and if 594 be added to the number, the order of the digets will be reversed. What is the number?

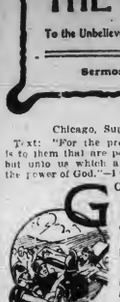
THE CROSS OF CHRIST



To the Unbeliever It Is Foolishness, But to the Believing It Is the Power of God.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Nov. 29, 1903.

Text: "For the preaching of the cross is to them that are perishing foolishness; but unto us which are being saved it is the power of God."—1 Cor. 1:18.

GOD has given to the world a Saviour. He gave because of the world's need. But the world has been divided in its reception of the gift. To those who are perishing the gift is foolishness; to those who are being saved it is the power of God. The story of the cross of Christ is simple and yet profound. Paul was sent to "preach the Gospel; not in wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made void." And it is this simple old story of the cross which we want to proclaim that thereby perhaps some may be delivered from their folly and come to see and know in the cross the power of God. To those who have experienced salvation and thus have come to know God's merciful provision for mankind in His plan of redemption, it seems strange that there should be those who fail to understand God or realize their need of redemption. And yet such there are. It is a condition and not a theory which we meet. On every hand there are found those who for reasons which are manifold do not come to a knowledge of the truth. Skepticism and unbelief distort the cross and make God's marvelous plan of salvation appear unreal and foolish. The finite mind of man tries to reason out and understand the infinite God; he exercises his own wisdom and evolves his own theories as to God and His methods with man. Perishing in the very presence of the cross because unbelief will not give a true vision of the soul's need and of the crucified Lord, even as many perished in the wilderness because they would not turn their eyes to the brazen serpent which Moses held up, a type of the Christ.

EVEN as the brazen serpent marked the line of separation between the dead and the living, so the cross of Christ marks the division of humanity to-day, between the perishing and the being saved. This division was strikingly set forth upon the very day of the crucifixion, when between the two thieves the Christ was placed. To one thief the cross of Christ meant the power of God which was able to deliver his soul from a worse death than that into which his body was sinking, and the Saviour's promise came to cheer his heart in the terrible hour: "This day shalt thou be with Me in paradise." But to the other thief came no such reassuring message, for his heart of unbelief shut out the true vision of the cross of Christ and made it appear as foolishness unto him. And the line of separation which existed between these two sinners has continued down to this day. The cross of Christ continues to those who are perishing, foolishness, but unto those being saved it is still the power of God unto salvation. It is the difference between light and darkness; life and death. On one side the eternal blessing of God and His Christ is being shed forth and on the other is found the deep shadow of His judgment. To those standing in the light of the glory of that cross the power of God is known and felt, but where the darkness and shadow are, there the cross appears as foolishness. While the soul is carrying the burden of sin the power of the cross is not felt, but when the burden of sin rolls into the grave at its foot, then the soul knows what God has wrought through that cross for him. It is no longer foolishness, but power and wisdom Divine.

THE cross of Christ is the power and wisdom of God because of its necessity. The sin of the world could not be atoned for in any other way, for "without the shedding of blood is no remission." Jesus declared of Himself that "as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so must the Son of Man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have eternal life." God's justice demanded the punishment of sin. God's mercy provided a sacrifice for sin. The cross reveals the power of God. The one supreme thought of God through the ages was the redemption of man, and His mighty power and resources were exerted in and through man to the accomplishment of this "great salvation." The cross reveals the wisdom of God. He planned from the foundation of the world for the redemption of man. And how marvelously He has wrought out His plans through the ages. Only the infinite wisdom of a great God could bring them to successful culmination. The cross of Christ reveals the love of God. That wonderful sixteenth verse of the third chapter of John declares that "God so loved." His love was so immeasurably great that the best gift He could offer was none too good for Him to give, and so He gave His only begotten Son. Some one has said that if there is any bright side to human sin, it is that it serves as a background on which God can paint with rainbow brightness the colors of His grace and love; it is that it serves to bring out beauties in the Divine character which otherwise we could not know if we had not sinned against Him. Oh, the love of God which passeth all understanding!

THE cross came as the culmination of Jesus' life. It was that for which He was born. It was the fruition of His victory over sin. "He was in all points tempted as we are, yet without sin." At His transfiguration He was ready, as far as He Himself was concerned, to return to Heaven He had won Heaven by a sinless life. But in His conversation with Moses and Elias He talked of His coming decease, His substitutionary death. He set His face steadfastly towards the cross, that His sinless life might be made the power of God unto salvation. When Peter would rebuke Him for declaring that He must die for them, He tells him to "Get thee behind me, Satan, for thou savorest not the things of God." Of what avail that sinless life, of what benefit to the human race lost through sin, if as the Lamb of God without spot or blemish He did not shed His precious blood for the sin of the whole world. And by His sacrifice what a transformation He wrought! His blood able to cleanse from all sin. Red blood to make the black robes of sin white. Says Alexander McLaren: "It is like some apparent piece of magic that you can see performed in some of our dye-works nowadays. There is nothing else that will touch my guilt except that one great sacrifice offered once for all for a world's sins, for your sins and mine. There is nothing else that will deliver me from the dominion of my own evil, except the power of the life and love of Jesus Christ planted in my heart, and there bringing forth the fruits of righteousness. There is an old legend which says that the only thing that could melt adamant was the blood of a pure lamb. I believe that the one power which brings forgiveness—and forgiveness is not mere impunity—is the sacrifice of Jesus Christ. And I know that the one power, which, transfused into a man's life, can make him live soberly, righteously and godly is that blood which is the life of Christ Himself imparted to us. So, then, that which no man can do for himself, and no man can do for any others, and without which all else that is done by us for ourselves or for others is inadequate to the necessities of the case, is done, blessed be God! for us in that shed blood of Him who in death bore the sins of, and in life imparts righteousness to, the whole world."

IT IS this culmination on the cross to which the soul must look for cleansing from sin, and salvation from its consequences. We may sing of His birth, we may rejoice because of His triumphs over sin and sickness, and the designs of wicked men, but we must glory in the cross, for it is our hope. Paul exclaims: "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." And this, too, must be the theme of our rejoicing. That which appears as foolishness to the world is the evidence to the heart of the believer of the power of God. And as related to the believer, of what does this power consist? It is more than a saving power manifested in the redeemed soul. If, after conversion, man with a tendency to sin could be taken at once into Heaven he would, perhaps, need nothing more than the salvation of his soul, but, surrounded, as he is here, with temptations and trials and difficulties, he needs a keeping power in addition to the saving power which gave him his first song as he united with the angels in the glad song of another sinner who had repented. God does not leave man to struggle on alone. His power is manifested in behalf of His followers at all times. The intimate relationship of father to child is sustained between God and His children. The one who knows not the "power of God unto salvation" finds it hard to understand the keeping and sustaining power of God. But with salvation comes a growing sense of the other. And these are they who are being saved day by day, and who have a sense of the power of God.

BUT the preaching of the "cross is to them that are perishing foolishness." It is such not because it is an unreasonable Gospel, for it is "worthy of all acceptation," but because man finds it more convenient for his present desires and ambitions to put away the claims of the cross upon him. A reasonable Gospel must be given a reasonable hearing. God is ready always to meet every soul and by His convicting and convincing Spirit reveal the truths of this Gospel. The cross means a changed heart and life, and this is what man in his sinfulness and selfishness shrinks from. But man, though he characterize the preaching of the cross of Christ as foolishness, cannot escape the claims of that cross upon him. The death of Jesus Christ has theoretically wiped away the sin of the world. If the world to-day—every living being—would turn to the Christ for cleansing the fountain of blood opened on Calvary's brow would be sufficient to wipe away all sin. And because the sacrifice of Jesus takes in the whole world it gives Him a claim upon it which cannot be denied or set aside. This claim is reasonable; first of all, because man is made not for time, but eternity, and only through the power of the cross can man attain the privileges and blessings of the eternal existence with God. In the second place, there is nothing which the world can give which will satisfy the soul of man. Imagine a big, strong, healthy man from day to day trying to satisfy his stomach, which was crying for solid foods, with weak gruels. He might fill his belly to the point of bursting with such food, but he would not feel satisfied. So it is with man who is trying to satisfy himself with the things of this life. He may stuff to painful excess, but he will never be satisfied. There has yet to be found in this world the soul which has found it possible to know perfect satisfaction by the possession or enjoyment of what this world can give. But God can satisfy, and His Gospel can fill the unsatisfied heart and life. The vision of the cross can give a new inspiration and hope which will not dim throughout all eternity. For these two reasons, then, the Gospel is a reasonable Gospel. Because it is the only way by which man may gain eternal bliss, for which he is intended by God, and because the Gospel is the only thing which can satisfy in this life or the life to come.

THE preaching of the cross of Christ is not foolishness because it unfits for the right activities and the bearing of responsibilities of this life. Somehow, the idea has gotten abroad and fastened itself to the minds of a great many people that to let the cross of Christ rule in their lives means that business success and ability to mingle in the affairs of men will be curtailed if not blasted. But true success cannot, nor can the highest wisdom in secular things, be found apart from God. Joseph found it so in Egypt and became the greatest statesman and most brilliant national executor and manager in the world. David may be cited—victorious general, wise ruler, mighty king. Daniel in the heathen court of the Babylonian king is another example of what God can do through a consecrated, obedient servant. Never did Satan coin a bigger falsehood or endeavor to give it wider currency than that man if he would make a success of his life must leave God out of the reckoning. It is fatal and dangerous fallacy which has dashed thousands upon thousands of souls upon the rocks of destruction. The cross of Christ gives one his proper bearings. It puts into right relationships with God and man, and fits for and leads to a success which can only be measured by eternity. What bitter disappointment comes to the soul which, counting the cross of Christ as foolishness and bending every energy and activity towards the gaining of some earthly goal, finds at last that the coveted prize is but a gilded bauble! Yet there are thousands and tens of thousands who meet just such sad disappointment. Had they not despised the cross of Christ, had they not rejected the reasonable claims of God and His Christ, they would have found in this life abiding satisfaction and success, and would have possessed a hope for the future life which would have been as cheering as the beacon light is to the mariner as he sails the treacherous seas.

HOW can we arouse perishing souls and bring them to realize that the cross of Christ is the power of God unto salvation, and not foolishness, as they have supposed? Not by argument. Not by trying to satisfy all the doubts and questions which arise and obscure the main point at issue, namely, that man needs salvation and has been given a Saviour. One man with whom I talked, who professed to believe that the cross of Christ was foolishness, wanted to discuss the question of the inspiration of the Scriptures, the matter of miracles, the account of the creation, with special reference to Adam and Eve and the Garden of Eden experiences, and finally he wanted to compare the writings of Zoroaster, Confucius, Buddha, etc., with the Bible. It was hard work trying to keep him pointed to the crucified Lord. But that is where he needs to look before he can get all the other tangles straightened out. It is the only starting point for the sinner, and if you cannot get him to look in that direction, your effort and your argument are wasted. Yea, verily, the "preaching of the cross is to them that are perishing foolishness," but nevertheless it is the truth of God and will prevail. With Paul we must say: "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth," and we must preach that and nothing else to the sinner, for that is the only message which will bring him to the light and save his soul. The cross of Christ! Oh, that the world might look to it for deliverance from sin! It is the crucified Lord which should inspire the heart to song and hold the eternal gratitude of the cleansed and redeemed soul.

"Oh, what is thy Beloved?
They oft inquire of me;
And what is my Beloved
So passing fair I see?
Is it the Heavenly splendor
In which He shines above?
His riches, and dominions,
That won my heart's best love?

"Oh, no! 'tis not His glories;
He's worthy of them all!
'Tis not the throne and scepter
Before which angels fall!
I view with heart exulting
Each crown His head adorns;
But, oh, He looks most lovely,
Wearing His crown of thorns.

"I'm glad to see His raiment
Than snow more spotless white,
Refulgent with its brightness,
More dazzling than the light;
But more surpassing lovely
His form appears to me,
When stripped, and scourged, and bleeding,
He hung upon the tree.

"Though higher than the highest,
Most mighty King Thou art,
Thy grace and not Thy greatness,
First touched my rebel heart;
Thy sword it might have slain me,
Thine arrows drunk my blood;
But 'twas Thy cross subdued me,
And won my heart to God.

"Thy scepter rules creation,
Thy wounded hand rules me;
All bow before Thy footstool,
I but the nail prints see:
Aloud they sound Thy titles,
Thou Lord of lords most high:
One thrilling thought absorbs me—
This Lord for me did die!"

CURSED BY THE TARIFF.

The Woolen Industry Dwindling Under Blighting Effects of Dingley Duties.

No important industry better illustrates the blighting effects of tariff taxation than that of the manufacture of woolens. The high duties placed upon its chief raw material, wool, in 1867, have been but slightly changed since, except for the three years, 1895, 1896 and 1897. The duties on raw wool have averaged about 44 per cent. since 1867, while the duties on manufactured wools have averaged over 80 per cent. During the last three years the duties on raw wool have averaged over 52 per cent., while the duties on manufactured wool have averaged 94 per cent. under the McKinley and Dingley bills. Surely, the virtues of protection must show in this government favored industry! What are the results?

The woolen industry has been declining rapidly, as compared with other important, though less favored, industries, and as compared with our increasing population. In the following table the increase in population is compared with the increase in the value of woolen manufactures and with the increase in cotton manufactures—the other important textile industry, and one whose chief raw material, cotton, is on the free list:

PER CENT. INCREASE SINCE—

Year.	Population.	Cotton Manufactures.	Woolen Manufactures.
1860	21.85	26.58	9.86
1860	50.21	76.58	24.76
1870	27.39	91.19	49.46

Thus, while the value of cotton manufactures has more than kept pace with our growing population, since 1880, and has almost kept pace, since 1870, the value of our woolen manufactures has not half kept pace with our population, since 1890 or 1880, and has barely half kept pace, since 1870. This means that the per capita value of woolen goods produced in this country is declining from year to year, is less now than in 1880 or 1890, and is 25 per cent. less than in 1870, the decline being from $5.17 per capita, in 1870, to $3.89, in 1900.

Could there be a more withering criticism of our protective system than is shown by the sad results of this industry?

The attempt to compel the people to pay nearly twice the normal price for woolens has resulted (1) in blighting the industry that was to be protected and built up; (2) in preventing the people from wearing warm, substantial clothing; and (3) in forcing them to wear shoddy and cotton clothes.

The doctors and undertakers who treat or bury the victims of improper clothing, are the real beneficiaries of taxed wool and woolens.

Nor do we get better results if we consider the effects of "protection" upon the prices of wool, or upon the wool growers. According to the census report, the average cost of scoured wool declined from 56.56 cents per pound, in 1880, to 45.46, in 1890, and to 37.71, in 1900. This same report tells us that the per capita consumption of wool declined from 8.52 pounds, in 1880, and 8.75, in 1890, to 5.97, in 1900. At this decline has occurred in spite of the fact that we imported more than three times as many pounds of raw wool, in 1900, as in 1870. Practically, then, all of the reduction in consumption is due to the reduced production of domestic wools. And here, again, the reduction in the home supply has occurred in spite of the great increase in the amount and proportion of coarse wools and of mohair (included with wool in the 1900 census), to the fine wools produced.

As a matter of fact, the number of sheep east of the Mississippi river and north of the Mason and Dixon's line, which included the fine wool section when high protection was first applied, is now less than one-half what it was in 1867, and their value is probably only one-fourth what it was then.

The fundamental facts in the woolen industry are (1) that many varieties of wools must be mixed to produce substantial, well-finished and marketable goods, and (2) that no one country produces all varieties of wool. These facts are recognized by nearly all governments except ours, which is the only one that taxes raw wool.

Protection having proven a flat failure, both as to the wool-grower and us to the woolen manufacturer, the republicans of the agricultural department at Washington are now advising the farmers to try to raise Angora goats as a substitute for sheep. They are telling New England farmers that these goats are just the things to reclaim the many abandoned farms in their territory. The republicans have already begun to call the hair of this goat (mohair) wool, and to include it with the genuine article in their statistics. But for this statistical fiction our wool figures would make a worse showing than they now do.

Will calling a goat a sheep make it one? How much longer can the republicans fool the farmers?

FACTS ABOUT THE TARIFF.

Convincing Evidence That Protection Adds to the Cost of Trusts.

By virtue of the extremely high tariff the protected trusts and combines are more extortionate than the Dingley bill. Where that law provides for the collection of over 50 per cent. on the average value of most of the necessities of life the trust tax on their output is in many cases over 100 per cent., which the government receives nothing.

The statistician of the bureau of labor of Massachusetts has figured that in the boot and shoe industry the average wages are $417.49 for workers per year, and allowing that two of each family are employed the amount that each family earns would be $983.00. The tariff tax on the expenditures of such a household is $13.75 and the tax that the trusts and combines extort is $92.25. Think of it, nearly seven times more to the trusts under the republican protective system than the United States government receives.

Congressman Littlefield, a republican, gave a list of 300 trusts with a capitalization of nearly $14,000,000,000 which was printed in the Congressional Record of February 26, 1903, to which aggregation each family in the United States contributed nearly $100 so that the trusts can get rich and the poor poorer.

It matters not how poor or wretched a man may be, the protective tariff demands and obtains a tax from him. The ways of the protectionists are peculiar. They pass laws to keep out foreign goods and then pass another law appropriating $5,000,000 for an exposition at St. Louis and invite foreigners to exhibit their productions side by side in competition with our domestic products. They have established a system of taxation, so remarkable that a tramp chewing his quid of tobacco pays his taxes with the rest of us and the poor man and the laborer pays in far greater proportion than the millionaire. And yet we are being told by the republican leaders that no steps must be taken by the coming congress to reform or revise this unequal tax. That the prosperity of the country is bound up with the protective tariff and we must "let well enough alone."

If the republican leaders were not in league with the trusts, combines and corporations, would they be continually advising the voters of the United States to "stand pat" on such an iniquitous and unjust system that makes the farmer, the working man and the people with small means pay enormously more in proportion to their incomes than the millionaire or the trusts or corporations? Is it any wonder to see vast fortunes accumulated by the few, who are protected, and the great majority continuing in straitened circumstances, with no hope of immediate improvement? Will you continue to vote to keep the republican party in power by electing congressmen and legislators who favor the continuation of the high protective system, or rather vote for democratic candidates who are pledged to reform the tariff so that the system of taxation shall be changed to "equal rights to all, special privileges to none?"

Miss Whittaker, a prominent club woman of Savannah, Ga., tells how she was entirely cured of ovarian troubles by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a Uterine Tonic and Regulator. I suffered for four years with irregularities and Uterine troubles. No one but those who have experienced this dreadful agony can form any idea of the physical and mental misery those endure who are thus afflicted. Your Vegetable Compound cured me within three months. I was fully restored to health and strength, and now my periods are regular and painless. What a blessing it is to be able to obtain such a remedy when so many doctors fail to help you. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is better than any doctor or medicine I ever had. Very truly yours, MISS EASY WHITTAKER, 604 30th St., W. Savannah, Ga." — $5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Followed Directions.

A clergyman in New Jersey hired a man to act in the capacity of coachman and gardener. One day the clergyman bought a bottle of horse ointment, and told the man to apply it to a lame horse according to the directions on the bottle.

About an hour afterward he went to the barn, and found Silas industriously dipping a spike into the liniment and then rubbing it against the horse's leg.

"What are you doing that for?" he asked.

The man looked up with a smile of assurance.

"Because," said he, "'twas what it said in the directions on the bottle; but it's slow work."

"You must have made a mistake," said the minister.

"I have not," answered the man, in an aggrieved tone. "It says here on the bottle: 'Apply with a large nail or tooth-brush,' and as I had no tooth-brush, I thought I'd better use this spike."

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Extra Session.

Washington, Nov. 24.—Senate—Panama and Cuba engaged the attention of the senate Monday to the exclusion of all other questions. Mr. Hale moved to reconsider the vote by which the Newlands joint resolution for the annexation of Cuba was referred to a committee and several speeches were made on the motion without disposing of it. Messrs. Hale, Lodge and Platt (Ct.) disavowed any desire on the part of the United States to acquire Cuba and expressed regret that the resolution had been introduced. Mr. Newlands defended the measure as presenting a natural solution of the problem of the relationship between the two countries. The Panama question came up in connection with the announcement of reorganization of senate committees, Mr. Morgan (dem., Ala.) being relieved from the chairmanship of the committee on inter-oceanic canals. Before the order went into effect Mr. Morgan took the floor and his speech proved to be a discussion of the entire canal question, with liberal criticisms of the president for his course. He had not concluded when the senate adjourned and will proceed Tuesday. Before adjournment the senate unanimously agreed to vote on the Cuban bill December 16th next.

Washington, Nov. 25.—Senate—The Panama canal question was again the leading topic under consideration by the senate Tuesday, and Mr. Morgan was again the speaker of the day. He continued his review of the history of the efforts to secure an isthmian canal and declared that to the president's ambition to secure the credit of a unique administration must be credited the favoritism manifested by him toward the Panama route. He asserted that President McKinley had favored the Nicaraguan line, and this statement was challenged by Mr. Hanna, who said he knew of his own personal knowledge that Mr. McKinley had urged the most careful investigation after he had learned that the Panama canal property was available. The question of committee assignments was again postponed as was also the motion to re-consider the vote on the Newlands joint resolution concerning the annexation of Cuba.

Washington, Nov. 26.—Senate—The senate Wednesday completed the appointments of committees for the 58th congress, adopted the motion providing for the reconsideration of the vote by which the Newlands joint resolution for the annexation of Cuba was referred to committee, and made the Cuban reciprocity bill the unfinished business. The first speech on the merits of the Cuban bill was made by Mr. Carmack (dem., Tenn.), who opposed the bill and said that nothing less than general tariff revision would give the relief needed. There was further debate between Mr. Hale (rep., Me.), Mr. Teller (dem., Col.), and Mr. Newlands on the Newlands resolution, in which Mr. Newlands further outlined his views and Mr. Hale deprecated all agitation on the subject. Mr. Teller declared that Cuba was in no sense a dependency of the United States. The senate adjourned until Friday.

Washington, Nov. 28.—House—The house met Friday and after the introduction of a few bills and a debate on the resolution to adjourn over, adjourned until Tuesday.

THE UTAH STRIKE.

Effort Made to Bring About a Conference Between the Contestants.

Salt Lake City, Nov. 28.—After a conference between Gov. Wells and Messrs. Kelliher and Evans, national organizers of the United Mine Workers, and Col. E. F. Holmes, president of the Commercial club, efforts were begun to bring about a conference between officials of the Utah Fuel Co. and their striking miners in Carbon county. Kelliher and Evans come as the personal representatives of President John Mitchell and in their talk with the governor brought out a new phase of the situation. They maintain that recognition of the union is a subordinate issue, and that 20 per cent increase in wages is the principal issue at stake. They also declared that the Utah miners are striking because of grievances of their own, and that they will go back to work when these are redressed regardless of what the Colorado miners do.

CURIOUS FOOD COMPOUND.

Alum, Lime and Sulphuric Acid for Baking Bread.

Housekeepers have recently been solicited by some of the grocers and by peddlers to try another kind of baking powder—"cheaper and just as good," as they say. This is another scheme of some baking powder manufacturer to get a new brand on the market by offering the grocer a large profit. Housekeepers are not usually much benefited by such changes. Alum baking powders are generally low priced, but they are well known to be detrimental to health. Large quantities of one of them were recently seized in New York, being found to be largely composed of sharp-pointed grains of ground flint and sulphuric acid!

Most of the so-called phosphate powders are mixed with alum. The manufacturer of a phosphate powder has patented the process of making the principal ingredient of the powder from bones digested with sulphuric acid.

Housekeepers do not want such mixtures in their food. They should never encourage peddlers nor admit testers or alleged experimenters in food within their doors, and when buying baking powder should get a brand well known to be made of cream of tartar, which is a healthful product of the grape.

Foreigners in Pennsylvania.

A great change has taken place in the population of the state since the days of Quaker rule and influence. In 1790 the population was mainly English-speaking and German; in 1900, a considerable number of Slavs and Italians were included in a much more mixed population. The foreign-born of the population of the state in 1900 was 985,250; and of these 310,400—nearly one-third of the whole number of the foreign-born—came from countries alien alike to the language and the political principles of the founders of the colony. They do not make a large proportion of the total population; but, being concentrated usually in small communities in the mining regions, they become a source of danger to the peace of the commonwealth out of proportion to their numbers, when incited to a revolt against government. This fact is offered by Mr. Addison B. Burk in the number of the "Story of the State," describing Pennsylvania, which he contributes to Pearson's, as one explanation of Pennsylvania's labor troubles.

Runaway Mule the Letters.

During recent maneuvers of ships of the British navy some of them called at Lagos, Portugal, for their mail. Soon it was discovered that something had gone wrong with it. One young sub-lieutenant received his sweetheart's letter in a condition of pulp, with the two top lines of each page still intact, while another officer, who knew that his heart's delight would not have failed him in the matter of letter writing, received nothing at all. The explanation, though hardly soluring, was simple enough. It seems that the last 20 miles of the Lagos mail journey is performed by mule diligence and a hungry mule had endeavored to satisfy the cravings of an empty stomach with the outpourings of loving hearts.

Desert Gems.

In 1889 a hunter in the northwest of New South Wales wounded a kangaroo. The animal went off through the mulga and the salt bush at a pace too fast for the hunter to follow, and soon was out of sight. The hunter was a bushman, and did not despair. He followed the blood trail, hopeful of a short search and a speedy bag. At one point of the pursuit it may be that the trail grew faint and necessitated a closer inspection. Anyway, the hunter stooped and picked up a piece of stone. This he examined. The red spot was not on it, it was in it. It was not blood that he saw. It was opal. Such was the beginning of the White Cliffs opal fields. —London Globe.

An Odd Tree.

The linaloe tree, which abounds in the states of Puebla and Guerrero, Mexico, yields an essence which is in large demand as the base for exquisite perfumes. The light yellow wood of the linaloe, which possesses a fragrance resembling that of a mixture of essences of lemon and jasmine, yields upon distillation a yellowish liquid, which is carefully husbanded. The processes employed by the workmen are primitive. The trees, cut into sticks of the size of cord wood, are reduced to chips at the stills.

Encouraging Authors.

Rudolf Von Gottschall, the German poet and writer, has been endowed with an annuity of 1,200 marks by the city of Leipsic. ELECTRIC "WHIP" A SUCCESS.

New Device Tested at Chicago and Balky Horses Cease to Be Stubborn.

An electric whip, the invention of J. A. Giles, of Elberon, Ga., was given a successful test at the stock yards at Chicago the other morning. Mr. Giles' device consists essentially of a small battery, which is placed in the wagon and from which wires run along the shafts to small copper plates fixed in the saddles of the harness. When it is desired to spur the animals to greater effort it is only necessary to touch a button and every horse feels the shock at the same instant.

It is Mr. Giles' idea that the invention will work perfectly on teams containing a number of horses when it is desired to have them all start at the same moment, and he contends that it will be found far superior to the ordinary whip, which must be applied to each animal separately.

The first test was made on a horse which the stable men had been unable to drive for a year. The effect of the "whip" was instantaneous, the horse being only too willing to travel. Other tests were equally successful.

GIVE UP WEED OR SCHOOL.

Kenosha Principal Says No Smokers Will Be Admitted to the Class-Rooms.

Kenosha (Wis.) school boys will no longer use cigarettes. The city principal of schools has issued an ironclad edict that all users of cigarettes must be expelled from the schools and not allowed to return until they could give evidence of reformation. The principal is backed by the board of education and it is apparent that the smokers will have to give up the weed or the school.

In defending his action Principal Hammill said he had discovered that almost half the school boys in the city were users of tobacco and that the state law against the sale of cigarettes was no bar to the boys securing paper pipes. The practice is growing at an alarming rate and the influence of the smokers on the other boys in the school is decidedly bad. Requests have been treated with scorn and for this reason the principal took the decisive step.

Several of the boys have announced that they will strike if the rule is enforced, but the principal has no fear of such action and all must quit smoking or quit school.

WANTED: IDEAL MINISTERS

Common Sense, No Hobbies, Conviction and Energy Are the Requirements.

The Methodist Recorder, the organ of the Methodist church, contained an advertisement as follows, written by President Gladden:

"This conference needs at least three or four more pastors for circuit work and any who can fill the following conditions will be welcomed, to wit: Must have small family, if any, and be able to furnish a horse and come to charge unassisted. No doubts as to call to ministry; not afraid of work, no hobbies, no place hunter, sound on doctrine of holiness as held by the Methodist Protestant church at large; must be less than 50 years of age. Willing to begin for nominal salary, $400 to $500, and probably a parsonage, a good, clear head, a warm, loving heart, and big feet well planted on the solid ground of common sense."

EXPENSIVE DEARS.

The Kind That Are Fond of Fine Clothes and Other Articles of Adornment.

The fish commission in San Francisco is frequently in receipt of ridiculous communications from people of the interior who have vague ideas of the functions of the bureau, says a local exchange. A retired merchant from one of the hill towns, desiring to devote his spare time to the study of zoology, sent the following letter of inquiry to Prof. Charles A. Vogelsang:

"I am interested in natural history and want to get hold of a dear for scientific purposes. Do you know where I can buy one? If so, get a good one and express it in a box c. o. d., together with a permit for keeping same. One of the common varieties will do. I will pay all expenses."

After pondering over the communication for some time Herr Vogelsang dispatched the following reply:

"Dears of all kinds are abundant in this neck of the woods, and if you are not particular as to color or breed I can easily comply with your request. Most of them would object, however, to being sent in a box by express. If you will agree to assume the cost of perpetual maintenance, I will promise to send on a dear who will be useful, both for scientific study and for housekeeping. I am not authorized by the laws of the state to issue such permits as you require, but you may get them from the county clerk. I await your reply with eagerness."

WATCH IN THE SPRING.

And the Spring in the Watch, But the Jeweler Didn't Grasp the Situation.

While picknicking with a crowd in the country the other day, says the Joplin (Mo.) Herald, Arch Shade accidentally dropped his watch in a spring, and quite naturally it has since ceased to run. He took the timepiece to a jeweler, and the following conversation ensued:

"Here's my watch; can you fix it?"

"What's the matter? Did you break the spring?"

"No; the spring broke the watch."

The man wondered, but proceeded to examine the injured article.

"The spring is broken," he finally announced.

"No wonder," said Arch; "I dropped the watch in it."

It began to dawn upon the jeweler that the young man was certainly insane, and just as he was glancing around for some avenue of escape Arch explained the situation."

Reads Like a Miracle.

Friar-point, Miss., Nov. 30.—The Butler case still continues to be the talk of the town. Mr. G. L. Butler, the father of the little boy, says:—

"The doctor said my boy had disease of the spinal cord, and treated him for two months, during which he got worse all the time. Finally, the doctor told me he did not know what was the trouble. The boy would wake up during the night and say that he was dying. He would be nervous and trembling and would want to run from the house, saying he saw ugly things which frightened him. After we had tried everything else, I read an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills as a cure for Nervous Troubles. I purchased some and used them until he had taken altogether eight boxes, when he was sound and well, with not a single symptom of the old trouble. This was some months ago, and I feel sure that he is permanently cured. We owe to Dodd's Kidney Pills all the credit for his restoration to good health."

"Is he fond of music?" "I think not. He enjoys his daughter's playing."—Cincinnati Time-Star.

GRATEFUL, HAPPY WOMEN

Miss Muriel Armitage.

Thank Pe-ru-na for The Recovery After Years of Suffering.

Miss Muriel Armitage, 36 Greenwood Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Organizer of the Royal Templars of Temperance, in a recent letter, says:

"I think that a woman naturally shrinks from making her troubles public, but restored health has meant so much to me that I feel for the sake of other suffering women it is my duty to tell what Peruna has done for me.

"I suffered for five years with uterine irregularities, which brought on hysteria and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Peruna, and promised good results if I would persist and take it regularly. I thought this was the least I could do, and so procured a bottle. I knew as soon as I began taking it that it was affecting me differently from anything I had used before, and so I kept on taking it. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used fifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful, happy woman to-day."—Miss Muriel Armitage.

Peruna cures catarrh of the pelvic organs with the same surety as it cures catarrh of the head. Peruna has become renowned as a positive cure for female ailments simply because the ailments are mostly due to catarrh. Catarrh is the cause of the trouble. Peruna cures the catarrh. The symptoms disappear.

Female Weakness is Pelvic Catarrh.

Always Half Sick are the Women Who Have Pelvic Catarrh.

Catarrh of any organ, if allowed to progress, will affect the whole body. Catarrh without nervousness is very rare, but pelvic catarrh and nervousness go hand in hand.

What is so distressing a sight as a poor half-sick, nervous woman, suffering from the many almost unbearable symptoms of pelvic catarrh? She does not consider herself ill enough to go to bed, but she is far from being able to do her work without the greatest exhaustion. This is a very common sight and is almost always due to pelvic catarrh.

It is worse than foolish for so many women to suffer year after year with a disease that can be permanently cured.

Peruna cures catarrh permanently. It cures old chronic cases as well as a slight attack, the only difference being in the length of time that it should be taken to effect a cure.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.
Wednesday, - - Dec. 2, 1903.
W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

The State Election Commission met Monday, and awarded to Dr. Godfrey Hunter the certificate of election to Congress in the Eleventh district.

A GREAT deal will be said about the school book bill in the next Legislature. It was a measure that was advocated by the Democrats during the last campaign.

WHY would not a tobacco factory in Burlington pay good interest on the investment. It is not meant by a tobacco factory a plant that would cost a million dollars.

GOV. BECKHAM will be inaugurated next Tuesday, and Frankfort is making arrangements for the biggest day in the history of the city. Everything is to be done in the grandest style.

LEXINGTON is considering a proposition to have the State Fair permanently located there. The fair will soon play out if it does not secure a permanent location at some central point.

The amount the government pays for carrying the mails and for rent or postal cars comes very near paying the entire cost of running the passenger trains which carry United States mail.

Grover Cleveland has written a letter to the editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, in which he says that his determination not to again become the nominee of his party for the presidency "is unalterable and conclusive."

The State Board of Valuation and Assessment fixed the franchise assessment of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company for this year at $8,185,905 which means taxes to the State in the sum of $40,929.22.

The consumers of oil should make ready for another hold-up. The Standard Oil dividends this year are 1 per cent below last year's dividends, and you know Mr. Rockefeller is too poor to stand such a slump.

The American hen is doing her best to get to the top of the statistical tables. She now stands higher than the gold mines as a money producer. So every farmer can now own his own gold mine.—Birmingham Register.

THE election contests that were threatened in Louisville by the defeated candidates immediately after the election, have been abandoned, the excuse given for that course being the lack of funds necessary to carry on the contests.

FRANKFORT will make a strong pull with the next General Assembly for an appropriation with which to erect a new capitol. The matter of State indebtedness can be no longer used in opposition to the measure, as the State is out of debt.

The official story of postal graft has been given to the public by means of a brief of the report of Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow. The document contains a full summary of the frauds, of the illicit gains by the grafters, and the probable loss to the Government through their operations.

THE indications are that the recent special Congressional election in the Eleventh District will present Congress with a triangular contest for the place—White claiming that the name of neither Edwards nor Hunter was legally on the ballot, while they each charge frauds on the part of the friends of the other.

Now that ex-President Cleveland has declared emphatically that he will not be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency, nor will he accept the nomination if tendered him, let Mr. Bryan follow his example, and there will be some hope of the Democrats getting together and accomplish something in the next national campaign.

S. H. Osborn and his son, David Osborn, were killed, and William Garner and John Bennett, their guests, were probably fatally wounded as they sat around the fireside of the Osborn home in Hart county Sunday night. The first shots were fired through a crack in the wall of the house. Custer Gardner was arrested at Elizabethtown, charged with the crime.

Tobacco Growers' Meeting.

UNION, Ky., Nov. 30, 1903.

At a meeting of the Board of Control for the Tobacco Growers' Association in Boone County, called for the purpose of organizing and discussing place to receive, and other important matters connected with the handling of the crop, the following officers were elected: N. S. Walton, president, and Joe W. Cleek, secretary. Adjourned to meet at Burlington on Dec. 7th.

H. D. BRADY, Sec. p. t.

A meeting of all Tobacco growers in Boone county, and all others in favor of the Association is hereby called for Monday, December 7th, at Burlington, at 10 o'clock a. m. Good speakers have agreed to be present, and we should be glad to have the growers out in full force and make it the greatest meeting of all that have been held in the county. Business of great importance will be transacted on that occasion.

L. H. VOSHELL, Co. Chmn.

Clifford E. Nadaud, who about a year ago made a game race for the Democratic Congressional nomination against D. Linn Gooch has announced his intention of again going after the Democratic standard.

This adds another to the growing list of candidates for the honor. Arthur Goebel and Judge G. G. Perkins are candidates, and it is presumed Congressman Gooch will try to succeed himself. There is also some talk of Joe Rhinock making another try for the nomination, and of his old opponent, former Congressman Albert Berry, doing the same thing.

Whether there will be any more candidates depends upon the manner of making the nomination. If the party authorities decide to have a delegate convention it is predicted that every county in the district will present the name of at least one "favorite son," and some counties will present several. If a primary is held it is not thought there will be any new announcements.

Nadaud is going into the fight with the same vim and vigor that he displayed when he ran against Gooch in what was at that time a hopeless race. He is much better known in the district now than he was before, and in some ways is better known than any of his probable opponents, except Berry.

During the late campaign he made speeches all through his district in support of the State ticket, and at several big meetings introduced Governor Beckham.

"I shall start in at once hustling for votes," said Nadaud, "and shall keep it up until a nomination is made. They may beat me again but they can't always beat me. I can always make a living out of my business and save enough to make an honest race every two years.

"It is my honest and legitimate ambition to go to Congress, and I shall run year after year until I get the prize. If I go there and find that I am of little good to my constituents they will not have to kick me out. I won't seek a renomination."

IT is claimed that since 1900 the increase in the cost for carrying the mail on what is styled the "star route service" has been growing at a tremendous rate and that under this policy millions of dollars have been wasted by the government. The Washington correspondent for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch says that "nearly $7,000,000 is being paid out in excess of all former rates of pay for such service notwithstanding the rural free delivery which ought to have lessened the cost." This correspondent explains that "up to July, 1901, bidding for small service had been open to all persons in ever section of the United States and the large savings that have been made have resulted from the system of competition. W. S. Shallenberger, second assistant postmaster general, was led by George F. Stone, chief clerk, to issue an order on February 13, 1900, that, hereafter, no proposal for carrying the mails on 'star routes' would be considered unless the person making the proposal resided at some place satisfactory to the second assistant postmaster general. The idea was that the bidder should reside in the district of his contract. Consequently competition became no longer possible, and the system that had prevailed from the organization of the department was abolished. From that, the increase in cost began."

Bailey's Mill, Franklin county, has the distinguished honor of being the banner Democratic precinct of the State. Every one of the 217 votes in this precinct were cast for the Democratic ticket. Even the Republican election officers, seeing the good works of those about them, were constrained to forsake their wicked ways and follow in the paths of the righteous.—Franklin Favorite.

Thirty-two days ago Monday a Jersey cow belonging to Mr. Bowen Henry, which was being kept on the farm of Mr. Clint Shields, was missed, and it was thought that she had either strayed or been stolen. Monday evening Mr. Shields stopped to look at an overturned straw rick in his field, and seeing a movement in the rick tore it away, and there was Mrs. Cow. She was very poor, having eaten nothing but dry wheat straw for the time mentioned, and never having tasted water the whole time. She would have met death from suffocation had it not been for a small opening in the rick which admitted the air.—Journal.

As usual, a large number of ballots at the recent election in Ohio were thrown out on accouut of being improperly marked or other informalities. There were enough of the rejected votes to swing the state in a close election, if the greater number of them were intended to be cast on one side. The natural presumption is that these imperfect ballots were proportionately distributed among the parties. No difference resulted in the state candidates, though in close contests for county offices these mistakes may have defeated candidates for whom the majority of legal electors tried to vote. Our present election system is cumbersome and hard to understand. Election "sharps" boast that the Australian ballot can be beaten without much trouble. An intelligent and honest revision of the election laws, without regard to party interests, is one of the great duties of the General Assembly which will enter upon its official life in January next. The Australian ballot has been tinkered so much that it is more complicated than it was when it was originally adopted over a dozen years ago.—Daily Enquirer.

Four Generations Ate of one Turkey.

A Handsome Room it is Now.

When circuit court convenes Monday week the public will see that a vast change has been made in the circuit court room since last term of that court. The arch over the Judge's stand has been repaired, a steel ceiling has been put in and painted a dark green, while the walls have been papered with paper to correspond with the color of the ceiling. A wonderful change has been made in the appearance of the room, while it is said its acoustic properties have been improved very much. The work has been done under the supervision of County Judge Cason and County Attorney Castleman.

A Young Man Badly Hurt.

John Ryle, of McVille, who was hurt a few days ago by a limb from a falling tree flying back and striking him on the head, is getting along nicely. At first it was thought his injuries would prove fatal. There were two or three other persons with Ryle at the time he was hurt, and it is a wonder that they were not all killed as a perfect shower of broken limbs was thrown back around them by a tree that was struck by the one that was falling. The accident occurred in the Kelly woods on Middle creek, and near the spot where John Pope was killed about 43 years ago, in February, by a limb that was blown from a tree one very windy day.

A Blaze Discovered Just in Time.

As John P. Utz, of Limaburg, was leaving Burlington last Thursday about 2 o'clock, he chanced to notice that the house occupied by Charles Birkle, and belonging to James M. Barlow, of Gunpowder neighborhood, was on fire. He gave the alarm, and the bucket brigade responded promptly, and succeeded in putting the fire out before the damage amounted to more than the destruction of a few shingles. The fire was caused by a spark from a flue falling on the roof. Mrs. Birkle was at home alone, and was very much alarmed when told that the house was on fire. Mr. Birkle and his brother, Theodore, were at work in the blacksmith shop a square from the house, and the fire was about extinguished before they knew that there was anything exciting in progress at home. Had Mr. Utz not seen the fire, which was merely an accident, it is very likely the house would have been destroyed, as it is located some distance from the center of the town.

A Novel Suit.

There was filed Saturday a very curious suit in the Grant Circuit Court Clerk's office. Wm. Stroud has been running a licensed saloon in Williamstown for several years and has made money out of the business. By some means there has been a slip of about three months in the dates for the beginning and expiration of his State and town licenses, so that his last State license expired Nov. 14, 1903, while his last town license will not expire till Feb. 5, 1904.

Since these last licenses were granted both the town and county have "gone dry" by good majorities, and there can be no more licenses issued in the regular way. On Nov. 14th, Mr. Stroud made application to the County Clerk, R. L. Kinman, for State licenses from that date to Feb 5, when his town license would expire. The Clerk declined, under the law, to grant this limited license, and thereupon Mr. Stroud applied for a regular annual license and tendered the full amount of the fee for the same, which the Clerk, because of the Local Option vote, already of record in his office, also refused, and the suit filed is for a mandamus, compelling him to accept the fee and issue the license.—Williamstown Courier.

Mr. Stroud and his attorney, Hon. M. D. Gray, and Mr. Kinman and his attorneys, Hons. W. W. Dickerson and C. C. Cram, came to Burlington, last Wednesday, and the mandamus was heard by Judge Lassing, who decided that the county clerk, Mr. Kinman, should issue to Mr. Stroud a State license as had been applied for by him.

A Sudden Death.

Thanksgiving day was one of gloom in the Francesville neighborhood, made so by the very sudden death of Mrs. Thomas Watts, of heart disease, at her home that morning. Mrs. Watts was sick but a very few minutes, and her death was a terrific shock to her family by whom she was surrounded. Mrs. Watts had, for some time complained of pains in the region of her heart, but they were not considered of a serious nature. She was a daughter of Allen Goodridge, of Francesville, and was loved and respected by all.

A Wonder Stone.

T. E. Livezey, 1889, when in Germany, came across a stone, which when properly prepared, removes corns and bunions, also is an excellent article for ladies to use for manicure purposes. He has them prepared under the direction of a noted chemist in Berlin, Germany. The name of the stone is a Bimstein. By using it you do not run the risk of blood poisoning as you do in cutting a corn, or of blistering your toe with a so-called corn salve. Dr. James Grant of Petersburg, recommends it. This is not an advertisement. The editor used it and found so much relief he wishes to let his readers, who suffer with corns, know how to get relief. Mr. Livezey's address is Newport Ky., and the price is 25 cents. If not satisfactory he says he will return money and postage.

She was buried at Big Bone church cemetery, in the presence of a large concourse of friends and relatives, the funeral being in charge of John Allison, of Covington. Besides the aged husband, Mrs. Mitchell left two sons and three daughters, who have the sympathy of all in their sore bereavement.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucus surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

AN AGED CRANK.

He Made His Way to the President's Side and Handed Him a Letter.

New York, Nov. 28.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt Friday attended the funeral of the president's uncle, James King Gracie. Just as the services were concluded at the Church of the Holy Communion Arthur Deming, 65, stepped before the president and handed him a letter, saying: "Please read this on your way out."

By the time the president threw the letter down the astonished detectives had grabbed the man, and he was hustled to police headquarters.

Deming carried a can containing charcoal. Deming said it was medicated and would cure all ills. He said that he had written to Emperor William and his doctors about it, but received no reply, and he thought to get Mrs. Roosevelt interested, that she might send it to the emperor.

After completing an investigation into the manner in which Deming gained entrance into the church and reached the side of the president, Police Commissioner Greene announced Friday night that he was not satisfied with the explanation made by the police who were in charge at the church and that he would place Capt. Cotrell on trial on charges of failing to make proper arrangements. Three detectives and two policemen who were on guard at the church will also be placed on trial.

San Francisco, Nov. 28.—Arthur P. Deming, who was arrested in New York while trying to hand a letter to the president, is well known in this city, and is regarded here as harmless. Several years ago he was a familiar figure on the streets where he sold powdered charcoal as a remedy for indigestion.

TORPEDO BOAT FLOTILLA.

It Will Start on a Cruise From Hampton Roads to Charleston, S. C.

Washington, Nov. 28.—Unwilling that the torpedo boat flotilla shall attempt the trip to the Asiatic station until each boat has been given a thorough trial in a sea way, Secretary Moody has decided to order the torpedo flotilla on a cruise from Hampton Roads to Charleston, S. C. The board of inspection and survey, of which Capt. Train is president, will accompany the flotilla that they make a report to the secretary based on their personal observation of the conduct of the boats. If the test cruise is satisfactory the board will leave the flotilla at Charleston and return to Washington, the flotilla proceeding on to Key West and thence to Culebra, whence they will sail later for the Asiatic station by way of the Mediterranean. The flotilla is commanded by Lieut. Floyd H. Chandler and consists of the destroyers Decatur, Bainbridge, Barry, Chauncey and Dale.

It Shall Consist of Five Members to Be Appointed By the President.

The new commission is to consist of five members to be appointed by the president from civil war veterans and two of them from the confederate army. A salary of $3,000 for each commissioner is provided. He also introduced a bill restoring the army canteen. The bill provides that fermented malt beverages and light wines, but no ardent spirits, may be sold in post exchanges and on transports under regulations to be prescribed by the secretary of war.

An Engineer Rescued Two Boys From Drowning in the Lake.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 28.—Engineer J. Cleveland, of a Chicago passenger train on the Milwaukee road, rescued two boys from drowning in Lake Monona. THE CANAL TREATY.

It Will Be Signed as Soon as Received by the Junta.

The Panama Minister Is Authorized to Inform the United States Government of That Fact—Great Rejoicing on the Isthmus.

Panama, Nov. 27.—The junta, composed of Jose Augustin Arango, Tomasorian, and Manuel Espinosa, held a meeting at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, all the ministers of state and councillors being present, and agreed unanimously to ratify the canal treaty so soon as it is received here and authorize Minister Bunau Varilla officially to communicate the junta's decision to the United States government.

The decision of the junta was received with great joy throughout the isthmus without distinction of parties or classes. Rr. Adms. Walker and Glass have been informed of the action taken by the junta.

Washington, Nov. 27.—Official confirmation of the determination of the Panama junta to ratify the Hay-Bunau Varilla Panama canal treaty was received by Minister Varilla at 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The state department being closed Thursday, Mr. Varilla communicated the news informally to Mr. Loomis, who is acting secretary in the absence of Mr. Hay. The ministers dispatch is as follows:

"Panama, Nov. 26.—Varilla, minister plenipotentiary of the republic of Panama, Washington: In view of the approbation given by the delegates, Amador and Boyd (the commissioners who were sent by the government of Panama to confer with Mr. Varilla) to the Hay-Bunau treaty, you are authorized to notify officially the government of the United States that as soon as the document is received by the junta of the government of the republic of Panama, it will be ratified and signed. Signed J. A. Arango, Tomas Arias, Manuel Espinosa. Countersigned by the minister of foreign relations, De La Espriila."

Minister Varilla calls special attention to the fact that the message received by him is signed not only by the members of the junta, but also by the minister of foreign relations, which he says gives the communication the character of a formal decree of the government.

The action taken by the Panama junta doubtless is due in part at least to the urgent representations of Minister Varilla that prompt steps be taken with a view to the ratification of the treaty as soon as it shall reach Panama. Last Saturday the minister cabled a long synopsis of the treaty to Panama. Since that time he has been in communication with the government on the subject.

The minister recounted with a great deal of gratification Thursday night the rapid progress of events since the birth of the new republic of Panama three weeks ago, ending Thursday with the declaration of the junta to ratify the Panama canal treaty.

IN A BLINDING SNOW STORM.

Carlisle Indians Defeated the Northwestern University.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—Carlisle Indians in Thursday's game with Northwestern university demonstrated the superiority of the football that has made the Red men formidable gridiron warriors in the east, by defeating the Purple 28 to 0. At times during the one-sided contest snow fell in such blinding swirls that the gridiron and players were concealed from the 3,000 enthusiasts who gathered to root impartially for the Evanston eleven and the popular Indians. Coach McCormick's eleven was materially weakened by the absence of Guard Phillips from the line. The old Carlisle linemen refused to play against his former colleagues. Watching the contest from the stand, Phillips said that had the field been free from snow, Carlisle's speedy backs would have doubled the score.

CANNED SARDINES.

Four Persons Who Partook of Them Are Dead.

Winamac, Ind., Nov. 28.—There is intense excitement among the citizens of the village of Pulaski over developments surrounding the poisoning of the Miller and Johns families. Hard, white specks that resemble granulated sand have been found mixed with vinegar and mustard of the canned sardines eaten by the Millers and Johns.

Friday four burial caskets stood side by side in the home of the Millers, containing the remains of Jacob Miller, Frank and Kate Miller, husband and wife, and her father, John Johns. They had eaten from a can of mixed vinegar, mustard and sardines. Later the two Miller brothers complained of strange blindness, and retired to their rooms. Early Thursday morning they died from strangulation. Later Mrs. Kate Miller and her father were attacked in a similar manner, and they died. Three of the Miller children rejected the sardines on account of a bitter taste.

Public opinion is divided as to the cause of the deaths. Physicians state that it was from ptomaine poison; others claim it was poisoning caused by muriatic acid mixing with the vinegar and mustard during the tinner's process of scaling the can. Examination of the can and contents show the inside of the can to be rust eaten, and stony white, hard specks, similar to fine sand, were found. The sardines appear to have been decayed before they were put into the box and sealed.

Jacob Miller some time ago made a will bequeathing his portion of farm lands to his brother's children, and Mrs. Kate Miller had done likewise for her children.

DOUBLE CONSCIOUSNESS.

A Strange Case Brought to Notice in Denver Through a Suit.

Denver, Col., Nov. 28.—What is pronounced by physicians a case of double consciousness has been brought to public notice through a suit filed by David Charters against the city for $15,000 for injuries to his head sustained by falling on a defective sidewalk. After the accident, which occurred on December 30, 1901, Charters proclaimed himself "Daniel the Prophet," and wrote a book entitled "Daniel's Vision and Mission; Is Heaven Real; Is Hell Real?" He preached on the streets and established a prosperous mission.

Charters a few weeks ago fully recovered from his injury and then declared that the interval since the accident was a blank to him. He had no knowledge of having written a book. After reading the book he pronounced its contents idiotic.

A CAN OF MILK.

Experts Say That It Developed the Typhoid In Williams College.

Williamstown, Mass., Nov. 28.—The experts engaged by President Henry Hopkins, of Williams college, have determined to their satisfaction that the source of typhoid which recently developed among the students and at one time threatened to assume the form of a serious epidemic, was a can of milk. The theory is that the milk was cooled in impure water and that a little of the infected water accidentally got into the milk.

BANDITS CAPTURED.

They Were Wanted For the Chicago Car Barn Murder.

It Is Alleged They Committed Nine Murders, Wounding Five Men and a Long Series of Robberies Are Charged to Them.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Chained wrist to wrist, their hair matted with dried blood, their clothing covered with dust and dirt—two beardless boys, Peter Neidermeier and Harvey Van Dine, sat Friday night in the presence of Mayor Harrison and Chief of Police O'Neill calmly confessing to their share in a three months' career of crime which has included nine murders, the wounding of five other men, and a long series of robberies. The two young bandits, neither of whom is over 21 years old, together with their companion, Emil Doeskle, who is no older, were captured near Liverpool, Ind., Friday after a fight in which they battled against policemen, railroad detectives, railroad laborers and farmers. One man was killed, another fatally wounded and all three of the young bandits were wounded, but not seriously.

The three men were wanted by the police for complicity in the murders at the car barns of the Chicago City Railway Co. on August 30, when two men were killed, a third badly wounded and $2,250 stolen from the company.

Gustave Marx, who last Saturday night murdered Officer John Quinn when the policeman endeavored to place him under arrest, confessed after his capture that he, in company with the three men, had committed the crimes at the car barns. The hunt for Van Dine, Niedermeier and Doeskle has been hot ever since.

Word was brought to the police Thursday night by T. S. Reichers, a school teacher near Clark Station, Ind., that three men answering the description of those wanted for the car barn murders were living in the dugout. The police sent only eight men, Detectives Zimmer, DeRoche, Qualey, Gleason, Sheehan, Driscoll, Baumer and Hughes to Indiana, Sheehan being placed in charge of the squad. The men reached the dugout at about 3 o'clock, guided by Reichers. As soon as they were in sight of the place the officers advanced in a circle upon the dugout where the three robbers were supposed to be concealed.

Driscoll picked up a chunk of wood and hurled it at the dugout. Instantly there was a flash, a report and Driscoll fell in a heap, shot through the abdomen. One of his fellow officers stopped to raise him, and the other six opened fire on the dugout, from which the shots were now coming thick and fast. While the fire was at its hottest, Van Dine and Doeskle rushed out, followed a few minutes later by Niedermeier. The latter ran to the tracks of the Michigan Central railroad and, throwing himself flat on the roadbed, steadied his arm on the rail as he kept up a rapid fire with three revolvers. Doeskle ran for the brush, but Van Dine retreated slowly, although the air was filled with bullets and the snow at his feet was kicked up by them. He is a splendid marksman, and, catching sight of Detective Zimmer, who was behind a tree, he fired. Zimmer went down with a bullet in the head. As he fell, Van Dine fired again and the second bullet went through Zimmer's arm.

Doeskle had by this time disappeared and Van Dine and Niedermeier, placing their revolvers in their pockets, made a run for freedom. The detectives fired constantly, but the bandits escaped. After running about a mile across country, they came to the tracks of the Pennsylvania railroad. A switch engine with a train of cars was close at hand, and, hurrying up to it, they ordered Brakeman Sovea to uncouple the train from the locomotive. He refused and attempted to take Niedermeier's revolver from him. The latter instantly sent a bullet through the brakeman's brain, laying him dead in the snow. Springing past Sovea's body, the bandits mounted the locomotive with revolvers in hand and ordered the engineer to move out in a hurry, which he did, going in the direction of Liverpool, Ind. After two miles had been covered, the men ordered the engineer to slow down and leaping to the ground, disappeared in the woods. After the train had carried the men away, the detectives rushed to the nearest telegraph station and wired to Chief Police O'Neill asking that men be sent out with rifles.

Arriving at the place they were soon close on the fugitive's heels. The men were seen as they dodged about in the sand dunes and the farmers that had gathered, most of whom were armed with double-barreled shotguns, opened fire on them. Niedermeier received a charge full in the head and the blood streamed down his face and into his eyes, blinding him so that he could hardly see.

A shot grazed Van Dine's head, carrying off some of his hair and his wounded leg was weakened. The men then surrendered.

The city was divided into districts with a member of the general committee in charge to direct the work and one member will be on duty at the council chamber night and day to receive reports.

Reports to the committee Sunday night shows 50 new cases Sunday and three deaths. As nearly as the committee can estimate the number of cases since the disease first developed is 1,550. Of this number at least 28 have died. From now on accurate lists of cases and deaths will be kept by the committee.

Responses to appeals for aid in the way of nurses and money have been prompt and liberal. Ten nurses came in Sunday from Pittsburg and more are to follow. Offers of nurses from New Castle and Cleveland and financial aid from Philadelphia and Pittsburg have been accepted by the committee. Nurses from outside towns will be required to bring credentials from their hospitals.

All druggists in the city will fill prescriptions at cost and the undertakers have tendered the use of their ambulances free. Temporary hospitals have been established and they are rapidly being filled with patients.

GEN. RAFEIL REYES.

The Colombian Peace Commissioner in Washington.

The Colombian Government Will Give a Canal Route Free to the United States if Panama Will Return to the Fold.

Washington, Nov. 30.—Gen. Rafeil Reyes, the Colombian peace commissioner, and his colleagues continued their conferences Sunday with Dr. Tomas Herran, the Colombian charge d'affaires at Washington regarding the Panama canal treaty and affairs on the isthmus. As a preliminary to any action whatever Gen. Reyes is familiarizing himself thoroughly with every feature of the isthmian question about which Dr. Herran is able to give him information. There are many antecedent circumstances bearing on the negotiation of the defunct Hay-Herran convention of which it is desirable that Gen. Reyes shall have knowledge before he proceeds with his mission. There also are other features of the situation which have developed since the general left Bogota, which it is desirable shall be fully discussed with Dr. Herran as a preliminary to mapping out a plan of proceedure. All these matters are being gone over very carefully by Gen. Reyes and Dr. Herran and it is expected several days will elapse before any developments take place.

"No plan as yet has been mapped out governing the mission of Gen. Reyes," said Dr. Herran Sunday night, "and we have no statement as yet to make to the public."

At the first opportunity Dr. Herran will present Gen. Reyes to Secretary Hay. At this meeting, it is expected there will be an informal discussion of the general's mission, the results of which in a measure at least will determine his future course.

Within the next few days Gen. Reyes hopes to see all the Latin-American diplomats, to whom he will explain his mission and invite their co-operation in obtaining from the United States satisfactory terms.

That the republic of Colombia grant to the United States all the concessions provided for in the Hay-Herran treaty, but absolutely free of cost, is the proposition which Gen. Reyes brings for the consideration of the officials in Washington.

PRODUCTS OF A STATE

Are Foundations of Wealth, But Industries Are the

SINEWS OF FINANCIAL STRENGTH.

Secretary Peyton N. Clarke Gives an Interesting Interview on the Benefits That Will Come From the Adoption of the Constitutional Amendment in November.

Himself always in the front rank when contests are waged for State development, Mr. Peyton N. Clarke of Louisville was naturally turned to by the Constitutional Amendment Committee for its Secretary. He has unselfishly devoted much of his time to all propositions of this kind and is easily one of the best posted citizens of the State on the Constitutional Amendment. The following review of the benefits to accrue was furnished by him for our readers:

"You will understand, of course, that the proposed Amendment will not interfere in any manner with the present method of assessing real estate and personal property for State and county purposes. All towns and cities will continue as heretofore to pay taxes for State and county purposes under the present law, and the proposed Amendment, if adopted, will make it possible for any town or city in the State to secure an act of the Legislature, providing that in raising revenues for strictly local purposes, towns and cities of any class may substitute for the present ad valorem system, such licenses, franchises, and excise laws, in subjecting personal property to its fair share of the expenses of such towns and cities as may take advantage of the Amendment when adopted.

"It would seem to be a perfectly fair proposition to allow the towns and cities in the State to raise their revenue for strictly local purposes in any manner they see fit, and no fair-minded person could reasonably object to allowing them this privilege, but the main object and purpose of the Amendment is of far greater moment and interest to every citizen in the State, whether he is a resident of a town or city or resides in the country districts.

"The products of a State are its foundation of wealth, but its industries are the sinews of its financial strength. Without industries, which afford markets, in proximity to the products, the producers are badly handicapped, and if compelled to send their products to distant markets, where there is greater competition and increased expenses, as well as numerous losses, it is perfectly plain that the producer must suffer.

"Now, in order to secure more industries, which means more employes and more mouths to feed, we must encourage the establishment of new enterprises, and at the same time, by increasing the capacity of those already established, secure an ample home market for our home products.

"Other States have seen the wisdom of this policy and Kentuckians should not be allowed to lag behind them. Our geographical position and enormous undeveloped wealth should enable us to occupy a place in the front ranks of industrial development and the future welfare and prosperity of the State can be settled in a great measure by the adoption of the Constitutional amendment. Manufacturers and other industries cannot be induced to locate in Kentucky while our taxes on such industries are greater than in other States with which we have to compete. Therefore, in order to secure the benefits, our position and advantages entitle us to, we must be able to offer the same inducements as are offered by our neighbors.

"While the proposed Amendment will not change in any manner the present method of assessing real estate for State and county taxes, it must not be concluded that it will not greatly benefit the entire State.

"It is confidently believed that the new law will enable the assessors to disclose a vast amount of property not at present in reach of the assessors, and if this result should follow, there would be an opportunity for an immediate and radical reduction in the tax rate for State and county purposes by which every taxpayer in the State would be directly benefited. The main advantage would be in the inducement to new industries to locate in our midst, new capital to seek investment in our farms, mines and rich timber lands, and by thus increasing our wealth and importance the result would invariably follow of a reduction in the tax rate. It is a very simple proposition that the more property to be taxed, the lower the rate necessary to secure the same revenue.

"A recent change in the Kentucky incorporation law has kept vast sums of money in our State which before the change referred to, went to other States, and the numerous enterprises now being incorporated in Kentucky will continue to add to its revenues for all time to come, and if anyone has been damaged in any way by the change there has been no discovery of the fact.

"If Kentucky could gain so much by a simple change in the statutes, why should she not gain a great deal more by a change in the revenue law as proposed in the Amendment to be voted on in November?

"This is a grave proposition and deserves the most intelligent thought and action of our citizens."

THE HOME SAVINGS BANK 6TH & VINE STS. CINCINNATI

Col. G. C. Graddy, Deputy Internal Revenue Collector at Petersburg, was a guest at the Boone House, last Saturday night and Sunday. The Colonel says he is a bigger man now than before was in his life—weighing one pound more. He was somewhat exercised over the treatment he received at the hands of some of his townsmen a few days ago. They were removing a wall in a very old ice house, and in the wall, enclosed in an earthen jar, was found a quart bottle nearly full of whisky, which was pronounced neither the Colonel being called upon to assist. He says the oldest inhabitant has no recollection as to when the ice house in which the whisky was found was built, but they all agree that the whisky was from 45 to 50 years old. No wonder the Colonel is sorry he was not permitted to taste it.

Dr. Lewis Crisler was a very badly frightened man, last Thursday when the first cry of fire was heard on the street. His wife and children were not at home that day, and before he left the house after eating his dinner, he built a fire in the grate that soon developed into dangerous proportions. He made it as safe as he could, but was apprehensive of danger when he left it, so when the alarm was turned in and he saw the crowd running in the direction of his residence, he gave one bound and was out of the store and gone before you could say "scat." That was over the doctor was delighted at being disappointed.

The snow appears to have the staying quality.

Dec. 4.—Ransom Ryle and wife were guests of Will Sebree and wife, last Saturday night and Sunday.

Born, Nov. 29th, a son to Jesse Loud en and wife, of Middle creek.

Miss Julia Dinsmore returned Thursday, from her visit to New York City.

Charley Clore, of Bellevue, received a message from Newport, Thursday, that Ed Hauser and wife are sick.

H. P. Parsons, of Middle creek, received by letter last Sunday, the sad news of the death of his brother in-law, William Johnson, near Milan, Texas.

Bob Kite spent a few days this week hunting with Richard Marshall, on Middle creek. We have an idea that Bob's aim was to kill two birds with one stone.

The firing of the cannon and whistling of a boat, last Tuesday night, were not signals of distress, as many supposed. The boat was the Cincinnati, and was in charge of Capt. Payton, and Miss Mary Green, an accomplished young lady, and only daughter of Green, the popular merchant of Rising Sun, were married that evening, and the crew was serenading them.

Mrs. Emma Kelly went to Florence, Ind., last Sunday, to visit her sister, and on Wednesday she sent a telephone message to her father, Tom Marshall, that one of his grandchildren was not expected to live. Mr. Marshall started for Florence as soon as he received the message. This leaves Mr. Parsons alone without wife or cook.

Miss Maud Scott entertained Rev. Darnell, of Paris, from Saturday evening until Tuesday evening. He and Wilber Scott went hunting Monday, and judging from the report of hunt, Bro. Darnell is more of a success shooting Gospel shots at sinners than he is in shooting feeden ones at rabbits. Full particulars of the hunt on the part of Bro. Darnell is too laughable to tell.

Jack Koons shot and killed a fox last Monday. There are two reports in regard to the killing: One, that the fox killed was one the Bellevue sports were chasing, and that Jerry Cook's dog, Neverbeaten, was close at its heels, when it was shot. The other, that it was not the one they were chasing, but one that Jack jumped up in a patch of briars. The latter we think is the true story.

As Woodie Sullivan went home from the Commissary, Tuesday, he saw an enormous hawk in the road opposite Mr. Lillard's house. He went to Mr. Lillard's and got his gun, but the hawk flew before he got within gun shot, but he followed it from tree to tree until he got a shot and killed it. Mr. Lillard said it was the largest one he ever saw. Mr. Lillard is very glad it is out of the way, and Woodie feels proud that he killed it.

Last Wednesday, while being shaved at Clark's barber shop in Burlington, he was putting on the finishing touches, which he knows so well how, he remarked, "you have the smoothest face, and fairest complexion of any man I shave." We replied, "taking age in consideration." He said "I except none, old nor young; there is not an age wrinkle on your face, and it is soft and white. Why is it." Being in a hurry at the time we promised to give him the secret in the next issue of the RECORDER, and here it is: We never allow ourself to fret and worry and always look on the bright side of things. The man or woman that is always in a fret and worry, though young, will soon begin to look old and wrinkled, their face becomes rough, hard and dark, and not only this, they make themselves and all around them, unhappy and miserable. For our face and complexion we use a decoction of cheerfulness, pleasant smiles, kind and pleasant words, and kind acts. This is the best and only reliable wrinkle exterminator known.

A Sunday School teacher anxious to make a display of her class had the questions to her class answered so that there might be no mistake in the answers. The little boy at the head of the class was to be asked, "who made you?" The answer was to be of course, God. The question to the next was, "who was the strongest man? the reply to be, "Sampson." On the day of the exhibition the teacher arranged the class and was serenely confident when the first question was put, and to her consternation when the first scholar was asked who made you, promptly replied, Sampson Oh, no, said the teacher, God made you. But the youngster held out for Sampson; the boy next to him came to the rescue with, "I say teacher, the little boy God made isn't here."

How to Prevent Croup.

It will be good news to the mothers of small children to learn that croup can be prevented. The first sign of croup is hoarseness. A day or two before the attack the child becomes hoarse. This is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the rough cough appears, and it will dispel all symptoms of croup. In this way all danger and anxiety may be avoided. This remedy is used by many thousands of mothers and has never been known to fail. It is, in fact, the only remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant and safe to take. For Sale by All Druggists.

A Timely Suggestion.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful housewife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is certain to be needed before the winter is over, and results are much more prompt and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system. In almost every instance a severe cold may be warded off by taking this remedy freely as soon as the first indication of the cold appears. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains no harmful substance. It is pleasant to take—both adults and children like it. Buy it and you will get the best. It always cures. The Proof of Discipleship

LIKE PAUL THE CHRISTIAN SHOULD BEAR IN HIS BODY THE MARKS OF THE LORD JESUS.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Dec. 6, 1903.
Text.—"For I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus."—Galatians 6:17.

WHAT a battle-scarred soldier of the cross of Jesus Christ Paul was! He bore in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus as the honorable and indisputable evidences of his loyalty and faithful service. Hear his brief, modest summary in the eleventh chapter of second Corinthians, and remember, too, that it was made before his imprisonment at Caesarea and journey to Rome and cruel bondage there: "Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness." A battle-scarred warrior, surely! The persecutions, the trials, the sufferings, the dangers began at Damascus at the time he first enlisted in the cause of Jesus Christ when the Jews went about to kill him and he escaped over the wall of the city in a basket, and they had followed him wherever he had gone, to Jerusalem, through Asia Minor, into Europe. His back was scarred and gashed with the innumerable blows which had fallen thereon His wrists and his ankles bore the cruel marks of the irons and stocks which had encircled them. Upon his face and head might be seen the livid scars left by the jagged rocks as they fell upon him at Lystra. But every scar, every pain and ache, every hardship was a testimony for the Lord Jesus, and he was proud of them.

THE soldier bears with honor the scars which he has won in battle. The empty sleeve or trouser leg, the disfigured face and form through which the shot and shell have plowed their ugly furrows, are eloquent tribute to the service which has been rendered. The soldier is proud of that empty sleeve, of that bullet wound. Paul, too, was proud of his scars, but it was with no spirit of boastfulness that he pointed to the cruel evidences in his body of his warfare in the Gospel. He was proud of them and calls attention to them because they were the visible evidences of the presence of the Lord Jesus in his life. In the same breath with which he declared that "he bore in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus" he had exclaimed: "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ!" and it was because those marks were an expression in his life of the cross and sufferings of Jesus that he gloried. To him it was one of the proofs of his discipleship. As in those days the slave was branded with the mark or initials of his owner, so was Paul. It was his pride to count himself the slave of Jesus, and to regard the scars which had eaten into his flesh as the brand-marks of his Master.

WITH sublime contempt he utterly ignores those who had so cruelly tortured his body and sees only Jesus. He knows that nothing can harm him and no one lay hand upon him, except as his Master permits, and save as it shall be to His glory and the advancement of the Gospel. Therefore when the Jews beat him, he sees Jesus and rejoices in Him; when the rods of the heathen fall upon him, he knows each stroke will make the light of Jesus shine brighter and farther into the darkness; when he is stoned, he rises up to bless; when he is imprisoned, he sings, for Jesus is with him. The marks in his body were the marks of the Lord Jesus—not those of the raging mobs at Jerusalem, at Lystra, at Ephesus, at Thessalonica; not those of the magistrate and jailor at Philippi. It was Jesus, his Master and Lord, marking his body for the furtherance of the blessed Gospel which he preached. Each stroke, each trial and hardship deepened the proof of his discipleship. It was fulfillment of the promise and prophecy of Jesus; it was proof of Divine favor; it was the evidence of fellowship with Him; it was the making complete of the sufferings of Christ.

THE suffering of the disciple of Jesus Christ for the sake of the Gospel is fulfillment of prophecy. Over and over again Jesus told His followers that they should suffer persecution. "If they have persecuted Me, they will also persecute you. The servant is not greater than his Lord." And how the storm of persecution has raged about the church of Jesus Christ! The prison and the stake; torture and death; hardships and sufferings, have marked the pathway of the Gospel through the world. The early church felt the fiery trial and bitterest opposition, until the religion of Jesus Christ was popularized by the Roman emperor. Then came a new persecution to the true disciples of Christ from within the organized state church, culminating in the reformation, when the fires of persecution burst forth with renewed fury. But the form of persecution changes, and to-day we have no Stephens being stoned to death, or Pauls being cast to the lions, or martyrs being burned at the stake. The torture chambers have disappeared, and no longer is it a crime to worship the Lord according to His word and the dictates of one's conscience. But it is still true as Jesus said: "If they have persecuted Me, they will also persecute you." The form of that persecution may have changed, and, save at the mission stations in heathen lands, or in this land when evil is aroused and united because of aggressive Christian work, physical violence or death are unknown, yet it is still true that "all that will live Godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." The devil has not ceased his opposition to the Gospel of Jesus Christ, but he has been forced to alter his methods of attack. Ridicule and petty annoyances and inhumanities have come to be favorite weapons. The following of Jesus means the bearing of a cross to-day as much as it ever did, and "he that taketh not his cross and followeth after Me, is not worthy of Me." It would almost seem that Jesus, looking beyond the centuries of active and bloody persecution of His followers to the present day, uttered His "woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you," with special emphasis for His followers to-day. The Christian all too often walks arm in arm with the world, and thereby wins its favor and commendation, but the "woe" of Jesus sounds out against these and His "blessed" is reserved for those who are reviled and persecuted and accused of all manner of evil falsely for His sake.

NOT only is the suffering of persecution for Jesus' sake the fulfillment of prophecy, but it is a proof of Divine favor. When the apostles of the early church preached Jesus to the multitudes at Jerusalem they incurred the deadly hostility of the Sanhedrin, as Jesus Himself had done before His crucifixion. They were dragged before the council and cruelly beaten. But, instead of being crushed and disheartened by the persecution, "they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for His name." Their suffering and distress were welcomed as a special evidence of the Divine favor. Think of it! Test the temper of Christians today and the true ring of devotion to the Lord Jesus fails to sound forth. We rejoice rather when the way is smooth and easy. The line of the least resistance is sought out. The truth of the Gospel is often compromised in order to avoid friction and antagonism. But the early disciples welcomed persecution, when it came as a result of faithful living and preaching of Jesus Christ, as a sure testimony of their dear Saviour's love and favor. Though their backs ached and the blood stained their garments, the inward presence and peace of their Lord made them rejoice. They felt honored because they were permitted to suffer for His sake. Paul bore in his body the marks of manifold persecutions, but they were all made beautiful in his eyes by seeing in them the proofs of the Divine favor. They were the marks of the Lord Jesus Himself. Never does there come a persecution to a disciple of Jesus Christ as a result of faithful and obedient service, but that it is a sure evidence of the presence of the Lord with the disciple and of the effectiveness of the work being done. Oh, we need to-day to learn the joy of being counted worthy to suffer shame for Jesus' sake. I think sometimes the Christian ought to pray for the persecution that will send the roots down deeper and strengthen and solidify the life and make fruit bearing more possible.

AND persecution is the evidence of Divine fellowship—fellowship in His suffering. The only way you really can know and understand the pain of your friend who has undergone an operation is to feel the cut of the surgeon's knife yourself. There is a fellowship between your friend and the one lying on the cot next to his at the hospital that you and he cannot enjoy unless you, too, have suffered similarly. Here is a mother bowed in grief over the loss of her little one. Her friend comes in to speak the word of comfort, but she herself has never known such sorrow. Something is lacking to make her sympathy complete. But here comes a mother whose little one has gone and left the heart and the home desolate. She sits in silence by the side of the weeping mother. The pressure of her hand is felt. No word is spoken, but they both understand. There is a fellowship of suffering and each is comforted by the thought that the other knows and understands. We are entering the sacred precincts of the inmost heart when we speak of the fellowship of suffering. We are treading on sacred ground, and I believe that every one of the marks in Paul's body brought him nearer to his blessed Lord and his Lord nearer to him. In his letter to the Philippians he says: "I count all things but loss, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, . . . and that I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death." He longed to suffer that he might come to know something of what Christ had suffered for him. As he felt the scourging he could know something of the pain Jesus suffered at the cruel hands of Pilate's soldiers. As the hatred and scorn of his enemies were heaped upon him he could know something of the ignominy and shame which Jesus had borne for him. Every scar on his body made the fellowship of his Lord closer and dearer. Do you want to begin to know something of what Jesus has suffered for you? You must begin to suffer for Him. The fellowship of His sufferings is precious beyond human word to tell, but to know that fellowship you must suffer in ways that shall be to the furtherance of the Gospel. You must bear about in your body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus may be made manifest in your body.

BUT suffering for Jesus' sake goes beyond mere fellowship. As Paul puts it in Colossians: "Filling up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ." Here is a beautiful thought, a wonderful thought. What a sacred halo of dignity it throws about the suffering of the Christian—Paul suffering to make complete the suffering of Jesus! The atonement for sin upon the cross complete, but the sufferings of Jesus made complete through His disciples! The sufferings of the disciples to make more effective the Gospel of atonement! No wonder Paul could say he rejoiced in his sufferings. The disciple surely will always find it dreary and hard to endure persecution if self is the central thought in that suffering, but let the inspired and inspiring thought which Paul gives us seize hold upon the heart, and instantly a new light and joy burns within; there is a higher purpose in the suffering, there is a more blessed fruitage. The trial and affliction which it seems as though we could not endure will become easy and fulfill a blessed ministry. Let us seek for that experience of Paul which can say: "I rejoice in my sufferings, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for His body's sake, which is the church." All this was the meaning to Paul of the marks which he bore in his body. They were the proofs of his discipleship; they testified of the prophecy of Jesus that His disciples should suffer persecution; they were the proof of Divine favor and fellowship, and were the evidence of that exalted privilege of filling out the sufferings of Christ.

WE may bear in our bodies the marks of the Lord, we may suffer for His sake, we may endure bitter persecution, but oh, see what He has borne for us! The crown of thorns pierced His brow, the nails tore through the tender flesh of hands and feet, the soldier's spear was thrust into His side! And this was all for you and me, that sin might be punished and we go free. He became sin for us and endured the awful darkness of that dying hour that we might become the righteousness of God through Him. Thomas wanted to put his finger in the nail prints and thrust his hand into His side that he might be sure that it was in very truth his Lord. We do not need the proof of the doubting Thomas, for we know that our Redeemer liveth, but oh! we do need to remember the marks which Jesus bears in His body for you and for me. Those hands and those feet, and that great burning heart, were never so beautiful as when they bore your sins and mine and when the precious blood flowed from that riven side. Sin has been washed away, but the scars which sin made in His precious body shall remain forever. These are what He bore back to Heaven, and to the eyes of the redeemed sinner there is nothing more sacred or beautiful.

BUT what marks are we bearing for our Lord? What is there in our lives which is the evidence and proof of our discipleship? Are we suffering nothing, are we enduring no hardship for His sake? Is human friendship counted dearer than that of the Divine Lord and Master? Is the truth of the Gospel of less weight and value than the wisdom and culture and refinement of this world? Are the things of this life of so great importance that we must spend all our time in the getting and the enjoyment of them, with scarcely or never a thought of the precious souls all about us who are perishing in their sins? What marks are you bearing in your body of discipleship? Is the mark of the cross which Jesus has given you to bear for Him livid and fresh in your shoulder, or have you laid aside the cross to rest in ease? Are you feeling the thrusts of persecution, which Jesus said should be the lot of His followers? If not, then consider carefully wherein lies your proof of discipleship. If you bear not your cross, Christ declares you "are not worthy of Him." If you escape persecution and difficulty and hardship by denying your Lord and refusing to bear testimony for Him in the home, upon the street, in office, shop and factory, then hear your Lord say unto you: "Whosoever shall deny Me before men him will I also deny before My Father which is in Heaven." In that vision of John of the Heavens, one of the elders asks him: "What are these which are arrayed in white robes, and whence come they?" And John replies: "Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me: These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." "Out through great tribulation." Bearing the marks of the Lord Jesus in their bodies. Would we stand in the midst of that throng some day? It may be our privilege, but cross-bearing must come before crown-wearing.

Trained Nurses for Steamships.

Some of the English medical papers are advocating the appointment of trained nurses as stewardesses on steamships.

AN EVIL IN FOOD THE LAW SHOULD REACH.

In reference to the use of alum baking powders Prof. Schweitzer, of the State University of Missouri, says: "The deleterious effects of alum and the soluble salts of alumina upon the human system, even when used in small quantities, are too well known to need relating; their use in baking powder is dangerous, and should be restricted."

The effects of the continuous use of alum baking powders are thus summed up in a medical publication:—

"Alum taken into the stomach retards the digestion of the food.

"It is an irritant which inflames and irritates the stomach and intestinal canal.

"It is an astringent and tends to constipate the bowels, which interferes with digestion.

"It renders the albumen of the food partially insoluble, and therefore takes away from its nutritive value.

"It is absorbed into the blood, which it tends to thicken and coagulate. The free flow of the blood through the organs of the heart is thus retarded.

"Its continued absorption into the system causes some forms of nervous prostrations and many of those affections of the nerves from which both women and men suffer.

"Fourteen grains of alum have caused the death of a child. Larger doses have frequently resulted fatally in the case of adults.

"No drug so powerful and deadly, no matter in what proportions it may be employed, can safely be used in any article of food."

Exhaustless Borax Deposits.

The owner of a good deposit of borax need not fear that his "well will run dry," according to the statement of one of the mining journals, which recently declared that borax deposits are practically inexhaustible. It is known that deposits thought to have been worked out have become mineralized again in a short time because of the continual expulsion of the alkaloid from regions below the property. Heavy rains act upon the alkaloids and bring borax in either powdered or crystallized state to the surface.

Solid Victuals.

Youth has its own criteria by which to judge things which its elders assess by other standards. Henry had just come into his mother's kitchen, where she was rolling pie-crust.

"Making pies, mother?"

"Yes, dear."

"Say, mother, your pies taste all right, but why don't you make some like Mrs. Thompson gives me and Billy? You can take a piece in your hand and walk all round the yard eating it and it won't break."—Youth's Companion.

Change of Opinion.

"Papa, have—have you seen Harold since you told him he was too poor to think of—of marrying me?"

"Yes; I ran across him at the club last evening. We got into conversation, and he struck me—er—"

"Struck you! Oh, papa!"

"Struck me as quite an agreeable young man. I understand his uncle has left him two hundred thousand."—Kansas City Journal.

"Span" in the Transvaal.

The word "span" has become a misnomer in the Transvaal, for here a span of oxen may mean anywhere from ten to 16 head, and the farmer who carries his produce to market must first make an outlay for draft animals of from $1,000 to $1,200. The wagons used are very heavy, and must be capable of bearing a weight of from 8,000 to 10,000 pounds.

Coal from Japan.

The coal production of Japan was almost trebled during the years from 1892 to 1901, and the amount exported a little more than double in the same time, while the extension of steamship and railway lines and growing number of factories caused the domestic consumption to be almost quadrupled.

State News Happenings

CAPT. B. J. EWEN.

He Walks the Streets of Jackson, Ky., Unmolested.

Jackson, Ky., Dec. 5.—Capt. B. J. Ewen, principal witness against Jett and White in Breathitt county assassination cases, was boldly walking the streets of Jackson Friday. His appearance on the streets immediately after all the soldiers have been recalled has occasioned surprise. He was always guarded by a large body of soldiers when here and on innumerable occasions expressed the belief that he would be assassinated if he ever returned to Jackson.

No credence is placed in a report by people here that a man shoved a pistol under Judge Hargis' nose a few days ago and threatened to shoot him.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 5.—The managers of Ewen's lecturing tour were astounded when they learned that Ewen was in Jackson. They supposed he was still in Cincinnati. He became so frightened after he was shot at election night here that he caused his lecturing dates to be cancelled. They fear the terrific strain on his mind since the Marcum assassination has caused it to become unbalanced.

A TRIVIAL QUARREL.

It Ended in the Killing of Dudley Williamson in a Saloon.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 4.—In a fight between Irvine Crumbaugh and Dudley Williamson in the saloon of Owen Moore, on Broadway street, west of the state capitol grounds, Thursday night, the latter was twice shot and died instantly. The shooting grew out of a quarrel over some 15 pennies given by Crumbaugh, the barkeeper, to Williamson, to play a slot machine. Williamson disputed the number of pennies received, and is said to have made a move as to draw a weapon. Williamson was a state guardsman and was a valuable witness for the commonwealth in the Goebel murder cases.

PETERSBURG GIRLS.

Ghost of a Cincinnatian Frightens Them Away From Their Beaux.

Petersburg, Ky., Dec. 5.—A number of citizens living on East First street, facing the river, are greatly excited over what they call a ghost. In the spring of 1897 or 1898 a wealthy Cincinnati bottle manufacturer, F. A. Schwill, committed suicide by jumping off the steamer Pauline, while the crew was at dinner. Since then, on almost any moonlight night, a white object emerges from the Ohio river at the point where Schwill jumped in. It walks down the beach about 30 feet, retraces its steps and walks to the float landing and gives a leap and appears to sink into the Ohio river. Then there are piteous screams that echo from the shores.

Thursday night, while a crowd of young ladies was on the hilltop watching for their Lawrenceburg beaux, the object appeared, and frightened Miss Walton. Their screams brought out the neighborhood. The ghost appears just after sunset.

FOR BACK TAXES.

Kentucky Banks Sued For Nearly a Million Dollars.

Owensboro, Ky., Dec. 3.—Interest was caused in Owensboro banking circles Wednesday by the filing of two suits by the state auditor's agent against two local banks for alleged back taxes due on bills and notes during the past four years, aggregating $950,000.

The petition claims that the National Deposit Co. on September 15 of the past four years held bills of exchange and notes owing to it amounting to $700,000. It alleges that the bank failed to list any part of the debts for taxation.

The other suit is against the First national bank. It is claimed that it has held $350,000 worth of bills and notes during the past four years. If the plaintiffs win the state and county will receive $25,000 and the auditor's agent $5,000. Other suits will follow against every bank in the city. It is the first action of the kind ever brought in Kentucky.

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Extra Session.

Washington, Dec. 2.—Senate—Senator Penrose, chairman of the committee of post offices and postroads, Tuesday introduced a resolution authorizing that committee to request the postmaster general to send to the committee all the papers connected with the recent investigation of the post office department, and if necessary, the committee is to make further investigation and to report to the senate. The resolution without action was referred to the committee on contingent expenses of the senate. Following is the text of the Penrose resolution: "That the committee on post offices and postroads, in view of the charges of corruption, extravagance and violations of law in the administration of the affairs of the post office department, is hereby authorized and instructed to request the postmaster general to send to the committee all papers connected with the recent investigation of his department, and if necessary to make further inquiry into the administration of the said department and to make report thereon to congress upon completion of said investigation. Said committee shall have power to send for persons, books and papers, examine witnesses under oath, employ a stenographer and sit by subcommittee or otherwise during the sessions of the senate or during the periods of its adjournment at such times and places as the committee may determine and to adjourn. All necessary expenses of said investigation shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee." The reference of the resolution was necessary under the rules of the senate.

House—The house, after being in session for a little more than an hour, adjourned until Friday. The time was chiefly consumed in a tariff debate. When Mr. Payne had offered the motion to adjourn over Mr. Williams, the minority leader, suggested that they would like about 30 minutes on a side for debate on the tariff question, whereupon Mr. Payne asked the consent of the house. Granted.

Regular Session.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Senate—The senate Monday passed so quietly from the extraordinary session into the first regular session of the fifty-eighth congress that spectators who were not familiar with the proceedings of that body scarcely realized the change had occurred. In connection with the terms of Saturday's adjournment resolution the hour of meeting was 11:30 a. m., when the usual morning business was transacted. At 12 o'clock Senator Frye, as president pro tempore, announced that as the hour for the convening of the regular session had arrived, the special session shall stand adjourned. The routine of daily business then was proceeded with as if there had been no interruption. The Cuban reciprocity bill was taken up at the conclusion of the morning hour and it will continue to be the regular business before the senate to the exclusion of all other matters except those of a routine character until the 18th instant, when a vote will be taken. A number of senators have prepared speeches in opposition to the bill, but none of these will speak until after Senator Cullom, who is in charge of the measure, makes a statement in support of it, which he will do as soon as possible after the convening of the regular session. He will be followed by either Senator Teller or Senator Morgan in opposition, and they in turn by the other senators who object to the bill.

House—The house will take up such matters as may be brought before it for consideration by unanimous consent, but the real work will not begin until committees have had time to act on measures referred to them. It is understood by members of the house that the president's message will be sent to congress Monday. Its reading will be the principal event in the house. It is expected on the house side that the Christmas recess will be taken about December 22 and that on reassembling, after New Year, the house will be to work in deep earnest preparatory to as early a final adjournment as practicable. The death of Representative Burke, of Pennsylvania, was announced to the house Monday, and a resolution adopted providing for an adjournment as a mark of respect of the late member.

UNEMPLOYED MEN.

A Union of Those Who Do Not Belong to Labor Organizations Formed.

St. Louis, Dec. 7.—A union of unemployed men of the laboring class who do not belong to any labor organization whatever is being formed here and the project has so far advanced that officers have been elected and a constitution drafted. The organization will be known as the National Workers' union. By organizing the unemployed, those behind the movement say they can get in direct touch with the employers and be beneficial not only to themselves, but to those who hire labor.

After the organization here is perfected similar affiliating unions will be organized throughout the country.

THE SHIP SUBSIDY SCHEME.

Programme Proposed by Boss Hanna Will Increase Tariff Duties Ten Per Cent.

That stupendous steal, the proposed subsidy to the steamship trust, is to be again forced on congress. We have the assurance of Senator Hanna that, "the senate is all right," but he advises Clement A. Griscom and other seekers after a share of the subsidy that in their campaign of education they "begin on the house." This is rather strange advice that Senator Hanna gives, for in the last congress the position was reversed. The house then passed the ship subsidy steal, the democrats voting against it, and when the bill went to the senate it was defeated, Senator Allison and a few other republicans voting with the democrats against it. Now, according to Hanna, some or all of these republican senators have changed front, for he says: "The senate is all right," and a good many of the republican members of the house must have heard from their constituents if they have changed, as Hanna indicates they have when he advises Griscom et al. to "begin on the house."

What form the new ship subsidy bill will take has not yet been disclosed, for no such bill has yet been introduced in either house of congress except the bill which Congressman Jones, of Washington, has introduced imposing a discriminating duty of ten per cent. additional on all goods imported in foreign ships. As less than seven per cent. of all commodities imported are brought in foreign bottoms, this would equal an additional tax of nearly ten per cent. over and above the present Dingley tariff of the Dingley bill. That is tariff reform with a vengeance, and it is hardly possible that enough republican representatives of the people can be induced to vote for it. If a bill on those lines is to pass it will have to be amended to make the present duties ten per cent. less on goods imported in American bottoms, which would make that much discrimination in favor of American ships. But how would such an advantage help build up the American merchant marine unless the owners of ships flying the American flag should charge higher freight rates, so that the discriminating duty would go to them? In that case the American consumers would pay the bill, for the price of imported goods would remain the same as far as the tariff is concerned. When everyone is grumbling at the high cost of living and consumers are being bled by the trusts, any change in the tariff that will add to their burdens would hardly be approved by the American people.

The republicans have a majority in both houses of congress and can pass any bill they please, but a measure increasing the tariff will help the democrats in returning to power, so the sooner Hanna and Griscom "begin on the house" the better.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——Senator Hanna, of course, will not promise that he will thwart any efforts of the presidency to seek him.—Albany Argus.

——"Protection is a system of taxation whereby many are robbed in order that a few may be hothonused into artificial prosperity." Good doctrine.—St. Louis Republic.

——Hon. Marcus Alonzo Hanna puts it up to those whom it may concern to get into the small but talented class of men who believe that the senate is no plus ultra, and that if there is any legislative body in the federal field that needs burnishing, it is the house. Your Uncle Mark can't see how anything could beat the senate with him in it.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——For some time the country relied upon the sound common sense and the natural conservatism of Secretary Hay to hold the bumptiousness of Mr. Roosevelt in check, but evil communications corrupt good manners and the secretary of state has been carried over into the jingo camp. National safety imperatively demands a change of administration. — Philadelphia Record (Ind.).

——It is manifest to all the world that the opera bouffe republic is a mere dummy created by the United States and for this country to negotiate with it and pay it $10,000,000 for the canal right of way is a ridiculous farce. Roosevelt would cut a much better figure if he would drop all pretense of negotiations with this thing of straw and proceed at once to appropriate the right of way by right of might.—Memphis News.

——There need be no illusions on this subject. The "republic of Panama" as an independent power is a farce. It will serve the present purpose. But it will be wholly dependent upon the protection of the United States. If we had not already annexed Hawaii, acquired Porto Rico, taken Cuba under our wing and subjugated the Philippines there might be a moral qualm over the portents suggested by this unarrowed but absolute protectorate over a Central American state.—N. Y. World (Ind.).

Lovely Arrangement.

Our secretary of the treasury, Shaw, went over to Wall street the other day—he goes there frequently—to get his bearings. Wall street is, you know, a sort of central financial weather bureau where advance information can be obtained about the state of affairs in industry and business. He emerged to say that the "returns from all sections of the country indicate a continuance of prosperity." We may now breathe a sigh of relief. We were not so sure that all was well. The secretary's pronouncement is official and authoritative.

A PAUPER PRINCE.

All Kinds of Favors Contribute to the Welfare of the Steel Trust.

Andrew Carnegie once said that steel is either a prince or a pauper. He meant that the industry is either very prosperous or very much depressed at any particular time; that it goes from one extreme to the other. But this billion dollar trust is also the prince of paupers, for it asks for and receives more and greater favors than ever before fell to the lot of any other individual or corporation.

In the first place, it receives from the United States a tariff bone which amounts to about $75,000,000 a year. That is, fully $75,000,000 of its $133,000,000 of net profits last year were due to the tariff on steel products, absolutely unnecessary to preserve the industry, and serving only to enable the trust to extort $75,000,000 a year from our citizens, who are compelled to pay 40 per cent. more for steel than is paid by foreigners who buy steel of the same trust. If bills are introduced in congress to reduce the duties on steel, or to in some way relieve the oppressed consumers, the steel trust writes to or sees Congressman Dalzell, or some of its other representatives, and the republican leaders at once decide that it is unwise to touch the tariff at present; that it would disturb our prosperity to stop the robbery by the trusts; that the republicans can be trusted to revise the tariff when there is great need of it; that it is best to leave this question until after the presidential election; in short, that it is best to "stand pat." And so the steel trust continues its $75,000,000 a year graft.

In the next place this steel trust is always getting special favors from those semipublic institutions, the railroads. It is not generally known that Andrew Carnegie, like John D. Rockefeller, got his start, or rather his lead, through secret and illegal rebates from the railroads, as much is the fact. At no time, for 20 years, have the railroads not been giving illicit rates to the steel manufacturers. President Schwab testified before the industrial commission that the railroads always gave specially low rates on materials to be exported. This is illegal and against public policy, but the interstate commerce commission is powerless to compel the railroads to give the same rates to all comers. As a result we Americans not only pay 40 or 50 per cent. more for steel, but have to pay additional freights on other goods to make up for the lower rates charged on steel transported for foreign markets. It is a beautiful system—for the steel trust. It catches us going and coming. And now the railroads are said to have granted the request of the steel trust for a 20 per cent. reduction on all finished steel products transported to the seaboard. It is also expected that the steamship companies will be good to this great beggar and give it specially low rates. This will enable the trust to sell at even lower prices in foreign markets, while it keeps up those at home.

Again, the steel trust has for more than a year been getting special favors of the iron and steel workers, who have been working at reduced wages to enable the trust to sell goods for export. Now the trust is asking all its employes to work for wages from ten to 40 per cent. below what they are at present receiving, in order that the trust may make more goods for foreign markets and may continue to pay dividends on its highly watered stock. It would be cruel for the wage earners to refuse this favor, which will save this pauper over $17,000,000 a year, and wages will surely come down; in fact, they have already been reduced in many mills. Many workers, however, have been laid off entirely. This saving is said to amount to over $3,000,000. By cutting salaries 30 per cent. another saving of $12,000,000 is to be made—showing that $40,000,000 a year are now paid in salaries.

Altogether the steel trust, through special rates from railroads, wage reductions averaging 20 per cent., salary reductions of 30 per cent., men dropped from the pay rolls and by other economies, hopes to save $56,000,000 a year. With these savings this trust hopes to weather hard times and to avoid bankruptcy, although continuing to pay tens of millions of dollars a year on stocks that are all water.

If there are any other favors which have been overlooked, and which this beggar really wants, the present friendly republican congress will remedy the oversight. Nearly 100,000 investors are intersted in steel stocks, and have lost more than $400,000,000 of their hard earned savings. It will not do to let them lose all. This generous country, its obliging consumers, the kind wage earners and the sympathetic railroads will rush to the rescue and will see that the steel trust does not make less than 30 per cent. profit on all steel sold. Less than this would prevent it from paying dividends on all stocks. This trust must be kept afloat somehow, or the country will be lost.

BYRON W. HOLT.

——Most nations have a "father of his country," but that new Panama brat would be a wise child if it knew its own father.—Albany Argus.

——Who can blame Senator Hanna for being a little shy about the presidency? The nomination has not been offered to him yet on a silver or gold platter. Do the papers expect so powerful a person to go fishing for it with a hook and line?—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Never mind the price of kerosene. Be happy in the thought that the Standard Oil company is paying annual dividends of 44 per cent. Rejoice in the prosperity of the Standard Oil shareholders. Remember that it is more blessed to give than to receive. Don't be selfish.—Rochester Democrat (Rep.).

WHERE PEACE REIGNS.

Money Is Not Needed and No Dissipation or Irregularity Permitted.

The long haired young reformers were holding an informal debate, and when they had agreed that the world was just about as corrupt and bad a place as it well could be, a pink-faced man arose, relates London Fit-Bits.

"What you seem to want, friends," he said, "is a place where everyone has to be good by law."

"That's it!" chorused the reformers.

"Where smoking ain't allowed, and such a thing as drink is unknown? Where no one need worry about food and raiment, and where money does not exist?"

"We do!"

"Where everyone has to go to church on Sundays, and everyone keeps regular hours?"

"That is just what we do want. Oh, to find such a place!" said a soulful young fellow, speaking for the others.

"Well, I've just come from such a place—"

"You have?" cried the soulful one. "Oh, tell us, tell us, man of wonderful experience, where it is, that we may also go!"

"It's a place called prison!" said the grim man.

Acceptable as a Juror.

A murder case was on trial, and the jury was being selected. Among the venire was a negro who had a passion for listening to socialistic speeches when not otherwise engaged, which was "generally always."

The attorney asked: "Do you believe in capital punishment?"

"Yes, suh, I does."

"Do you know what capital punishment is?"

"Course I does," the negro replied. "Well, what do you under-tand capital punishment to be?"

"It means a-gittin' chen wid de rich, who are a-ruin' ober de poor. I like it, but 'cordin' as you can't make me like nothin' else."

"Accepted!" shouted the attorney.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Asked and Answered.

"Why is it?" asked the jolly party, "that you are always borrowing trouble?"

"Because," answered the melancholy individual, "it is the only thing I can get now without security."—Chicago Daily News.

EVERY WALK IN LIFE.

A. A. Boyce, a farmer, living three and a half miles from Trenton, Mo., says: "A severe cold settled in my kidneys and developed so quickly that I was obliged to lay off work on account of the aching in my back and sides. For a time I was unable to walk at all, and every makeshift I tried and all the medicine I took had not the slightest effect. My back continued to grow weaker until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and I must say I was more than surprised and gratified to notice the backache disappearing gradually until it finally stopped.

Another club woman, Mrs. Haule, of Edgerton, Wis., tells how she was cured of irregularities and uterine trouble, terrible pains and backache, by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—A while ago my health began to fail because of female troubles. The doctor did not help me. I remembered that my mother had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on many occasions for irregularities and uterine troubles, and I felt sure that it could not harm me at any rate to give it a trial.

"I was certainly glad to find that within a week I felt much better, the terrible pains in the back and side were beginning to cease, and at the time of menstruation I did not have nearly as serious a time as heretofore, so I continued its use for two months, and at the end of that time I was like a new woman. I really have never felt better in my life, have not had a sick headache since, and weigh 20 pounds more than I ever did, so I unhesitatingly recommend your medicine."—MRS. MAY HAULE, Edgerton, Wis., Pres. Household Economics Club.

BOURBON RECORDER
Wednesday, - - Dec. 9, 1903.
W. L. HODELL, - - Publisher.

It is time to begin planting holiday advertisements.

Gov. BRADLEY has not had a relapse since the election.

The pleasures of some people consist of efforts to make others feel unhappy.

No doubt considerable dealing in political futures was done in Frankfort, yesterday.

EDWARDS will make a good Kentucky's work by contesting Dr. Hunter's seat in Congress.

The President's message to Congress is on an inside page. Read it and draw your own conclusions.

The election guessers in this county did not win money enough on the last election to pay postage on their guesses.

A bill has been introduced in the House to make McKinley's birthday, January 29, a national holiday, to be known as "McKinley day."

It has been some time since the month of November and the first of December furnished such a good quality of winter weather as they have this year.

It is said that a State revenue agent has cracked down on Carroll county people for back taxes on mortgages that amount to $1,000,000, and which they failed to list with their assessor for taxation.

Fifty barrels are a great many hickory nuts, but that is the quantity the Advocate says a Danville man shipped to an eastern party a few days ago, it being the largest shipment of that kind that ever left Boyle county.

Hon. John G. Carlisle has been named as the representative of this country in the arbitration of the claims of the San Domingo Improvement Company against the Dominican republic. The claims amount to $4,500,000.

About all of Kentucky's Democratic politicians, big and little, and a very considerable contingent of the boys in trenches were in Frankfort yesterday, assisting in Gov. Beckham's inauguration. It was a great day in Frankfort.

It seems that the Lilly White Republicans in the South are determined that Senator Hanna shall become a candidate for the presidency. They are awfully sour on Mr. Roosevelt because of some appointments he persisted in forcing on that section.

Dr. Hunter lost no time after he took the oath of office in Washington before he announced that he is a candidate for a renomination and election to Congress. He is one of the slickest politicians in the State, and one of which a very large element of the leaders in the Republican party in Kentucky would like to get rid.

The Democratic politicians in the east are conducting a considerable row between Senator Platt and Gov. Odell, of New York, but when the time comes for a showdown Platt and Odell will be found working in perfect harmony. The Democrats must not count on a split in that direction assisting them to carry New York next fall.

The Republicans in Covington are laughing and growing fat at the expense of the Democrats who have been pursuing a "dog in the manger policy" until now the Democrat who holds an office there after the first of next January will be a lonesome man. The Democratic State Central Committee ought to appoint a receiver for the Democratic party in Covington, and wind up its affairs in a proper manner.

Some of the stockholders of the Shelby County Fair Association will ask the next Legislature to have the $12,000 appropriated for a State Fair divided between six of the best county fairs in the State. They believe this plan would go farther to encourage agricultural pursuits than the present one. If such a move is put through, it will behoove the North Kentucky Agricultural Association to ask to be given a share, as there is no question as to its being one of the best county fair in the State. Such a plan as is now proposed was advocated by a good many people at time the last Legislature was considering the appropriation for a State Fair.

The Burley Tobacco Growers Association appears to have gone by the board, notwithstanding the great efforts of its promoters. It takes a very large sum of money to handle the burley tobacco crop, and as arrangements whereby to raise the necessay money could not be made the scheme had to be abandoned, at least for the present.

With the Bristow report of the immense frauds that for several years have prospered in the post-office department at Washington, and Edwards making Hunter's life a burden by proving how he stole his election to Congress in the Eleventh Kentucky District, before Congress this winter, the country will receive considerable information as to evil practices both at Washington and in the mountains of Kentucky.

Prof. T. Z. Roberts, of Middle creek, and who is conceded to be about the best mathematician in the county, has sent to this office a solution of the problem, "if a horse be tied at the end of a 70 foot rope, the other end of which is fastened to the corner of a barn 30 feet square, how much land surface can he graze over?" The solution is accompanied by an elaborate diagram. His answer is 51 square yards and a fraction.

Hon. D. Linn Gooch, Congressman from this district was assigned by Speaker Cannon on the House Committee on the District of Columbia, which is a very important position, as it has in its hand the legislation for the District of Columbia as well as the City of Washington. Mr. Gooch declined a position on the Rivers and Harbors Improvement Committee to accept the assignment on the first named committee.

The indications are that the make up of the next race for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district will depend very much on the manner in which the nomination will be made. Some of those who have the bee in their bonnet do not want a primary because of its being so very expensive, while others consider that the only way in which the choice should be made. If all those who have been suggested as candidates enter the race, quite an interesting time will there be in political circles in this district in the next few months.

Should the Capitol appropriation become a law at the approaching session of the Legislature, and a million or two dollars be converted to that purpose, the benefits arising from same would be apparent not alone in Frankfort, but throughout the length and breadth of the Commonwealth. A new impetus would be given to enterprise and progress, and it would mark the glad awaking from a half century of business lethargy and retrogression—the dark age, as it were, of the Blue Grass State.—Kentucky Journal.

Aint you spreading it on a little too thick, neighbor?

L. H. Voshell, County Committeeman for the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association, was on hand Monday and addressed the growers. When Mr. Voshell called the meeting of growers for Burlington, last Monday, he had no intimation whatever that the Association was in distress; but, on the contrary, he had information to the effect that everything was in excellent condition, and that the State Inspector would be on hand in a few days to make all final and necessary arrangements for handling the crop this year. He was vexed when he learned of the turn affairs had taken. Hon. N. S. Walton addressed the meeting also, and expressed regret at the turn affairs had taken.

The plan under which the public roads in this county are worked, has proved very unsatisfactory, and the dissatisfaction is growing every year. In view of this fact it would be well for the fiscal court to give the supervisor system at least one trial. Under the supervisor system one man instead of forty-eight would handle and be responsible for all the road money. The money that is paid out among forty-eight overseers as fees, amounts to enough to pay a supervisor for his services. With one man in control of all of the roads in the county, he could give them his entire attention, seeing that they are properly worked. The supervisor plan might be a considerable improvement on that which is causing so much kicking in the county.

The Western Tobacco Journal, of Cincinnati, has the following to say in Mondays issue, in regard to last week's market:

"The Burley market showed considerable improvement over the previous week; offerings were larger and receipts were also larger. Prices ruled fair all week, very little fluctuation being seen in the Old Tobaccos. New Tobaccos ruled strong, several of the packages bringing full prices, the best bringing 14 cents. The quality of both New and Old Tobaccos was better than for the past two weeks. Common Smokers were particularly strong, while Medium Red Leaf was a little irregular. A few fine and fancy hogsheads of Leaf from Owen County (Ky.) brought the best prices during the week, 13 hhds selling from 15 to 24¾ cents. Total offerings for the week were about half what they were during the corresponding week of 1902 and the total offerings of New Tobaccos have been only one-fourth of what they were during the same period last year. Rejections were a little above the average, being 20 per cent of the whole, although the total rejections for the year continue much lower than for 1902. The advent of the New crop is awaited with considerable interest by the trade, and this to a certain extent keeps the market small in volume. The offerings of the New crop so far show excellent color and quality, and there are some indications that it will be a most desirable crop. Reports from some counties state that it is the best crop in years."

One of our greatest agriculturists says: Succes, in the sense of accumulating, wealth depends upon the degree of productiveness of the soil and knowledge how to manage it so as to develop its greatest possibilities. Half a century ago the farmer who got a few thousand dollars ahead could loan it on mortgage security at 10 per cent interest and a bonus, and he grew rich very rapidly, while today he may not realize over 4 per cent. not after paying the tax so that now money will earn more if judiciously invested in stock and fertilizers for the farm, this method making the land grow more valuable from year to year. Farming cannot be successfully carried on as it used to be when the original fertility of the soil was sufficient to produce good crops. With beginners there is generally an ambition to do too much. A small farm will yield a greater profit than a large improperly cultivated one. There is too common a disposition to commerce where a successful ancestor left off. Each generation must learn its own lesson of life from actual experience."

On too many farms where hogs are kept the feeding floor is conspicuous for its absence. It pays to have a feeding floor for fattening hogs.

The anthracite mine owners have secured a court decision relieving them of abiding by the strike commission's findings or paying the judgment for back wages obtained by the miners. But had the miners refused to abide by the decisions they would have been "anarchists," "traitors," "agitators" and "demagogues." As it is the coal mine owners are only administering the trust reposed in them as trustees of divine providence. It is all very clear when you once understand it.—Commoner.

A press dispatch from Maysville Ky. says: "The American Tobacco Company, which has been experimenting in growing Burley tobacco under canvas in this county, now pronounces the experiment a success, but costly. Last spring two acres were planted and then covered with canvas, the canvas being just high enough to permit a horse to pass under it while plowing the tobacco. The sides are inclosed with canvas, resembling a circus tent. The field was kept watered by a sprinkler. The finest crop of cirgarette tobacco ever grown in this county was produced and is now about ready to cut. The plants stand varying from four to six feet high. The leaves extend upward, and each stalk produces from twenty-two to twenty-six leaves.

Moisture very frequently collects on the walls of the poultry-houses, especially in winter. If tarred paper is used on the inside of a house it condenses moisture, because it is colder than the surrounding air of the poultry-house. The same thing happens to a cement floor. Dirt floors cannot be kept clean except by frequent renewals of the earth. Board floors become saturated with the fluids of the droppings, and also assist in providing harboring-places for rats. A cement floor is better than any, except that it is very cold in winter, and causes condensation of moisture. To protect the fowls, such floors should be covered first with an inch or two of dry dirt, and over the dirt the use of leaves or cut straw may be resorted to. Of course, this means labor, but labor is essential to success in the poultry business. To protect against damp walls, it is better to apply tarred paper on the outside of the house rather than on the inside walls.

Charles R. Crigler, aged 45, died at his home near Limaburg, last Saturday morning, after an illness of three months. He was a son of the late A. F. Crigler, and he and his sister, Miss Anna, kept house at the old homestead. He was a quiet, unassuming gentleman, and had a very large circle of friends. The funeral services were conducted at Hebron last Monday afternoon by Rev. Slater, in the presence of a large concourse of friends and relatives.

Elijah Parker, of Gasburg, this county, was truly glad when he learned by reading the Louisville Evening Post, one day last week, that he escaped with his life in his terrible fight with two large eagles that threatened to devastate his barnyard. The Post says Mr. Parker used a pitchfork as his weapon, but the eagles proved too much for him and he retreated to his house. No doubt Elijah gave vent to that old rebel yell which he use to indulge in when charging the Yankees, but the eagles could not be frightened by wind and he had to retire, in good order it is supposed, although the report of the battle is silent on that point.

The city of Rising Sun was shocked on the night of the 2nd inst., by the drowning of Captain James Daly one of its oldest citizens. Captain Daly had come down from the city on the Packet, which landed against another steamboat that was lying along side of the wharf boat, and when he attempted to pass from one steamer to the other on the gang plank he missed his footing and fell between the two boats and was drowned. Captain Daly was about 80 years old, and had spent many years in the flatboat business, taking large cargoes of produce from Rising Sun, south, when that branch of business was so popular and Rising Sun was an important shipping point. He was a member of Rising Sun Lodge No. 6 F. & A. M., which offered a reward of $50 for the finding of the body. It is said that the Captain had expressed a desire that he be drowned when his time came to die.

Lute Tanner, who lives near town was in Covington shopping, last Thursday, and among other things, he bought two pairs of felt boots and a pair of shoes, which were done up in one package, and when he went into the wagon-yard to get his team, instead of putting the package in his wagon, he placed them on the steps of another wagon standing near. He never missed the foot-gear until he got home, when it occurred to him what he had done. Was it not that Mr. Tanner's habits of sobriety are so thoroughly established in his neighborhood, some might say that—you know what.—Since the above was put in type, the lost package has been found The wagon which Mr. Tanner placed the package on belonged to Bert Sullivan, one of his near neighbors, but, not knowing to whom they belonged he left them in charge of the wagon master. The boys are having considerable fun at Lute's expense.

A galvanized iron roof is being put on the Universalist church building. The work was suspended last week on account of the cold weather.

The approach of a term of the Boone Circuit Court use to be heralded by a hustling on the part of local attorneys, but such is not the case now—it creates no stir among them any more.

It is said that a very conservative farmer, who lives not many miles from Bulington was in town last Monday with his pockets bulging with money with which he intended taking stock in the Tobacco Association.

A drove of 32 very fine cattle sold by James Rogers, of Bellevue, to F. A. Utz and James Conner, passed through town, one day last week. They were beauts, but that is the only kind that Mr. Rogers produces. They brought him about $1,800.

George Smith, son of George L. Smith, of Hathaway, broke his arm last Sunday afternoon. He placed his hand on a post and attempted to spring over a wire fence, when the bone in his arm snapped. This is the second time he has broken the same arm in that way.

Judge Cason was busy yesterday issuing warrants of delinquent road workers in district No. 4, Big Bone; and district No. 1, Taylorsport. The sheriff will be commanded to arrest about 20 persons and bring them before the county judge to answer for their delinquency.

The Boone County Telephone Company has issued a new call card, on the back of which is stated the different points with which connections are made through the Bell. In fact its subscribers can now talk to any point reached by the Bell. Read the rules and then observe them closely when using your phone.

A Wonder Stone.

T. E. Livezey, 1889, when in Germany, came across a stone, which when properly prepared, removes corns and bunions, also is an excellent article for ladies to use for manicure purposes. He has them prepared under the direction of a noted chemist in Berlin, Germany. The name of the stone is a Bimstein. By using it you do not run the risk of blood poisoning as you do in cutting a corn, or of blistering your toe with a so-called corn salve. Dr. James Grant of Petersburg, recommends it. This is not an advertisement. The editor used it and found so much relief he wishes to let his readers, who suffer with corns, know how to get relief. Mr. Livezey's address is Newport Ky., and the price is 25 cents. If not satisfactory he says he will return money and postage.

A Costly Mistake.

Blunders are sometimes very expensive. Occasionally life itself is the price of a mistake, but you'll never be wrong if you take Dr. King's New Life Pills for Dyspepsia, Dizziness, Headache, Liver and Bowel troubles. They are gentle yet thorough. 25c at all drug stores.

Another Telephone Line.

It will be only a short time, the weather permitting, until a telephone line, known as the "Farmers' Line," will be built from Waterloo to Burlington, the office at this end of the line to be in Clutterbuck Bros.' store. One of the wealthy farmers on the route has declared that he is able to build the line if others will not take hold of the business; besides there are quite a number of persons along the line who are willing to bear their part of the burden.

Later—The Waterloo and Burlington telephone company organized last Saturday. Leonard Kite was elected President, and Charles Kelly, Secretary. The line will be put in operation as soon as the posts and wire can be put up. Eighteen 'phones have been subscribed for. This line will be a great convenience to the people in that neighborhood. R. B. Huey, Chas Kelly and R. S. Cowen have been selected by the company as commissioners to select the route over which the main line is to run from Waterloo to the brick residence occupied by Perry Beemon, on the East Bend road, as two routes have been proposed by which to proceed to that point—from Waterloo by Locust Grove school house, and across the country from Charlie Stephens', while the other is to follow the old road from Waterloo.

Hogs of 200 to 250 pounds weight are best for family use. In dressing a hog it should be so hung that it can be split down the back, and the sides allowed to separate, the head being cut off. The leaf and some other surplus fat should be removed at once. This allows the meat to cool thoroughly, and it is in good shape to handle. The meat barrel should be kept in a cool place without freezing. A good way to keep hams and shoulders after being cured is to slice and fry and pack in jars, covering with hot lard. Fresh pork may be kept this way in hot weather, but it must be thoroughly cooked While the cured meat requires much less cooking to preserve it.

Allow the hog to thoroughly cool before cutting, carefully trim hams and shoulders and split the sides in two lengthwise. Sprinkle bottom of barrel with fine salt, and rub each piece of meat with salt. Pack in barrel with hams on the bottom shoulders next and sides on top. After three days cover the meat with brine made as follows: Water, 8 gallons; salt, 12 pounds; sugar, 3 pounds; saltpeter, 3 ounces; concentrated lye, 3 teaspoons. Boil all together and skim. After cooling pour over the meat. Leave in brine from four to six weeks, then smoke as desired. The brine should be strong enough to bear up an egg.—Philadelphia Record.

DR. DOWIE WILL PAY UP.

Harmony Established Between Zion and Its Creditors.

Dr. Dowie's Presentation of Figures and His Offers of Settlement Were Satisfactory to Attorneys—Receivers May Be Removed.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—Financial difficulties which began during the crusade of John Alexander Dowie, the self-styled "Elijah II," and his restoration host to New York a month ago and which have been rapidly increasing since Dowie's return, culminated Tuesday night in the federal courts taking possession of all the property controlled by Dowie, in Zion City, Ill. This town, which was founded two years ago by Dowie, has a population of over 10,000, is the general headquarters for Dowie's church and is said to represent an expenditure of $20,000,000.

Fred M. Blount, cashier of the Chicago national bank, and Albert D. Currier, a law partner of Congressman Boutell, were appointed receivers of the property. Their bonds were fixed at $100,000.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—By a stroke of diplomacy John Alexander Dowie has established harmony between Zion, its receivers and its creditors in and out of court. He proposes to settle with his immediate creditors, to arrange with others on a reasonable time basis and to end the receivership. At a conference Sunday between the attorneys representing the heaviest creditors and Jacob Newman, attorney for the receivers, Dowie showed the lawyers a statement setting forth Zion's assets and liabilities. He declared he valued Zion estate at $14,000,000 above all liabilities. He exhibited large orders for lace and candy. He said neither lace nor candy factory could supply its orders. He showed an order for 75 carloads of candy from a Cincinnati firm. He showed a draft for $50,000 from a wealthy well wisher and declared he could draw for $200,000 more on one of Zion's friends in Wisconsin.

On this showing he offered to settle all urgent claims in cash and to put Zion on a cash basis in all future dealings with the outside world. With his heaviest creditors out of the way, he said his debts demanding immediate payment would not amount to more than $150,000. Samuel Stevenson's judgment for notes for $10,000 are not yet due.

Dr. Dowie's presentation of figures and his offers of settlement were satisfactory to the attorneys. His plan will be submitted Monday to a meeting of the receivers, their attorneys and the attorneys for the creditors, and, it is believed, will be accepted. In that event, receivers and all creditors will join hands with Dr. Dowie in a plea to Judge Kohlsaat to dismiss the pending litigation and permit Dr. Dowie freedom to gather funds and settle obligations.

A PITTSBURG FIRE.

The Hubbard Shovel Works Burned With Heavy Loss.

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 7.—The Hubbard shovel works, one of the largest manufacturers of the kind in the country, employing close to 1,000 men and covering a ground space of nearly five acres in Butler street, near the Sharpsburg bridge, was almost destroyed by fire, which broke out at 11:50 o'clock Sunday night. Before the fire department arrived the structures were a mass of flames, and as the water supply was short, it was but a short time until the plant was almost completely wiped out. J. W. Hubbard, president of the Hubbard Shovel Co., says the loss will be between $200,000 and $300,000 with but little insurance.

At 1:30 o'clock the fire was under control, having been confined to the Hubbard plant. This is the second time within two years that the plant has been burned and both times the lack of water was mainly the cause for its destruction. The fire department officials say the water in the mains was frozen and they were unable to get water from the river on account of ice on the shore.

THE WAR DEPARTMENT

Abstracts From Secretary Root's Annual Message.

Number of Enlisted Men Who Will Be Entitled to Increased Pay For Length of Service Next Year Will Be 37,765.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Following are abstracts taken from the annual report of Elihu Root, secretary of war:

On the 1st of December, 1902, the date of the last annual report, the army of the United States, according to the latest reports which had been received from the military departments, consisted of 3,586 officers and 66,003 enlisted men, a total of 69,589. In addition, there were in the service 3,658 men of the hospital corps excluded by the act of March 1, 1887, from classification as part of the enlisted force of the army. There were also in the service 182 volunteer medical officers, 100 officers and 4,978 enlisted men of the Philippine scouts, and 29 officers and 840 enlisted men of the Porto Rico regiment. There were also in the service 26 officers and 250 enlisted men of the Porto Rico regiment, 99 officers and 4,805 enlisted Philippine scouts, and 2,807 hospital corps men.

The acting adjutant general reports that the number of enlisted men who will be entitled to increased pay for length of service during the next fiscal year—that is to say, the men who will be serving under re-enlistment after the expiration of one or more terms of service—will be 37,765, and of these 10,173 will have had a continuous service of five years and upward.

The health of the army has been good, except during an epidemic of cholera in the Philippines, which occurred in the early part of the year, and is now ended. The detailed reports for 1902 show a total death rate, from all causes, of 15.49 men for each thousand of strength; 3.54 per thousand of these died of cholera, so that, including the victims of cholera, the record is 1.95 per thousand worse than the record of 1901, and, excluding them, it is 1.99 per thousand better than the record of 1901.

The reports of the generals commanding and of the inspectors general show that the food and clothing furnished have been satisfactory, and the arms and equipments of good quality. The transportation of troops and supplies has been promptly and effectively accomplished. The officers charged with maintaining the discipline and morale of the army have had to contend with the relaxation of orderly habits, which always results from active military operations, and with the injurious effects produced at a large number of posts by the abolition of the canteen; and the burden of the older and more experienced officers has been increased by the fact that so large a proportion of the junior officers brought in upon the enlargement of the army were necessarily without much military experience.

The organization of the general staff relieves the war college board of a wide range of general staff duties originally assigned to the board in the absence of any more complete organization, and this has made possible a simpler organization, adapted to the performance of war college duties proper, and constituting an adjunct of the general staff.

A special inspection of the entire organized militia of the country was promptly made after the passage of the law. This inspection was thoroughly and effectively conducted by 87 selected officers of the army, who in the aggregate visited 1,196 towns and cities, and inspected 196 regiments, separate battalions and squadrons, and 1,943 companies, troops, batteries and staff organizations. The total number of the organized militia, including officers of every rank and grade, was ascertained to be 116,542, of which 7,610 were officers of the line and 1,510 officers of the staff, making a total of 9,120 commissioned officers and 107,422 enlisted men; of this number 6,395 officers and 81,007 men were present at inspection.

Satisfactory progress has been made in the construction and armament of fortifications. Additional guns have been mounted as follows: Twelve 12-inch, three 10-inch, four 8-inch, seventy rapid-fire and thirty-one 12-inch mortars.

The ordnance department has made good progress in addition to the supply of heavy projectiles and smokeless powder. The engineers, the ordnance corps, the signal corps, the corps of artillery and the quartermaster's department all complain of an insufficient supply of experienced officers to do the work imposed upon them.

On the 15th of October, 1903, the American troops in the Philippines consisted of 843 officers and 14,667 enlisted men. Gen. George W. Davis, the division commander until the 25th of July, has reported that the number can be still further reduced, and I agree with that opinion.

Supplies For Asiatic Squadron.

New York, Dec. 7.—The United States cruiser Buffalo reached port Sunday from Hampton Roads and went to the Brooklyn navy yard to load supplies for the vessels of the Asiatic squadron. The vessel will be in port about a week.

Secretary Heath Will Not Resign.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—Perry S. Heath, secretary of the republican national committee, who arrived here Sunday night from Salt Lake, reiterated his statement that he had no intention of resigning from the committee.

BRIEFLY DESCRIPTIVE.

Not Many Words Required to Tell How the Whole Thing Happened.

"Private" John Allen, according to the New York Times, is responsible for this one:

Last year there were a number of claims for damages brought against one of the railroads in Mississippi by the farmers in a certain county of that state. These claims arose out of the fact that many hogs had been killed by the trains of the railroads in question. A mixed commission was formed of railroad men and others to determine the equity of these claims. Among others questioned by this commission was an old darky who claimed to have been an eye-witness of the annihilation of one hog.

"Now, uncle," said the chairman of the commission to Zeph:

"Tell us, in as few words as possible, how this hog was killed."

Old Zeph shifted a huge cud of tobacco from one cheek to the other, cleared his throat, and then replied:

"Well, sah," said he, "as nearly as I kin make it out, it was dis way: De train tooted an' den tuk him!"

Inconsistent.

"I'm so glad you chose the subject of 'Chinese Women,'" said Mrs. Flushby to Mrs. Gushly, who had just finished reading her paper. "The subject is so interesting. I never tire of hearing about the poor things."

"Mercy," thought the author of the paper, "I hope no one else stops to congratulate me before I get home. These new shoes pinch me so I can't stand it another minute!"—Detroit Free Press.

"I hear," said Hi Tragedy, "that while you were playing in one of the western towns a fire broke out in the theater."

"Yes," replied Lowe Comedy, "and there might have been a horrible panic but for one thing."

Bright's Disease Cured.

Whitehall, Ill., Dec. 7.—A case has been recorded in this place recently, which upsets the theory of many physicians that Bright's Disease is incurable. It is the case of Mr. Lon Manley, whom the doctors told that he could never recover. Mr. Manley tells the story of his case and how he was cured in this way:

"I began using Dodd's Kidney Pills after the doctors had given me up. For four or five years I had Kidney, Stomach and Liver Troubles. I was a general wreck and at times I would get down with my back so bad that I could not turn myself in bed for three or four days at a time.

"I had several doctors and at last they told me I had Bright's Disease, and that I could never get well. I commenced to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and I am now able to do all my work and am all right. I most heartily recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills and am very thankful for the cure they worked in my case. They saved my life after the doctors had given me up."

In the west the farmer, stock-raiser, merchant and manufacturer are busy, their products are bringing good prices, and the great agricultural belt of the Upper Mississippi Valley is enjoying a degree of prosperity that is probably unequaled in history.

The crops this year have been good, the acreage larger than ever before known and the beneficent results of the harvest far-reaching enough to have a favorable effect on every man, woman and child in the region.

Several expressions of opinion on the subject are being published by the passenger department of the North-Western Line, among them the following concerning Nebraska's outlook:

Governor Mickey says:

"Nebraska will produce 200,000,000 bushels of corn and over 40,000,000 bushels of wheat this year. Her total crop acreage is 13,000,000 acres and the value of live stock is over $150,000,000. Our state banks show an increase in deposits since June 9th of $1,016,299 and their reserve is 36.3 per cent., where the legal requirement is only 15 per cent.

"Nebraska's outlook is indeed promising. The state holds an enviable position in this great country of ours and her name is no longer synonymous with drought and poverty."

Senator Millard says:

"This being an agricultural region, it is most gratifying to say the farmers are very prosperous; the merchants have been doing an excellent business this year, and the outlook for all kinds of business is good."

Mr. Rosewater, publisher of the Omaha Bee, says:

"During my residence of forty years west of the Missouri I have witnessed marvelous strides of progress, but at no period within my memory have the people of this section been more generally prosperous and contented with existing conditions than they are at this time. The prosperity we are enjoying is not confined to any one class, but embraces the farmer, the stock-raiser, the merchant, the manufacturer and the wage-worker all alike."

Tipping—"I'm afraid the Balkers won't get along very well together." Fytcher—"I don't see why not. They are wholly in harmony, you know. She thinks there is nobody in the world who can come up to her husband, and he is certain of it."—Boston Transcript.

THE MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

President Roosevelt's Annual Communication to the National Legislators

The Isthmian Canal and the Panama Revolution Are Given Lengthy Consideration

Says the Department of Commerce and Labor Will Go Far Towards Solving the Trust Problem.

Calls Attention to Undesirable Immigration—Asks for More Stringent Naturalization Laws and Enforcement

Wants Commission to Investigate Needs of Merchant Marine—Post Office and Public Land Frauds —Our Foreign Relations.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

The country is to be congratulated on the amount of substantial achievement which has marked the past year both as regards our foreign and as regards our domestic policy.

With a nation as with a man the most important things are those of the household, and there is no country which can be congratulated in the direction of profiting by the exercise of supervision over the great corporations engaged in the business of corporations engaged in interstate commerce. The congress has created the department of commerce and labor, including the bureau of corporations, with for the first time authority to exercise proper publicity of such proceedings of these great corporations as the public has the right to know, and it has also given it the power of suits for the enforcement of the federal anti-trust law; and by another law it has secured final action in favor of shippers in the transportation of their goods, thus taking a long stride forward in making effective the work of the interstate commerce commission.

Bureau of Corporations.

The preliminary work of the bureau of corporations in the department has shown the wisdom of its creation. Publicity in corporate affairs will tend to do away with ignorance and with a good deal of the evil which intelligent action may be taken. Systematic, intelligent investigation is already developing much knowledge of which is essential to a right understanding of the needs and duties of the business men in the corporation which is honestly and fairly organized, whose managers in the conduct of its business recognize their obligation to deal squarely with their stockholders, their competitors, and the public, has nothing to fear from such supervision. The purpose of this bureau is not to embarrass or assail legitimate business, but to aid in bringing about a better industrial condition—a condition under which there shall be obedience to law and recognition of public obligation by all corporations, great or small. The department of commerce and labor will be not only the clearing house for information regarding the business transactions of the nation, but the executive arm of the government in the work of securing more equitable domestic and foreign markets, in perfecting our transportation facilities, in building up our merchant marine, in the proper regulation of the entrance of undesirable immigrants, in improving commercial and industrial conditions generally, and in spreading on common ground those necessary partners in industrial progress—capital and labor. Commerce is an international thing. It is steadily growing in volume, and the tendency of the times is toward closer trade relations. The constant watchfulness is needed to secure to Americans the chance to participate to the best advantage in foreign trade; and we may confidently expect that the new department will justify the expectation of its creators by the exercise of this watchfulness, as well as by the businesslike administration of such laws relating to our internal affairs as are intrusted to its care.

Capital and Labor.

The consistent policy of the national government, so far as it has the power, is to hold in check the unscrupulous man, whether employer or wage worker, who refuse to weaken individual initiative or to hamper or cramp the industrial development of the country. We can secure this in an era of federation and combination, in which great capitalistic corporations and labor unions play a leading part, of tremendous importance in all industrial centers. Hearty recognition is given the far-reaching, beneficent work that has been accomplished through both corporations and unions, and the line as between different corporations and between different unions, is drawn as it is between different individuals; that is, it is drawn on conduct, in effort being to treat the organized capital and organized labor alike; asking nothing save that the interests of each shall be brought into harmony with the interests of the general public, and that the conduct of each shall conform to the fundamental rules of obedience to law, of individual freedom, and of justice and fair dealing toward all men. Whether a corporation, labor union or individual disregards the law or acts in a spirit of arbitrary and tyrannous oppression toward the rights of others, whether corporations or individuals, then where the federal government has the power to interfere, we should see that the misconduct is stopped, paying not the slightest heed to the position or power of the corporation, the labor union or the individual, but only to one vital fact—that is the question whether or not the conduct of the individual or aggregate of individuals is in accordance with the law of the land. Every man must be guaranteed his liberty and his right to do as he likes with his property or his labor, so long as he does not infringe the rights of others. No man is above the law and no man is below it; nor do we ask any man's permission when we require him to obey it. Obedience to the law is demanded as a right, not asked as a favor.

Receipts and Expenditures.

From all sources, exclusive of the postal service, the receipts for the fiscal year for the last fiscal year aggregated $560,396,974. The expenditures for the same period were $506,069,067, the surplus for the fiscal year being $54,297,867. The indications are that the surplus for the present fiscal year will be very much smaller, and there be any surplus. From July to November the receipts from customs were, approximately, $100,000,000, or $15,000,000 less than from the same source for a corresponding portion of last year. Should this decrease continue at the same ratio throughout the fiscal year, the surplus would be reduced by, approximately, $30,000,000. Should the income from customs suffer much further decrease during the fiscal year, the surplus would vanish.

Financial Legislation Not Needed.

The integrity of our currency is beyond question, and under present conditions it would be unwise and unnecessary to attempt a reconstruction of our entire monetary system. The same liberty should be granted the secretary of the treasury to deposit customs receipts as is granted him in the deposit of receipts from other sources. In my message of December 3, 1902, I called attention to certain needs of the financial situation, and I again ask the consideration of the congress for these questions.

The Merchant Marine.

A majority of our people desire that steps be taken in the interests of American shipping in the seas, by some more reasonable and effective method than the causing of our flag to disappear from the carrying trade. But hitherto the differences of opinion as to the proper method of reaching this end have been so pronounced that it has proved impossible to secure the adoption of any one system. Recognizing in view these facts, I recommend that the congress direct the secretary of the navy, the postmaster general, and the secretary of commerce and labor, associated with such a representation from the senate and house of representatives as the congress in its wisdom may designate, to serve as a commission for the purpose of investigating and reporting to the congress at its next session what legislation is desirable or necessary for the development of the American merchant marine and American commerce, and incidentally of a national ocean-going service adequate for auxiliary naval cruisers and naval reserves. While such a measure is desirable in any event, it is especially desirable at this time in view of the fact that our present governmental contract for ocean mail with the American line will expire in 1905. Our ocean mail act was passed in 1891. In 1895 our 20-knot transatlantic mail line was equaled by foreign lines. In 1903 only 8 of 24 steamers have put on 23-knot steamers, and the British have 30 first-class 24-knot steamers. Our service should equal the best. If it does not, the commercial public will abandon it. Unless we stay in the business it ought to be with a full understanding of the advantages to the country on account of the military use of it, and with knowledge of the cost and proper methods of carrying it on. Moreover, lines of cargo ships as well as passenger steamers, and fast mail lines; save so far as the latter can be depended upon to furnish swift auxiliary cruisers in time of war. The establishment of new lines of cargo ships to South America, to Asia, and elsewhere would be much in the interest of our commercial expansion.

Immigration.

We cannot have too much immigration of the right kind, but we must have none at all of the wrong kind. The need of additional care in some system by which undesirable immigrants may be kept out entirely, while desirable immigrants are properly distributed throughout the country, is at present specially great. The kind of immigrants we have now, and in other years, is often a serious injury to the already congested, immigrants come in such numbers as to depress the conditions of life for those already there. During the last two years the immigration service at the port of New York has been greatly improved, and the corruption and inefficiency which formerly obtained there have been eradicated. This service has just been investigated by a committee of three, consisting of Hon. Benjamin F. Howell, of Mississippi; Messrs. Arthur V. Briesen, Lee K. Frankel, Eugene A. Philbin, and Thomas M. Mulry, citizens of New York. Their report deals with the whole situation at length, and concludes with certain recommendations for changes in executive and legislative action. It is now receiving the attention of the secretary of commerce and labor.

Naturalization Frauds.

The special investigation of the subject of naturalization under the direction of the attorney general, and the consequent prosecutions, reveal a condition of affairs calling for immediate attention of congress. Forgeries and perjuries of shameless and flagrant character have been practiced openly in the large centers of population, but throughout the country; and it is established beyond doubt that very many so-called citizens of the United States have come into whatever to that right, and are asserting and abusing the privileges of that high position in the grossest frauds. It is never to be forgotten that citizenship is, to quote the words pronounced by the supreme court of the United States, an "inestimable heritage," whether it proceeds from birth or from naturalization; and to obtain it by naturalization; and to poison the sources of our national character and the springs of our national life by the frauds in claimed and exercised without right, and by means of fraud and corruption. The body politic cannot be healthy and healthy if many of its constituent members claim their standing through the prostitution of the processes of the privilege of citizenship. It should mean something to become a citizen of the United States; and to this end process of law of some sort should be left open to fraud.

The federal grand jury lately in session in New York took up the subject and made a presentment which states the situation briefly and forcibly and contains important suggestions as to the prosecution of the congress. This presentment is transmitted as an appendix to the report of the attorney general.

Government Department Frauds.

In my last annual message, in connection with the subject of the regulation of combinations of capital which are or may become injurious to the public, I recommended a specific measure designed to better enforcement of the anti-trust law as it now stands, to be expended under the direction of the attorney general. Accordingly (by the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation act of February 25, 1903, chapter 854, p. 854) $500,000 was appropriated, for the purpose of enforcing the various federal trust and interstate commerce laws, to be paid out of the general appropriation for the department of justice and to be expended under the direction of the attorney general in the employment of special counsel and agents to assist in the work, subject to conduct proceedings and prosecutions under the said laws in the courts of the United States. I now recommend that this be made the utmost importance and urgency, the extension of the purposes of this appropriation, so that it may be available for use under the direction of the attorney general, and until used, for the enforcement of the laws of the United States relating to trusts, especially of the civil and criminal laws relating to public lands and the laws relating to postal crimes and offenses, and the subject of naturalization. Recent investigations have revealed the existence of conditions in these three matters of vital concern. By various frauds and by forgeries and perjuries the public lands have in large part passed into private ownership. The public domain, embracing lands of different character and extending through various stages of fertility and value, has been recklessly acquired. It is hardly necessary to urge the importance of recovering these lands for the people, and of punishing the offenders. I speak in another part of this message of the need of checking the evil which the sacred right of citizenship is falsely asserted and that "inestimable heritage" gained by means of the most unlawful means—that is, through frauds, forgeries and perjuries, and by shameless bribery—is the law relating to the prosecution of the public service in general and to the administration of the post office department have been notoriously violated, and many indictments have been found, and in many cases prosecutions are in course of hearing or on the point of trial. For the reasons thus indicated, and so that the government may be prepared to enforce promptly and with the greatest effect the due penalties for such violations of law, and to this end may be furnished with sufficient instrumentalities and competent legal assistance for the investigations and trials which will be necessary and many different points of the country, I urge upon the congress the necessity of making the said appropriation available for immediate use for all such purposes, to be expended under the direction of the attorney general.

New Extradition Treaties Needed.

Steps have been taken by the state department looking to the making of treaties with foreign powers to cover the case of bribery. An extraditable offense with foreign nations. The need of more effective treaties covering this crime is manifest. The exposures and prosecutions of officials, members of congress, and, in other cities and states have resulted in a number of jurors and talkers of bribes becoming fugitives from justice. Indeed, bribery has not been included in extradition treaties, as it has necessarily for it has not arisen. While there may have been as much official corruption in former years, there has been much developed and brought to light in the immediate past than in the preceding century. It is our duty to see that there should be the policy of the United States to leave no place on earth where a corrupt man may feel safe from punishment and rest in peace. There is no reason why bribery should not be included in all treaties hereafter negotiated, recent amended treaty with Mexico, whereby this crime was put in the list of extraditable offenses, has established a salutary precedent in this regard. Under this treaty the state department has asked, and the Mexican government has undertaken, the extradition of one of the St. Louis bribe givers.

The Alaskan Boundary.

For several years past the rapid development of Alaska and the establishment of growing American interests in regions heretofore unoccupied and imperfectly known brought into prominence the urgent necessity of a practical demarcation of the boundaries between the jurisdictions of the United States and Great Britain. Although the treaty of 1825 between Great Britain and Russia, the provisions of which were copied in the treaty of 1867, whereby Russia conveyed Alaska to the United States, was specific as to the course claimed by Russia and later by the United States, that a strip of territory along the continental mainland from the southernmost point of Prince of Wales island to Mount St. Elias, following the sinuosities of the indentations of the coast and including the islands to the westward, its description of the landward margin of this strip was indefinite, resting on the supposed existence of a continuous ridge of range of mountains skirting the coast at a distance inland nowhere to exceed ten marine leagues. The Canadian claim was that the strip in question should be measured from the line of the highest mountains, even though these were situated at a distance inland of many times ten marine leagues. Between the Portland canal (concerning which legitimate question no appeared) is defined as passing by Tongass Narrows and Tongass island to Revillagigedo island and Pearse islands; a line is drawn from the head of Portland canal to the fifty-sixth degree of latitude; that is, the interior border line of the strip is fixed by lines drawn parallel with the ocean boundaries lying between Portland canal and Mount St. Elias, and running along the crests of the mountains nearest the coast, except where they intersect the passages of slope from the inland watershed at not only part of the frontier where the dealt a definite line was drawn by the treaty of 1903. Ten marine leagues stipulated by the treaty as the extreme width of the strip is from the heads of Lynn canal and its branches.

The award is self-executing on the vital points. Two of the six members agreed with the others it only remains for the two governments to appoint, each on its own behalf, a jurist of repute, whose duty it will be, with all convenient speed, proceed together to lay down the boundary line in accordance with the award of the majority of the tribunal. I recommend that the congress make adequate provision for suitably compensating the gentlemen to be appointed as members of the commission on the part of the United States.

Claims Against Venezuela.

It will be remembered that during the second session of the last congress Great Britain, Germany and Italy formed an alliance for the purpose of blockading the ports of Venezuela and using such other means of pressure as would secure a settlement of the claims of their subjects against that country. The allies declined to submit the matter to the decision of the diplomatic representatives of the United States at Washington, thereby ending the ordinary course of international intercourse, and which proceeded to the seizing of the Venezuelan gunboats and the bombardment of the fortifications of Fort San Carlos. Subsequently the allies declined to submit the matter to the decision of the diplomatic representatives of the United States at Caracas

HIGHEST PRICED EGGS.

Are Whoppers and Cost $10,000 a Dozen—Form Unique World's Fair Exhibit.

Eggs 18 inches in narrowest circumference and nearly two feet long, that sell in the market at the rate of $10,000 per dozen, will be on exhibition at the World's Fair at St. Louis in 1904. These eggs belong to the United States government, and they are now in the custody of the ologist at the National Museum in Washington.

The latest addition to the government's fossil specimens in the egg line comes from the Island of Madagascar, in the Indian ocean, and is said to be the largest egg ever discovered. It was caught by an American scientist in

SAMUEL F. JONES,
Chairman Manufacturers' Committee, Kentucky Exhibit Association.

Paris and was forwarded to Washington. The government ologist said that the egg was that of the Aepyornis titan, a bird of the quaternary epoch, more gigantic even than the Aryporis maximus. The monster egg was excavated on the island of Madagascar, where it had lain for thousands of years. The huge shell, an inch thick, and weighing many pounds, is smooth and white and has probably not changed in general appearance since it was laid, in prehistoric times.

When this egg is shown at the World's Fair it will be placed beside the eggs of the humming bird, the ostrich and the domestic fowls for comparison.

Scientists claim that Uncle Sam, when his representative bought this incomparable specimen in Paris for a trifle less than 2,000 francs, got an unusual bargain. Eggs even smaller than this have sold at the rate of $6,000 to $10,000 per dozen. The same scientist predicts that these ancient eggs will increase in value, and cites the price of the eggs of the great auk. Although this bird was a pigmy in comparison, and has been extinct less than 60 years—Audubon having seen one in 1844—its eggs are worth $2,000 each. There are about 80 known specimens of the great auk's eggs. The egg of the Aepyornis is believed by many writers to be that of the roc, mentioned in the Arabian Nights, and long thought to be fabulous.

Besides these monster eggs found in recent explorations on the Island of Madagascar enough bones of this great bird have been found to enable paleontologists to form a more definite conception than ever before of its size. A section of the tibio-tarsus nearly 100 centimeters long, a section of a mandible 170 millimetres long, portions of the skull and other bones confirm scientists in their estimates that the Aepyornis towered above the dinoris. A skeleton of the latter in the National Museum shows that it was larger than the modern horse. That the Aepyornis maximus was still bigger, and that the Aepyornis titan, whose egg is the most amazing thing in ology, was even more gigantic than its enormous kindred, is proven by the late Madagascar excavations.

The eggs and the bones of this monstrous bird of the time of Sinbad the Sailor will be a feature of the government's exhibit at the World's Fair.

AGRICULTURAL BUILDING AT ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR.

—Contains a thousand feet more floor space than did the great Crystal Palace, in which were shown all the exhibits of the first World's Fair, in London, in 1851.

—Is 500 feet wide by 1,600 feet, or over a quarter of a mile in length.

—Has 800,000 square feet, equaling nearly 20 acres of floor space.

—Cost $529,940.

—Has light admitted by monitor windows without the use of skylights, thus protecting exhibits at all times from the direct rays of the sun and adding materially to the comfort of exhibitors and visitors.

—Is big enough to hold three Washington monuments laid end to end diagonally through it.

—Used as an apple bin, would hold a peck of fruit for each man, woman and child in the United States, the Philippines and Hawaii, and there would be a double supply for each of the Cubans.

—Could house 16 vessels of the size of the largest steamer afloat, the Cedric, and there would be room left for the landing stage.

—Has a capacity to accommodate 13 miles of freight cars, together with locomotives and way-cars enough to handle them.

—Arranged as a corn crib, would hold nearly the entire crop for two years of New England and New York, or half the 65,000,000 bushels constituting the average annual crop of Missouri.

—Converted into a vast silo, and filled, would store silage enough to winter many more than the 3,000,000 head of cattle shown by the last census to be in Missouri.

To make butter with a natural yellow color during the winter months is almost a lost art in this age of frauds and shams. While farmers and dairymen denounce oleomargarine as a fraud and want a law to prevent it from being colored yellow, they do not sell their own butter with its natural color, but use a few drops of butter color to give it an attractive tint. I supply a few private customers with butter, and while I do not claim that my butter is as dark a yellow in the winter as in the months when the cows are on pasture, yet it always has color enough to look well without adding artificial coloring to the cream. To make yellow butter in the winter without artificial aid requires extra care in making the butter, in feeding the cows and selecting the cows. Some cows will make a darker tinted butter than others. The Jersey cows are perhaps the best for making yellow butter in the winter and firm butter during the hot summer months. If butter color was not used this fact would add to the value of Jertey cows.

In feeding to make yellow butter I think there is nothing better than carrots. With a good supply of these roots, together with plenty of clover hay and good corn and bran, with the right care in handling the cream, it is possible to produce fine butter in cold weather. I generally have some blue grass left in the woods pasture in the fall, and the cattle can get a bite when there is no snow on the ground and the water.—Jersey Bulletin.

THE INAUGURATION.

Gov. Beckham For the Second Time Installed in Office.

The Inaugural Ball a Brilliant Society Event—A Summary of Gov. Beckham's Inaugural Address—A Magnificent Parade.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 8.—Arrangements for the inauguration of Gov. Beckham were carried out to the letter and the people of Frankfort entertained the 20,000 visitors in an eminently satisfactory manner. There was no truth in the statement that the inaugural ball had been declared off because of religious interest and excitement here. Instead, the social feature of the inaugural was on a grander scale than ever before. Heretofore the hall has been given only in the assembly ballroom of the Capital hotel. In addition to this room, the dining room of the hotel was turned into a ballroom, and two balls were going on simultaneously, while at the same time a reception by the outgoing and incoming state officials was held in the parlors of the hotel.

The fact that Gov. Beckham is the only man in 95 years who has been twice elected to the office of governor of Kentucky, and his strong political influence, together with the fact that both branches of the general assembly are overwhelmingly democratic, insured a very large inaugural demonstration.

A parade, civil and military, in which 3,000 to 5,000 persons took part, opened the ceremonies at 11 a. m. In the parade 1,200 members of the state guard, political clubs of Louisville, Lexington, Cincinnati, Covington and prominent persons from all over the state participated. A review of the state troops by the governor and his staff followed at 12:30 and the ceremonies of inauguration followed a half hour later. The oath was administered by Chief Justice A. R. Burnam, of the court of appeals. The ceremony was opened with prayer by Rev. C. C. Nugent, of the Methodist church. Following the inaugural address by Gov. Beckham, benediction was pronounced by Father Thos. S. Major.

Inaugural Address.

Gov. Beckham, in his inaugural address, said in part:

Before this magnificent gathering of representative Kentuckians I take to-day for the third time the oath of office as governor of this great commonwealth. With uplifted hand, with a heart profoundly touched by the immense responsibilities of the occasion, and with an unshaken faith in the beneficent providence of a merciful God, I again give promise to the people of my native state that for the next four years I shall see, so far as it is in the power of the chief executive, that your laws are faithfully and honestly enforced.

Habit has not decreased my reverence for the sanctity of this oath, for, if possible, I feel more than ever its gravity and importance, and I fully realize that I owe to the good and generous people who have so honored and trusted me a greater obligation than ever before. The satisfactory fulfilment of this obligation is the only ambition before me. It is the proudest moment of my life.

My pride is not exalted with the prospect of continued power, but my soul is filled with emotions that I may deserve this cherished evidence of your confidence and esteem. It is very gratifying to me and very fortunate for you, that you have elected along with me such able and capable men as your state officials, who, I am confident, will heartily cooperate with me in the effort to give you a most successful and creditable administration. In perfect harmony and accord we shall work together.

The democratic party commands us that we carry into effect its principles and instructions by an honest and economical conduct of the public business; by a rigid and impartial enforcement of the laws, by a careful, prudent and wise management of the public institutions, by a watchful and fearless policy in seeing, so far as the power in us lies, that life, liberty and property are as safe and well protected in Kentucky as anywhere else on earth, thus giving the lie to those who, for various and sordid motives, slander the name of this great commonwealth and vilify its splendid citizenship.

In every reasonable and possible way we shall lend aid and encouragement to the industrial and commercial development of Kentucky, to invite the investment of capital for the purpose of unlocking the vast natural resources with which the state is so richly blessed, and to make for our people a brilliant epoch in the material progress of life and that in all things we shall be true to that manly spirit and patriotic pride which thrills the heart of every genuine Kentuckian who loves his state and who is proud of its history and its heroes, is ambitious to see it grow and prosper, and who stands ready with matchless courage, and with unflagging strength to defend its honor and its fame against all who may assail it. Should we, in whole or in reasonable part, fulfil these directions given us by our party, then we may hope to deserve the generous confidence shown in us so emphatically on November 3.

This event typifies the beauty and strength of our form of government. It shows that those who administer your laws and rule over you are your servants, and not your masters, and that they owe their positions not to any divine right or hereditary fortune, but to the choice and suffrage of the people.

It is not expected or desired that I should, on this occasion, outline in detail the policies which shall be pursued by this administration, nor is it a matter of speculation on your part as to what my course in office shall be.

While the furious storms of partisan passion and civil discord have raged around me I have never hesitated for one instant in doing that which I believed to be honorable and to the best interests of my state.

On the night of February 3, 1900, just after the tragic death of my lamented predecessor, Gov. Gobel, I first took this oath as your governor. You remember the awful condition of affairs in the state at that time. I trembled at the great responsibility which fell so suddenly and unexpectedly upon my inexperienced shoulders.

But when the last words of that oath had left my lips I called upon God to help me do my duty, and to-day, under far different conditions, with our state tranquil and prosperous, I bow my head in reverence and love before that same God, the great ruler of us all, and humbly pray that he will strengthen and aid me to deserve this great honor and to make me a governor worthy of the best people the sun ever shone upon.

After the lunch hour and the entertainment of distinguished guests by Gov. Beckham at the executive mansion, a memorial service was held at the graveside of the late Gov. William Goebel in the State cemetery. Judge M. C. Saufley, of Stanford, delivered the oration. This was followed by a public reception from 5 to 7 p. m. at the governor's mansion. At 9 p. m. there was a reception at the Capital hotel, and an hour later Gov. Beckham opened the inaugural ball, the social affair of the day, at the assembly ballroom.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 9.—Beautiful women, scores upon scores of them, mingled with the sturdy manhood of Kentucky at the inaugural ball, the swellest of all of Kentucky's social functions, which was held in the Capital hotel Tuesday evening. Never before in the history of the state has the famous old hostlery been so crowded with the noted blue grass belles and the equally famed beauties from the "Pennyrile" district in the southwestern part of the state. For every beautiful woman there was a dazzling costume, and the ballroom, when the festivities were at their height, presented such a bewildering array of color as is seldom seen outside of fairyland. The handsome toilets of the ladies and the gorgeous uniforms of the officers of the state soldiery formed a pleasing contrast to the conventional black worn by the civilians, and delicately harmonized with the decorations.

It was nearly 10 o'clock before the reviewing line was formed. Shortly after that the grand march, led by Gov. and Mrs. J. C. W. Beckham, moved through the corridors and into the ballroom. The guests danced in both the ball and dining rooms, which latter had been cleared of its tables for that purpose. This marks an epoch in the inaugural balls. Heretofore the dancers have been confined to the ballroom only, and it has always been so crowded that it was decided to use the dining room. At that both rooms were crowded almost to suffocation, and the guests danced far into the morning.

MARITIME NATIONS.

Resolution Directed Toward the Reduction of Naval Armament.

Washington, Dec. 12.—Representative Gibson, of Tennessee, Friday introduced a resolution directed toward the reduction of the naval armament of the maritime nations of the world. It authorizes the president to open negotiations with such and so many of the maritime nations of the earth as he may deem expedient for the purpose of formulating some international agreement whereby the naval armaments of each nation shall be reduced to the minimum consistent with the adequate policing of its own waters and shores and the protection of its own citizens in other lands; the international suppression of piracy, privateering and letters of marque on the high seas, and with the efficient enforcement of international obligations and the maintenance of international peace."

The resolution was referred to the proper committee.

GOV. BRADY'S REPORT.

He Urges Provisions For Alaska's Representation in Congress.

Washington, Dec. 12.—Gov. Brady, of Alaska, in his annual report to the secretary of the interior, urges provision for Alaska's representation by a delegate in congress and says that Alaska's main need is for pioneers and home builders. He urges abolishment of the fee system for United States commissioners and deputy marshals and the extension of the homestead laws. Gov. Brady says that those who have traveled throughout the territory this year are certain that Alaska today has a smaller white population than it had in 1900 and that it is migratory. In view of these facts the governor deprecates the agitation for a change of government of Alaska from district to territorial, though aspiring to statehood when Alaska fills with a desirable population.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY ENDORSES PE-RU-NA.

Pe-ru-na Drug Co., Columbus, Ohio:
Gentlemen: "I can cheerfully say that Mrs. Schley has taken Pe-ru-na and I believe with good effect."
W. S. SCHLEY.—Washington, D. C.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY, one of the foremost notable heroes of the Nineteenth Century. A name that starts terror in the heart of every Spaniard. A man of steady nerve, clear head, undaunted courage and prompt decision.

Approached by a friend recently, his opinion was asked as to the efficacy of Peruna, the national catarrh remedy. Without the slightest hesitation he gave this remedy his endorsement. It appeared on later conversation that Peruna has been used in his family, where it is a favorite remedy.

Such endorsements serve to indicate the wonderful hold that Peruna has upon the minds of the American people. It is out of the question that so great and famous a man as Admiral Schley could have any other reason for giving his endorsement to Peruna than his positive conviction that the remedy is all that he says it is.

The fact is that Peruna has overcome all opposition and has won its way to the hearts of the people. The natural timidity which so many people have felt about giving endorsements to any remedy is giving way. Gratitude and a desire to help others has inspired thousands of people to give public testimonials for Peruna who heretofore would not have consented to such publicity.

Never before in the annals of medicine has it happened that so many men of national and international reputation have been willing to give unqualified and public endorsements to a proprietary remedy. No amount of advertising could have accomplished such a result. Peruna has won on its own merits. Peruna cures catarrh of whatever phase or location in the human body. That is why it receives so many notable and unique endorsements.

New Two Cent Stamps.

Nineteen hundred and three is a notable year for stamp collectors. It has been a new series of postage stamps and three designs for the two-cent stamp; the design with the profile of Houdon's bust of Washington, which had been in use for 22 years; the nearly full face of the Stuart portrait of Washington, draped with the flag, which has just been abandoned because the engraving was not satisfactory; and, as its successor, a larger head, in the Stuart pose, framed by a shield. It is not often that collectors can get three patterns of a stamp of the same denomination issued within 12 months. Yet coin-collectors will recall that three different kinds of five-cent pieces bear the date of 1883.

Generous, But—

There was a worthy Irish member of parliament who was so generous that a request for financial assistance was never refused. But his checks had one little drawback—they were never honored. The shortcoming naturally in time became known, but it did not affect his popularity. A visitor to the district, hearing of the member's peculiarity, asked a leading politician how it was that public faith in the member was not shaken. "Why, sure, it is because he shows his willingness to assist, but for lack of funds," was the reply.

The Chrysanthemum.

Cultivation of the chrysanthemum in China may be traced back to a very early date. Already in the eleventh century two strains were cultivated, the one bearing yellow ray flowers and the other white. Dr. Henry, who has collected specimens now in the herbarium at Kew, England, believes that two wild plants are the progenitors of all the cultivated strains. The yellow flowers found throughout China and Japan. The white flower comes originally from Hupeh, China.

Remarkable Telescope.

With a 13-inch parabolic reflector of only 20 inches focus, Prof. Schaeberle has obtained, with less than five minutes' exposure, images of stars which are apparently too faint to be seen in the great 36-inch telescope of the Lick observatory. The little instrument also reveals, with a similarly short exposure, all the starts that the large Crossley reflector of three feet diameter is able to picture with an exposure of two hours.—Youth's Companion.

Valuable Wine.

In the famous cellars of a hotel at Bremen there are a dozen casks of holy wine which have been preserved for 250 years. If the cost of maintaining the cellar, payment of rent, interest upon the original value of the wine and other incidental charges are considered, a bottle of this choice wine has cost $2,000,000, each glassful $270,000, and a single drop could not be sold without loss under $200.

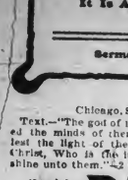
The Glorious Gospel of Christ



It Is All That the World Needs--Responsibility of the Christian.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Dec. 13, 1903.

Text.--"The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, Who is the image of God, should shine unto them."--2 Cor. 4:4.

PAUL called the religion which he preached the glorious Gospel of Christ. He was an enthusiastic, persistent, proficient, consistent and intensely sincere exponent and promulgator of the faith which had been committed unto him. Like the energetic drummer who has a superior and greatly-needed article which he is placing on the market, and which he loses no opportunity of offering to the tradesmen whom he is able to reach, so Paul, conscious of the power of his message, and burdened with a sense of the need everywhere for that message, lost no opportunity of preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ. He was "instant in season and out of season." It made no difference to Paul where circumstance found him, his supreme purpose was to tell the story of Christ. Whether in the synagogue or by the wayside, whether on shipboard or on journey by land, whether surrounded by the superstitious ignorance of Asia Minor or the culture and wisdom of the Greeks, whether standing in the presence of kings and rulers or sitting on the river bank with a few women as his auditors, whether in prison chained to his Roman guard or dwelling in his own private house, whether working hard day after day at his trade of tent making or resting on the Sabbath day, he never failed to count the situation in which he found himself as an opportunity for the preaching of the Gospel. It had come to be to him "the glorious Gospel of Christ."

BUT it had not always been such. He used to call it heresy, and took delight in witnessing the imprisonment and death of the disciples of the despised Gospel. While under the power of the "god of this world" his mind was darkened so that he was blind to the beauties and glories of the Gospel, but when the light of that Gospel had shattered the bars of his will and flooded his soul, he was crushed to the ground by a sense of his awful mistake. Surely it was a glorious Gospel which could take him, the "chiefest of sinners," and transform him into the humblest of saints, which could turn the bitterest foe into the most loyal disciple, which could mould a proud, exclusive, bigoted Pharisee into the great apostle to the Gentiles. But this is what the Christ of the Gospel which he preached had done for him, and it was only part of the story. He had seen multitudes at the thriving, busy city of Antioch changed from money-getting, pleasure-loving people to generous-hearted, noble-minded Christians, who delighted to send relief to the poor Jews at Jerusalem and gave gladly and willingly their beloved Paul and Barnabas to the heathen world. He had seen idol-worshiping people, steeped in all the evil and licentiousness of their pagan religion, freed from their bondage through Christ and living pure, holy, self-sacrificing lives. He had seen men and women snatched from the maelstrom of vice which surged through the city of Corinth and made clean in their lives and filled with zeal for God. He had seen the wicked and cruel jailer at Philippi transformed into an humble, repentant and tender man. And at Ephesus, probably at the time he wrote his letters to the Corinthians, he was witnessing the power of the glorious Gospel, as the people who had accepted the truth of the Christ brought their books of black art and sorcery and burned them in the public square. It was the Glorious Gospel of Christ, indeed. Both from his own personal experience, and what he had seen wrought in the lives of others, he knew that the tidings of the Christ were the most glorious tidings which the world had ever heard. And it is still the glorious Gospel.

IT is the glorious Gospel because of its origin. It bears the stamp of Heaven. The love and mercy and justice of God can be traced all through it. And herein is the difference between the religion of Jesus Christ and the great world religions. The latter are the inventions of men; the former is the marvelous working out of God's plans made before the foundation of the world. Man in the imaginations of his own heart can devise systems of religion, but invariably man is left to the hopeless task of attaining by his own efforts the higher and better life of the hereafter. But the Gospel of Christ is from above. It does not set man to a hopeless task, but invites him to the acceptance of a salvation and righteousness which are by faith. Water will not rise higher than its source, and man cannot push himself above his own level. But God can reach down and lift man up until he stands in His very presence and joins his song with that of the angels over the glorious salvation in Christ Jesus. The tabernacle was constructed after a pattern delivered to Moses by God, and in its many details typified the Christ and gave to the Jewish nation and the world a foregleam of the Messiah and Redeemer. It was so with the Temple which Solomon built. The plans were delivered to David by God and then given in turn to Solomon to execute. The Temple, the plan of which was prepared in Heaven, again typified the Christ who was to come. The prophets of old realized that God was preparing a great and universal blessing for mankind. Peter says: "The prophets inquired and searched diligently," and then "prophesied of the grace that should come unto you; searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when He testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the GLORY that should follow. Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the Gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost sent down from Heaven." And not only were the prophets seeking to discover what God was planning and doing, but Peter goes on to say that the angels of Heaven desired to look into these things. God could give nothing less than a glorious gift. And it is the glorious Gospel because Christ, who is the theme of the Gospel, is glorious.

AND it is the glorious Gospel because it has accomplished that for which it was sent—the redemption of man. The sun is glorious because it gives light and heat and life-giving energy, the purposes for which is was created. Had it failed when it was hung in the heavens by God to perform that for which it was created, the earth would not have rejoiced in its light and warmth and would not have called it the glorious sun. Man makes a machine to do a certain definite work. When it is all completed and set up the inventor puts it to the test to see if it will operate successfully. When it does he is elated and rejoices exceedingly; a glory has come to the machine which it did not possess before it proved its power to perform the work expected of it. In the east there is a professor who has spent a lifetime upon the problem of air navigation. With thousands of dollars at his command he has built a most wonderful machine. It looks as though it ought to fly and would fly. But when tested, instead of soaring off into the blue heaven and bringing glory and fame to its inventor and itself, it rushed downward to ruin. How ridiculous it would sound to set to praising the machine and to call it the glorious airship. And if the Gospel of Christ had not accomplished that for which it was intended by God we would not hear Paul calling it the glorious Gospel, nor hear multitudes throughout the years since the good tidings were proclaimed by the angels on Bethlehem's hills rejoicing in the power and blessing of the glorious Gospel. The light of the Gospel has brought cleansing and healing and rejoicing into every place where it has found entrance. Sin has been punished, man has been delivered, and brought back into fellowship with God, death has been overcome, and the riches and fullness of Heaven have been made accessible. Paradise lost through sin is now Paradise regained through Christ. This is the message of the Gospel. This is why the Gospel is the glorious Gospel. Christ has accomplished that whereunto He was sent.

FURTHER, it is the glorious Gospel to-day, because it is still the only message of hope to a dying and lost world. At one time when Ingersoll was billed to lecture against this glorious Gospel of Christ in a certain town, a former classmate and friend of the lecturer, who had been to the very depths of hell in his debauchery and shame, but who was rescued by the power of the Christ who had reached down and saved him and restored him to his wife and children and friends and society, wrote to the infidel as follows: "You may not know my history since we parted as students, but I was swallowed up of sin. I went down, down, down, until I was a poor, despised outcast, and when I thought there was none to help and none to save there came one in the name of Jesus, who told me of His power to help, and through the story of the cross of Christ, I turned to Him. He made a clean, upright man of me. He gave me back my home, my wife, my children. He did for me what all else had failed to do. And now would you, old friend, attack a religion that can go down to the lowest depths of hell and find a man and restore him? What can you say against a religion like that?" It is said Mr. Ingersoll read the letter to his audience and declared he had nothing to say against a religion like that, but that he would talk about a "religion which is being preached by the preachers." Rather a lame reply, surely. And the case of this friend of the infidel is but one of the hundreds and thousands which are proving that the Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation. It is the glorious Gospel still because it continues to transform lives, it continues to cure the world's evils as nothing else ever has. It continues to bless and help wherever its glorious light penetrates.

ANOTHER reason why it is the glorious Gospel of Christ is that it is a complete Gospel. On God's part it needs nothing more to make it effective and abiding. Paul had trouble with false teachers who sought to improve the glorious Gospel, who tried to tack on various amendments, and if he were alive to-day he would find even greater need to cry out against this great wickedness, for men have not ceased to attempt to remodel and recast the Gospel of Christ. Having their minds darkened and being puffed up in the wisdom of the world they misinterpret and misapply the truth of the Gospel. It becomes distorted and disrupted. But the Gospel needs not the touch of human wisdom to make it complete. Everything which man makes is subject to change and improvement. The article or machine made to-day is out of date to-morrow because some improvement produces a superior machine. Man's handiwork never bears the stamp of "nothing beyond." But not so with what God does. His glorious Gospel is all that it can be and needs to be. It is absolutely complete. The only thing which remains to be done is for man to apply the perfect Gospel to his needs. Theoretically sin has been punished and man reconciled to God. The sin of the whole world rested upon the Christ as He suffered on the cross. It remains for man to appropriate the mighty truth of that sacrifice. The reason a soul is not saved is not because Christ has not made full atonement for sin, but because the soul does not accept the truth of that atonement. It is not necessary that Christ go upon the cross again and die in order that the sinner to-day may find cleansing from sin. Christ suffered once and for all for sin. His blood cleanses from all sin. And the only thing which shuts the sinner away from the cleansing and deliverance which Christ has wrought for him is refusal to accept an accomplished fact. The Gospel is forever complete, and because of this blessed fact is, indeed, the glorious Gospel.

BUT the god of this world is busy blinding the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ should shine unto them. Here is the great, golden, glorious light of the sun shining upon the world, and here is a poor deluded man who shuts himself within the walls of his home. He draws the blinds close and chinks up the cracks. He then lights the feeble gas jet or the lamp and, priding himself on the light which he has made, shouts to the man standing in the flood of blessed sunlight outside that he cannot see any sunlight, and does not believe that it is shining at all; that the man in the sunlight does not know what he is talking about. A man who would thus deny the existence of the sunlight because he had shut himself away from that light would be pronounced a fool, and yet that is exactly what the soul which refuses to see the light of the glorious Gospel is doing. The "Light has come into the world, but men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil." As the sunlight flooding the earth is ready to burst into the darkened room as soon as the blinds are raised, so the blessed light of the Gospel is filling the earth and waiting to burst into the darkened chamber of the soul as soon as the blinds of unbelief are raised. How foolish for man to shut himself up within himself and cry: "I see no glorious light." The man standing without and rejoicing in that light shouts back: "Open the window and let the light come in and then you will see and rejoice even as do I." Oh, that men would! But the heart of unbelief remains cold and dark and hopeless. Refusing to yield to the God of Heaven it has become subject to the god of this world, who blinds the mind and shuts out the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ.

A GREAT responsibility rests upon those to whom the light has come. If it is indeed to you the glorious Gospel, why should you not be eager to speak of its glories to others? What selfishness on the part of the Christian to possess so rare a gift and not be willing and anxious that others should come into possession of it, too. How many light-under-the-bushel Christians we have. No wonder the light becomes feebler and feebler unto them, until they begin to doubt whether the light of the glorious Gospel has ever really shined in their hearts at all. The light put under the bushel flickers and gasps and dies because it cannot live long in the stifling atmosphere. The oxygen is soon exhausted and then out it goes. So it is with the light of the glorious Gospel shut within the heart of the Christian. It is soon dimmed. It cannot long shine there. It must shine unto others if it would flood the life within. "There is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty," is profoundly true in reference to the Christian who withholdeth the blessed Gospel from those with whom he comes in contact, and it tendeth to a miserable state of poverty of the soul. But "there is that scattereth, and yet increaseth." The more one gives of the light of the Gospel to others the more brightly does the inner light burn. Paul exclaimed: "Woe is me, if I preach not the Gospel," and woe is everyone to whom the light of the glorious Gospel has come, if they shed not forth that light so that it may shine unto others.

"'Tis a true and faithful saying,
Jesus died for sinful men;
Tho' we've told the story often,
We must tell it o'er again.
Oh, glad and glorious Gospel!
With joy we now proclaim
A full and free salvation,
Through faith in Jesus' name."

TRAINS IN A WRECK.

Five Men Killed and Several Hurt Near Piedmont, W. Va.

Five Persons Dead and Ten Injured Near Albia, Ia.--Three Killed and Five Injured in a Collision Near Adel, Ia.

Piedmont, W. Va., Dec. 14.—Five men were killed and several severely injured by the overturning of two engines, attached to a heavy B. & O. freight train on the "17-mile grade" Sunday near this city.

The dead: Engineer Ernest D. Ervin, 28 years old, Cumberland, Md.; Engineer Emery Ervin, 56, of Tunnelton, W. Va.; Fireman Walter B. Mine 32, Terra Alta, W. Va.; Fireman J. V. Carter, 28, North Carolina (boarded in Cumberland); Brakeman John Hays, 23, Staunton, Va.

The more seriously injured were: Engineer Michael J. Gibbon, 30 years of age, Cumberland, Md., fatally crushed; Fireman E. C. Buckler, Terra Alta, W. Va., legs, arms and head cut and bruised; Brakeman P. F. Bollinger, Grafton, W. Va., seriously crushed.

While descending the "17 mile grade" the train, to which were attached two engines, left the track. The engines and nearly all of the 24 loaded cars tumbled into a deep ravine, carrying the trainmen with them. The tracks were torn up for nearly a hundred yards, but it is thought that traffic will be resumed in a few hours.

Ottumwa, Ia., Dec. 14.—Five persons were killed and ten injured in a wreck Sunday morning on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road, three miles west of Albia, Ia. The westbound passenger train was in some manner derailed while running on to the Cedar creek bridge, and five cars were wrecked by collision with the steel girders of the bridge. The wreckage immediately took fire and several of the victims were badly burned.

Just what caused the accident is a mystery. As soon as the engineer noticed there was something wrong, he applied the air brakes, but was unable to stop the train. Five cars were completely burned and the remaining coaches badly damaged.

The work of rescue was carried on with difficulty, as the cars took fire immediately after the accident and the bridge is a high one. The injured were taken to Albia and Ottumwa.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 14.—Three men were killed and four injured in a freight collision early Sunday morning on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road, near Adel, Ia. A double-header west-bound and an extra freight east-bound came together in a deep cut on a sharp curve. Three engines and 14 cars were entirely demolished.

COMMITTED SUICIDE.

Ex-Clerk in Paymaster General's Office Fired Bullet Into His Brain.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Standing before a looking glass to make sure aim, Joseph Harnie Thidsheau, 61 years of age, of Falls Church, Va., shot himself through the forehead in a local hotel some time between 9 o'clock Saturday night and 1 o'clock Sunday. He was formerly a clerk in the paymaster general's office. A letter found on the bureau, believed to have been written just before the suicide, shows Thidsheau to have been in financial straits and that he imagined himself to be the victim of a conspiracy.

Prior to coming to Washington four years ago the writer says he had been a citizen of Atlanta, Ga., continuously engaged in business enterprises, for 37 years.

STORMY WEATHER.

Twenty-Eight Degrees Below Zero in Wisconsin.

A Blizzard in the Northwest—Sunday the Coldest Day in Chicago For This Season of the Year Since 1876.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 14.—The minimum temperature reached in Wisconsin Sunday was 28 degrees below zero at Unity, in the northern portion. The cold wave is general in the state. Street thermometers in Milwaukee registered 16 below. Eighteen families applied to the associated charities Sunday for assistance, but no fatalities are reported.

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 14.—The northwest Sunday experienced the coldest weather of the season, the thermometer ranging from 4 to 24 degrees below zero at the various stations of the weather bureau. There is apparently no prospect of immediate relief. Trains on all railroads are delayed because of the intense cold. In this city the minimum was 23 below, reported early in the morning. The maximum for the day was minus 8 degrees. Towards night the mercury again began to settle in the tube and at 9 o'clock stood at 12 below zero.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—Sunday was the coldest day in Chicago for this season of the year since 1876. Early Sunday morning the temperature began to go down until at 8 a. m. it had reached 13 below. The only time that this mark has been passed in the history of the weather bureau was December 9, 1876, when 14 below was registered. During the day it began to moderate and Sunday night the mercury was hovering around the zero mark, and the indications for Monday are for warmer weather with snow storms.

On account of the cold and the heavy condition of the streets owing to the heavy fall of snow Saturday the three story department store of Bodinski & Co., in West Twenty-second street, was destroyed. A special call for engines was sent in but before they could reach the scene of the fire through drifts of snow the building had been completely destroyed, causing a loss of $85,000.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 14.—Detroit was Sunday night having its first zero weather of the winter. At 9:30 o'clock the thermometer in the weather bureau registered 3 degrees above zero. The thermometer has hovered between 10 and 5 degrees above zero all day, accompanied by a 20 miles an hour wind.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 14.—A terrific wind and snow storm swept over the upper peninsula Sunday, and all trains are delayed. Some have managed to pull through, but others are completely stalled. The car ferry at Mackinaw is held up on account of the storm and roads through the country are impassable. It is one of the worst storms in years.

HUGH M'KINNON DEAD.

The Once Famous Athlete Succumbed to Heart Disease.

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 14.—A special from Dawson says: Hugh McKinnon, once a famous athlete, died suddenly in Dawson Saturday night. His death was probably due to heart disease. For the last two years he had been chief officer in the Yukon to prevent the establishment of illicit distilleries and the smuggling of liquors into the territory.

From 1874 to 1879 McKinnon held the heavyweight championship as an all-around athlete in the United States and Canada. He was awarded more than a thousand prizes in clubs, the Philadelphia centennial and European sweepstakes. He retired in 1879 undefeated.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The republican national convention will be held in Chicago, beginning at noon, June 21, next, the republican national committee reaching this conclusion Saturday and adjourned subject to call. THE HANNA Presidential boom continues to boom, and his attitude towards it is highly satisfactory to the Senator's rooters.

GOV. BECKHAM is the only person that ever took the oath, as Governor, three times in Kentucky, and is the only Governor of the State in the last one hundred years who has succeeded himself.

THE New York Sun is good Republican authority, and according to it the Republicans are becoming badly demoralized in the State of New York. The Sun is undoubtedly alarmed because of the factional disturbance in the party there.

A LONG pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether, is the motto of those who advocate locking and damning the Ohio river, and they will work hard to have Congress to make a large appropriation this winter for that work.

Of assassins, that one who assassinated Miss Gelespie, of Rising Sun, one night last week, while she was arranging her parlor for the reception of guests, was most inhuman. Law does not provide a penalty severe enough for such a crime.

A CHICAGO doctor has discovered that too much washing of the person is very detrimental to good health. His scheme for keeping clean is by frequent changes in clothing. He is taking issue with the maxim that cleanliness is next to godliness.

ADGT. GENERAL DAVID R. MURRAY'S resignation has been accepted by Gov. Beckham, and Percy Haly appointed in his place. In his report to the Governor, General Murray says:

"The guard is now in such condition that I can confidently say that it is the best equipped, best organized, best drilled and the most efficient State Guard that has ever been in the service of the State."

It is evident that the above was not written by General Murray while the guard was on duty in Frankfort, last Tuesday.

FROM the following it is concluded that the editor of the Blue-Grass Clipper is not a very great admirer of Master Percy Haley. In his last issue he says:

"And so Percy Haley is to be made Adjutant General of our great Commonwealth. It seems to us that the Governor could just as easily appoint men to such places who would add some dignity and respect to the positions as to put in charge of them men of mediocrity and no claims to the respect and regard of the people in the state. We had hoped that Governor Beckham's re-election would tend to pull him away from some of his associates of immature years, but he seems determined to fasten them on the state for another four years. We are picking no quarrel with the young Executive for whose success we worked as best we could. We would like to pick some of his advisers, however."

"Benjamin B. Odell's attitude of unconcealed hostility toward and undisguised contempt for President Roosevelt has been completely put aside, and the appearance of a very respectable and friendly assiduity has been substituted therefor. There is not a Republican leader in the State of New York who misunderstands the meaning of it, and not an honest and intelligent Republican whose heart is not filled with dismay at the prospect. It is the blackest outlook that the Republican party has ever had to face in the State.

"And there is no avenue or channel of redemption! No way in which the infamy, the confusion and the humiliation, the treachery, the corruption, the graft, and the pollution of State and Party, can be put aside! Mr. Roosevelt's most implacable enemies could never have conceived for him the disaster which is already and irrevocably his. And of all the Union, in his own State, New York!"—New York Sun.

WHEN Mr. Bryan returns from his European tour and doffs his silk tile, he may condescend to inform the common people that he is no longer to be considered in connection with the Democratic nomination for president. The party is anxious to have a public declaration from him declining—one with no string to it.

THE advance sheets of his report to the Governor and Legislature have been give out by Superintendent of Public Instruction H. V. McChesney. In the report he suggests that the General Assembly enact a law providing for a uniform system of text books for the state, with a maximum price therefor. He says:

"In addition to the excessive price paid for books under the present system there is another difficulty. Under the present law each county has its own adoption. It is possible that adjoining counties may have entirely different books. Where this condition exists, or where the adoptions differ only in part, persons moving from one county to the other must necessarily lose such of their old books as are not in use in the new county."

In his argument in favor of extending the school year from five to ten months he says:

"A few years ago Kentucky had more teachers than schools. The conditions have been reversed and there are now more schools than teachers. Quite a number of counties this year have a shortage of teachers, many rural districts are not having a fall term. Many of the best teachers have deserted the profession. Even if the salary is no better in the new field, it is for twelve months in the year, instead of five. This wholesale desertion from the ranks means that teaching at least in the rural districts, is becoming less a profession and more a makeshift. It is within the power of the General Assembly to greatly improve these conditions without increasing the taxes.'

The present 50 cent state tax is apportioned as follows: Twenty-two and one half cents to general fund, 22 cents to school fund, 5 cents to sinking fund and ½ cent to the State College. He estimates that two cents will be sufficient to keep the sinking fund intact. This will enable the General Assembly to transfer three cents from the sinking fund to the school fund. The general fund is in such a condition that a transfer of 2½ cents could also be made to the school fund from the general fund. If these two transfers can be made, the 5½-cent addition to the school fund will increase its revenues, including additional amounts it would receive from miscellaneous sources as a result of the new apportionment, about $400,000 annually.

He urges the abolishment of the present trustee system, and instead provision made for a county board of education, elected by the people, and clothed with authority to build school houses, purchase apparatus and supplies and employ all teachers.

State Auditor Coulter has just finished his biennial report, the copy now being in the hands of the printer. It covers the period of 1902 and 1903. One of the most attractive features is a table arranged in alphabetical order, giving the names, dates, addresses and amount of capital stock of all the corporations in Kentucky. He shows that during the period named there have been organized in Kentucky corporations of the aggregate value, in capital stock of $75,000,000. He expresses the opinion that the legislature should reduce the tax on the property and capital stock of all corporations to fifty cents on the $100 and that the amount of taxation for general purposes should be reduced from 22½ to 20 cents. He recommends an application of certain funds to the school funds and provide for the lengthening of the school term.

NUMEROUS bills will be presented to the legislature this winter, proviiding for the appropriation of money in very large amounts, and it will require men of excellent judgment to discriminate between those that are meritorious and those that are not, in every instance. Cool, determined, good business men it is hoped will be sufficient in number in the body to keep the appropriations confined to the proper channels. Don't let the good that has been accomplished in the last few years be destroyed this winter.

AT the next session of the legislature a bill will be introduced appropriating $1,250,000 for making improvements and additions to the asylums for the insane, at Lexington, Lakeland and Hopkinsville, and the feeble minded institute and the deaf and dumb asylum. Each will receive $250,000.

HAS anybody heard of anything that was done by President Roosevelt's extraordinary session of Congress?

The largest and best turkeys bring the most money. But don't sell them all because you are greedy for money and keep inferior stock for breeders. The breeding stock should be selected from earliest hatches. Be sure they are healthy in every way. They should not be overgrown. Medium sized turkeys, with well rounded bodies and large through the breast, have strong vital organs and will be found satisfactory for breeding the coming season.

Supt. Snyder brought to this office, last Thursday morning two large, ugly worms that he found in a block of oak wood. These worms were not far apart in the block and were about three inches long and one-half inch in circumference. They were total strangers to Mr. Snyder, who says he has found quite a number of them in timber he has prepared for fuel. They are not hatched in the timber but eat their way into the body of the tree as it is shown by the holes that lead to the apartments they occupy.

Thornton Blankenbeker, 71, one of the county's oldest and most respectable citizens died at his home in Gunpowder neighborhood on the 9th inst., after a few days illness of heart trouble. His life was spent on the farm in which pursuit he was successful, and was surrounded with comforts found on a well managed farm. The remains were interred in the Blankenbeker burrying ground on Gunpowder.

Better Than a Plaster.

Hubert Conner, who resides near Hebron, lost his barn house and green house by fire, last Thursday night. The loss amounts to about $300. No insurance. He knew nothing of the fire until Friday morning, when Jacob Lodge, who lives near him, discovered what had happened during the night and went over and awoke him. The fire is supposed to have resulted from some defect in the green house furnace. Sixty-five fine hens and several young chickens were burnt, while a great many nice flowers were destroyed.

At a gathering of Boone County farmers at Burlington last week $15,000 worth of stock was sold in the Burley Tobacco Growers Association. It was an enthusiastic meeting. One man subscribed $1000. —News Herald.

The News Herald would have an awfully hard time finding any person who attended the above mentioned meeting. Boone county farmers were slow to subscribe for stock in the Association, and no meeting the proceedings of which approximated the above was ever held in Burlington or elsewhere in Boone county.

"Jack" Sandford is not only a clever gentleman, but somewhat of a practical joker as well, and his latest he perpetrated on the postmistress at this place. Going to her office he placed a package on her desk, remarking at the time, "Olga, there is something for your mother." Her curiosity being excited Miss Olga proceeded to investigate the package. She soon brought to view a bird, when she remarked, "Oh it is a quail—how delighted mama will be!" Just then the screach owl opened its eyes, and looked Miss Olga in the face, with "you may bet your bottom dollar I aint", look, when the scream that followed almost paralyzed Jack. Jack don't go into that office any more carrying bundles, but lays them down on the stone steps in front of the door before entering

A representative of the RECORDER visited the court house, one day last week, and the first man he met was county clerk B. W. Adams, who was smacking his lips while a greasy substance exuded from each corner of his month. He introduced the subject that was the source of so much pleasure to him thusly: "Bill, I had the best dinner today of any man in town. I have had a big, fat coon hanging out in a tree at my house for about a week, undergoing the freezing process. Fannie went away today and I concluded I would cook and eat that coon. I don't think there is a man in the county who can cook a coon better than I —I am an expert at that business. I gave that coon all the frills, flounces and flourishes known to coon culinary, concluding the job by placing in it 15 pods (don't read that last word pounds) of red pepper. When the coon was ready for the table it was simply delicious, and I tell you I did not leave enough of it to make a greasy spot." Giving his portentious bread basket a slap with his expansive right hand, he concluded the account of his feast by singing, "Oh, coon, coon, coon, you didn't get done any too soon."

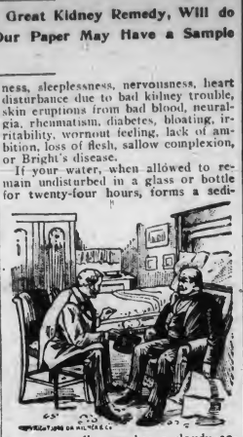
THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND DON'T KNOW IT

To Prove What Swamp-Root, the Great Kidney Remedy, Will do for YOU, Every Reader of Our Paper May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Free by Mail.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, therefore, when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continue, fatal results are sure to follow.

Your other organs may need attention—but your kidneys most, because they do most and need attention first.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because as soon as your kidneys begin to get better they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince any one.



The mild and immediate effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Swamp-Root will set your whole system right, and the best proof of this is a trial.

DR. KILMER & CO.
15 EAST 120th ST., NEW YORK CITY.

Dear Sirs: Oct. 15th, 1903.

"I had been suffering severely from kidney trouble. All symptoms were on hand; my former strength and power had left me. I could hardly drag myself along. Even my mental capacity was giving out, and often I wished to die. It was then I saw an advertisement of yours in a New York paper, but would not have paid any attention to it, had it not promised a sworn guarantee with every bottle of your medicine asserting that your Swamp-Root is purely vegetable, and does not contain any harmful drugs. I am seventy years and four months old, and with a good conscience I can recommend Swamp-Root to all sufferers from kidney troubles. Four members of my family have been using Swamp-Root for four different kidney diseases, with the same good results."

With many thanks to you, I remain,
Very truly yours,
ROBERT BERNER.

You may have a sample bottle of this famous kidney remedy, Swamp-Root, sent free by mail, postpaid, by which you may test its virtues for such disorders as kidney, bladder and uric acid diseases, poor digestion, when obliged to pass your water frequently night and day, smarting or irritation in passing, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, heart disturbance due to bad kidney trouble, skin eruptions from bad blood, neuralgia, rheumatism, diabetes, bloating, irritability, wormout feeling, lack of ambition, loss of flesh, sallow complexion, or Bright's disease.

If your water, when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty-four hours, forms a sediment or settling, or has a cloudy appearance, it is evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is the great discovery of Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist. Hospitals use it with wonderful success in both slight and severe cases. Doctors recommend it to their patients and use it in their own families, because they recognize in Swamp-Root the greatest and most successful remedy.

Y., who will gladly send you by mail, immediately, without cost to you, a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, and a book containing many of the thousands upon thousands of letters received from men and women cured by Swamp-Root. Burglar Bees.

To the person who knows nothing about bees they represent the supreme type of industry. But even the bee communities are disturbed by those of their own kind who break through and steal. Robber bees are always a source of anxiety to beekeepers, and at this time of the year the marauders seem particularly active. Having gathered no honey, or at any rate an insufficient supply for themselves, they will descend upon a hive, kill its industrious occupants and carry off the golden treasure in an astonishingly short space of time. We know of a recent instance in which the attack was developed and the home bees killed in a couple of hours. Sometimes hive will attack neighboring hive. In such cases the old straw "skip" was better than the modern arrangement. For a knife thrust through the top would break the comb and set the honey free, at which the thieves would instantly return to seal up their own store. It is not primarily in their industry that bees are human.—London Chronicle.

Repairs Ahead for Papa.

"Harold," said Mrs. Goodchild to her young son, "did you tell that next door boy what your father said about this wicked habit of fighting and quarreling?"

"Yes, ma."

"Did you remember to explain how your father pointed out, in addition to the sinfulness of it and the bruises and cuts you get, your clothes suffer also, and thus your parents are put to unnecessary expense?"

"Yes, ma."

"And that if your father ever sees him fighting with you again he will speak to his parents about it?"

"Yes, ma."

"And what did he say?"

"He said: 'Send the old dub around and I'll bust in his slats.'"—N. Y. Press.

Peccary Hunting.

Peccary hunting is usually both dangerous and fatiguing. About ten or 12 dogs are set upon the trail of a drove, the huntsmen following as best they may on foot. When the dogs come up with the peccaries the little animals turn to bay in a closely packed, squealing crowd. Often the veteran boars of the herd rush out upon their canine enemies and it is seldom that a hunt passes without one or more dogs being killed or badly injured. Careless and inexperienced huntsmen are also liable to be badly mauled, for the peccaries seems incapable of fear and rush madly at any moving object, be it dog or man.

Up Against It.

"Sir, I don't think I quite catch the drift of your remarks," said the haughty maid who seemed to have suddenly developed a case of refrigerator heart.

"Well, I seem to catch your drift, all right, all right," rejoined the young man who had been trying to frame up a proposal. "It seems to be something on the order of a snowdrift."—Chicago Daily News.

Throwing Dog Off the Scent.

If a layer of stiff, brown paper is glued to the sides and soles of the usual shooting boots, a dog will not follow its master's tracks, but when the paper gets worn through at the heels so that it touches the ground, the scent is caught at once and speedily followed.

Foreigners in Japan.

A foreigner cannot own land in Japan, although a number of foreigners may organize themselves into a company, to be known and registered as a "Judicial person," and this company has all the property rights of a native citizen.

Lures to Cruel Death.

In Italy crows, which injure the crops, are destroyed in the following cruel manner: A hole is dug in the ground, at the bottom of which is placed some decayed meat. A funnel-shaped wedge of paper is then inserted into the hole, the upper edge of the paper being coated with birdlime. A crow sees the food from afar, descends to grasp it in his beak, and when he has firm hold of it he rises up again. His head is, however, swathed with the paper cap and in his mad endeavor to rid himself of it he circles up to extraordinary heights in the air revolving constantly and at so rapid a pace that, soon overcome with giddiness, he falls to the earth, dead.

Old Age Pensions.

Under the old age pension law of New Zealand, a person to draw a pension must be 65 years of age, and must have resided in New Zealand for the previous 25 years; must not have been imprisoned for a period of four months during the past 12 years for any offense punishable by imprisonment for one year, and must have led a sober and respectable life for the previous five years. His yearly income must not exceed $$260, or his net capital $1,250, and he must not have deprived himself of property or income to qualify for a pension. The full amount of the pension is $90 a year, payable monthly.

Historical Note.

Adelaide enjoys the distinction of being the oldest municipality in Australia. It was named after the queen of William IV., in whose reign it was founded, and its principal thoroughfare bears the name of King William street. Its oldest newspaper, the South Australian Register, was first published in London as the organ of the South Australian association, the body under whose auspices the pioneer settlers and founders of Adelaide were dispatched from England. The pioneer colonists were in sore straits, when valuable copper mines were luckily discovered near Adelaide. The late Sir George Grey, who was appointed its governor at the early age of 29, materially helped to pull the place out of the slough of despond and rescued the infant settlement from imminent bankruptcy.

In Place of the Atom.

If we must discard the atom what are we to accept in its place? Two new conceptions have been found necessary —the "ion" as the unit of matter the "electron" as the unit of force. The new chemistry holds that matter and force are different manifestations of the same thing. Inertia is the characteristic; indeed, the indispensable, property of both matter and electricity. What would be simpler than to assume that the ultimate particles of each are one and the same? Prof. Fleming has declared that "we can no more have anything which can be called electricity apart from corpuscles than we can have momentum apart from matter."

A MYSTERIOUS CASE.

Literary Woman Assassinated From Her Window.

A Brother Was Summoned to Produce His Shotgun and All Cartridges He Had With It Before the Grand Jury.

Rising Sun, Ind., Dec. 11.—This "river town" of less than 2,000 people has been intensely excited since Miss Elizabeth Gillespie was shot from her parlor window last Tuesday evening. The excitement increased when the grand jury began its investigation Thursday morning, and since Miss Gillespie died Thursday afternoon threatening conditions exist here.

The Gillespie family was one of the most prominent in the county. The victim was a lady of high literary and musical attainments. Her grandfather, father and brother were eminent physicians. Her father was mayor of Rising Sun many years after his service as surgeon in the civil war. Miss Elizabeth Gillespie was 38 years old and lived alone with her mother, Margaret Gillespie, aged 79.

Across the street from them lived the victims' twin brother, James, and her sister, Mrs. W. R. Seward, a widow. Members of these two households were not on speaking terms. After the death of the father they quarreled over the estate. Two years ago James left his mother and Elizabeth to live with Mrs. Seward. Recently the mother deeded her property to Elizabeth. Since then the relations between the twins became more strenuous than ever.

Of the 40 witnesses subpoenaed, James Gillespie, the twin brother of the victim, was the first one called and to his examination the day was devoted while intense anxiety existed throughout town. The summons called for him to produce his 16-gage shotgun and all the cartridges he had with it. He refused to let the officers into the house to get the gun and cartridges until he consulted John B. Coles, his attorney. On the advice of his attorney the officers were admitted and the gun and cartridges were taken to the jury room.

Two gunwads from a 16-guage gun are in the possession of Dr. Bowers, who extracted them from Miss Gillespie's head. The gun owned by James Gillespie, her brother, is said to be a 16-gauge gun. There are two or three guns of this guage in this part of the country. The gun found behind the barn after the shooting was a 16-gauge gun, and is now in the possession of Marshal Overly.

Rising Sun, Ind., Dec. 12.—There was a scene in the grand jury room Friday afternoon similar to that of Thursday when James Gillespie refused to answer questions propounded by the prosecutor and was taken before Judge Downey. Myron Barbour, a banker, who was being examined regarding the assassination of Miss Elizabeth Gillespie, refused to answer questions that were put to him. Barbour's wife is a sister of Mrs. Dr. William Gillespie, of Cincinnati. The Barbours live across the street from the scene of the tragedy and in the same house with James Gillespie and Mrs. Seward, the widowed sister of the victim. While it is not known what were the questions to which the witness refused to give answers at first, it is currently reported that they pertained to the scenes about both houses on opposite sides of the street at the time of the tragedy.

In the post-mortem Friday the wad which caused the death of Miss Gillespie was extracted from the ear of the dead woman. It is about the size of a dime was made of hair.

Rising Sun, Ind., Dec. 14.—"Let us in this hour extend our sympathy to the ones who committed the deed," said Rev. John Henry, Sunday afternoon, concluding the funeral services over the body of Miss Elizabeth Gillespie. Friends of the dead woman crowded in the Presbyterian church to pay the last tribute. Nearly 500 persons were in the church. As many stood outside. Long before the hour set for the funeral the church was filled. The casket was hidden beneath many beautiful floral emblems.

The remarks of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Henry, were brief. The most sensational part of the sermon was the pastor's admonition to the public to do nothing rash.

A part of the relatives of Elizabeth Gillespie were not present at the funeral. Noticeably among these were James Gillespie and Mrs. Belle Seward, brother and sister, and Mr. and Mrs. Myron Barbour, related by marriage. These four persons lived directly across the street from the house in which Miss Gillspie met her death. The grand jury may not complete its work for several days. That one or more indictments will be returned is generally accepted. The community is quiet. There will be no violence done.

Myron Barbour, assistant cashier of the national bank, will voluntarily appear Monday before the grand jury with one of the shells he bought a few days before the tragedy. Part of these shells were given to James Gillespie.

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Regular Session.

Washington, Dec. 9.—Senate—The recent investigation into frauds in the post office department was the basis of a sharp debate in the senate Tuesday by Mr. Gorman and Mr. Lodge. The discussion arose over a motion by Mr. Lodge to refer to the committee on post offices the resolution introduced by Mr. Penrose looking to a senate investigation into the conditions in the department. Mr. Gorman intimated that the investigation by the department had been partisan in character and said that counter charges had been made against the men who had made it. Mr. Lodge defended the department's work and declared it was far more thorough than a congressional inquiry would be.

House—The house authorized the committee on post offices and post roads to request the postmaster general to supply the committee with papers in connection with the recent investigation of the post office department. It was explained by Mr. Overstreet, chairman of the committee, that the purpose of the resolution was to supply the committee with information essential to the proper consideration of appropriation bills. The minority made an unsuccessful attempt to amend the resolution so as to provide that the house request the postmaster general for papers and evidence touching on the investigation. The house also instructed the judiciary committee to make inquiry and report whether the Isle of Pines can be ceded to Cuba without the concurrent action of the house and senate.

Washington, Dec. 10.—Senate—Senator Teller concluded his speech in opposition to the Cuban reciprocity bill Wednesday and Senator Morgan also was heard in opposition to that measure. The Alabama senator devoted the greater share of his attention to the Panama canal question. He said that the United States had broken faith in failing to obey the Spooner law and warned Cuba that the same course might be followed by us towards that country in case the pending bill should become a law.

Washington, Dec. 11.—Senate—The following bills were introduced Thursday: For the purchase of a national forest reserve in the White mountains, New Hampshire, to be known as the National White Mountain Forest Reserve. The bill makes an appropriation of $5,000,000 to enable the secretary of agriculture to obtain the lands; to provide a government for the Island of Tutuilla, and adjacent Islands. It is identical with a bill introduced in the 57th congress; also a bill to provide a government for the Island of Guam; to make the provisions of the naturalization laws of the United States applicable to Porto Rico.

House—The house adopted a resolution directing the judiciary committee to inquire into the official conduct of Charles G. Swayne, judge of the United States district court for the northern district of Florida, and to "report whether the action of the house is requisite." Mr. Lamar (dem., Fla.) offered the resolution, announcing that he desired to impeach Judge Swayne. A lively debate was had before the resolution was adopted. A number of members on the majority side sought to have the resolution referred to the judiciary committee in order that a recommendation might be had from that committee before voting on its adoption. The first of the appropriation bills, the pension bill, was reported to the house and notice was given that it will be called up Friday for consideration.

Washington, Dec. 12.—Senate—There were two speeches in the senate Friday on the Cuban reciprocity bill, one of them a statement by a democrat, in support of the bill, and the other by a republican in opposition to it. The opposing speech was made by Mr. Bard (Cal.), who contended that the United States was under no obligation to give further aid to Cuba, especially when to do so we must pursue a course injurious to our own industries. Mr. McCreary (Ky.) made his maiden speech in the senate and supported the bill as in line with our past magnanimous course towards Cuba, and especially because he believed it to be a step towards tariff reform.

House—The birth of the republic of Panama and its recognition by this government was the subject of a spirited debate in the house. Mr. Dinsmore (dem., Ark.), during consideration of the pensions appropriation bill severely criticized the administration in connection with the canal. Mr. Hitt (rep., Ill.), chairman of the foreign affairs committee, replied in a vigorous defense of the president and his Central American policy. Nearly the whole of the four hours session was taken up in a discussion of the Isthmian question. House adjourned over until Monday.

Took a Cold Bath.

New York, Dec. 11.—After having attempted to rob the First national bank of Hoboken in broad daylight in true western style, Frank Stone, a youth of 19, whose home is in Youngstown, O., sprang into the Hudson river Thursday when followed by a great crowd and would have made his escape had not a tugboat man thrown a lasso about his neck and hauled him in.

Wife Murder and Suicide.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—James Kotrna, a woodworker, living at 1101 South Kedzie avenue, shot and instantly killed his wife Friday night as she lay in bed and then shot himself in the head. The man can not live.

Gen. Wood to Be Summoned.

Washington, Dec. 12.—Senator Hanna has decided to request the senate committee on military affairs to subpoena Gen. Wood to answer some of the charges made against him by opponents of his confirmation as major general.

To Print Cuban Accounts.

Washington, Dec. 12.—Senator Platt, chairman of the senate committee on relations with Cuba, introduced a resolution authorizing the printing of all the accounts of the government of Cuba during American occupation.

THE GAS CASES.

Court of Appeals Reversed the Decision of the Lower Court.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 12.—The court of appeals has reversed the judgment of the Meade circuit court in the case of the Calor Oil and Gas Co. against W. C. McGehee and affirmed it in the case of the Louisville Gas Co. against the Kentucky Heating Co.

The cases grew out of alleged efforts of the Louisville Gas Co. to destroy the Meade county natural gas fields, from which the Kentucky Heating Co. has for years been securing the gas which it furnishes to consumers of Louisville. The Louisville Gas Co. officers organized the Calor Oil and Gas Co., the stockholders being A. Hite Barrett, Udolpho Sneed and J. B. Speed. This company took over a lot of leases on land in Meade county. On this territory they erected what they called a lampblack factory. This factory was constructed with a stockade about it, inside of which no one was allowed to enter and firearms were discharged to keep the neighbors away. When they began operations the Kentucky Heating Co. had a gas pressure of 60 pounds, and in five months this was reduced to 30 pounds. The force of the lampblack factory was two men, one for day and another for night. In five months the factory produced 300 pounds of lampblack worth four cents a pound, and had consumed about 90,000,000 feet of natural gas. No lampblack was ever shipped away from the factory. On these facts the chancellor enjoined the operation of the lamphlack factory, as violating the statutory laws against the wasting of natural gas.

The retail price of natural gas for fuel in Louisville is 65 cents per 1,000 feet, making the value of the gas alleged to have been consumed in making $12 worth of lampblack $63,500.

The decision handed down Friday puts the lampblack factory out of business.

The suggestion came from State Auditor Gus C. Coulter, and acting thereon representatives of these institutions will meet in this city Thursday to draft a petition.

THE GROUND PURCHASED.

A New Tobacco Warehouse Will Be Erected in Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 11.—The general council Thursday night by special ordinance disposed of a piece of city property to the Loose Tobacco Warehouse Co., recently organized in this city, for the purpose of establishing thereon a tobacco exchange. The property is situated near the Southern depot, and with the extra privileged granted Thursday night this company is expected to make serious inroads upon the Kentucky business of the Cincinnati and Louisville Tobacco Exchanges.

Under the terms of the transfer, it is directed that the company shall proceed at once to construct its warehouse, and it is intended to make this company the distributing agent of the greater portion of the tobacco crops in this section of the state. The tobacco will be sold in loose lots, according to grade, which is claimed to be of greater advantage to both buyer and seller than under the old system.

The council refused to pass an ordinance providing for a sinking fund of $38,000 to enable the mayor to dispose of bonds for the purpose of land for a public park. Seasongood & Meyer, Cincinnati brokers, contracted to take the bond issue, and now that firm threatens to sue the city for damages because of its action Thursday night.

The foundry is owned and operated by E. H. Heuenfeld & Co., of Cincinnati.

AS EVIDENCE IN A TRIAL.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 11.—Attorneys for the Provident Insurance Company, which is resisting the payment of $74,000 on the life of R. C. Whayne, killed by a shotgun discharge, in order to disprove the contention of the attorneys for the estate that if Whayne had held the shotgun muzzle against his body and then discharged it the gases from the gun would have torn his body open, had a hog wrapped around with clothing such as Whayne wore, and then shot the animal with the muzzle of a gun pressed close against it. The hog will be submitted as evidence. It was brought into court prematurely Thursday morning and caused a sensation.

THE CASTAWAY.

REPUBLICAN GRAFTERS.

Thorough Renovation Demanded and Necessary in the Federal Service.

Such meager accounts of the department swindles as have heretofore filtered into the press have but poorly served to prepare the public mind for Bristow's revelations, and the sense of shock is keen and profound. The extent and character of graft as disclosed by the report is almost stupefying, and were it not for the fact that the public is accustomed to the idea of millions, the mere numerical magnitude would be difficult of comprehension. Fifteen years ago "millions of graft" would have been almost unintelligible, says the St. Louis Republic.

That graft in one department alone has been on a scale to justify the employment of 40 inspectors for six months in investigating it is a suggestive fact which assists the imagination to grasp the truth. And that the system discovered has been developing through two administrations, extending its ramifications and perfecting its operations, undisturbed save by superficial examinations, is another poignant fact. And President Roosevelt's expressions, such as "gross corruption," "bribery and blackmail," "fleecing the public," give further color and suggestion to the great melancholy fact.

Unquestionably the principal significance of Mr. Bristow's report is to confirm the belief that graft is deep-rooted in practically every department of executive business and to strengthen the public conviction that the only way to cure it effectually is to apply the wholesale cure of the ballot. Mr. Roosevelt's own comments make legitimate and proper the discussion of the scandal's political phase at this time. Obviously he seeks thus early to anticipate and avoid the political effect of the disclosure.

In discussing the matter of cure, he says: "All questions of difference in party policy sink into insignificance when the people of the country are brought face to face with a question like this." Assuredly such differences ought to sink unless they are vital to the cure itself. If they militated against the thoroughgoing renovation obviously demanded and conceded to be necessary in the federal service they ought to be ignored by the people.

But what are the "differences" and how do they affect reform? The democratic party insists upon a final and complete overhauling of the service and the utter demolition of graft. The republican party has put itself in the attitude of defense upon the issue of reform. From the outset it has been an apologist, seeking on the one hand to excuse corruption which was revealed, denying party responsibility therefor, and on the other hand denying that extensive graft existed. Not until investigations and exposures became inevitable, perforce of public insistence, did the administration act, and its progressions in the work have been marked by reluctance and by sullenness toward the public. For the partial results actually achieved the administration deserves credit, but no amount of reform activity henceforth can change the fact of its early attitude upon the scandals.

It is equally difficult to believe that the republican party if retained in power and left to its own devices would seriously disturb the present conditions of federal service; and to comprehend how a wholesale renovation, consequent upon a change of administration, could fail to produce the desired result. Let the republican party be judged by its "reform" record.

——They are trying to boom Cannon for the vice presidency, but find it difficult to fire the old gun with that sort of ambition.—St. Louis Republic.

——The boodle news now comes from Washington. Won't E. Lincoln Put-it-to-'em cook up something for that magazine of his about the Putridness of the Post Office, or the Palnfulness of Payne, or the Ruminations of Roosevelt, or the Handiness of Health or the Tamperings of Tyner, or the Bamboozlings of Beavers, or the Machinations of Machen? Or, how's this: "The Boodle Bubble Picked by Professional Boodle Bubble Picker."—St. Louis Republic.

HANNA'S GAME.

Politics as Played by the Ohio Boss and His White House Friend.

Before the recent election in Ohio Senator Hanna was frightening the voters by telling them of the awful panic that would follow his defeat. The mere suspicion that the democrats might win was, he said, responsible for closing of mills then; should the democrats win victories in Ohio and other states he prophesied that a great panic would follow and that soup houses would be numerous. It was unsafe, he said, to even suggest a reduction of tariff duties.

Now that the election is over and the business depression is growing more ominous as hundreds of mills are closing and hundreds of thousands are accepting wholesale reductions in wages, Senator Hanna bobs up serenely to say that:

"I have always contended that the laws of commerce are as positive in their action as the laws of nature."

You cannot beat the republican game as played by Hanna and his friends. It is a "heads I win and tails you loose" sort of game. If the weather is favorable, the crops good and the country enjoys some measure of prosperity when the republicans are in power, we must give all the credit to the Dingley tariff and republican statesmanship. If, in spite of favorable weather and good crops, business depression occurs while the G. O. P. is in control, just blame it all on those old enemies of mankind, "laws of nature" and "laws of commerce" and the trick is done and you are a sure winner—unless the voters get on to your game.

Neither Senator Hanna nor his republican friend in the white house was born yesterday. They understand the game of politics and will play it to the limit.

Mysterious Tremor.

Why is there so much discouragement in the republican party? Why is it that so many republicans, including not a few who are in more or less prominent official positions, are despondent over the outlook for 1904? We give out no secret nor do we stretch the truth in the slightest degree when we assert that a feeling of gloomy apprehension is more common among republicans than cheerful confidence. What is there in the situation to warrant all this? A study of the present status of parties as indicated by election returns of all the states shows that nothing less than a landslide can bring in the democracy. But more than one landslide has come in that party's direction, and the republicans—or a great many of them—seem to feel that another incident of that kind impends.—Washington Post.

——Southern cotton planters have asked President Roosevelt to help them to fight the boll weevil. But what does the president know about that? The principal southern industry with him is colored delegates in the republican convention.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Senator Hanna is a great and good man who is annoyed by people hailing him as the next president, and he pretends to be mad about it. If he really is not a candidate he might follow Mr. Cleveland's example, and say so.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Almost any respectable democrat might be elected if he stood on a platform guaranteeing economy, honesty, tariff reform, sound money, national good faith, and in general the recovery of the country from republican extravagance, corruption and imperialism.—N. Y. Post (Ind.).

——In view of the latest claims made by Odell and Platt, the puzzle just now usurping the "Ann's-age" horror in republican minds is, "Find the leader."—N. Y. World.

——It is now announced with apparent authority that tariff legislation in favor of the Philippines will not be pressed at this session. There is only one paramount influence in the United States when tariff legislation is seriously proposed. The protected interests are indifferent to everything but their own profits. Promises to the Philippines and to Cuba are made only to be broken.—Chicago Chronicle.

AMERICAN SHOES FOR EUROPE.

Exports of United States Have Greatly Increased During Last Decade.

The rapid and remarkable growth of our exports of iron and steel manufactures has so overshadowed other phases of our foreign trade as to give the impression that our sales of other commodities are of no importance.

It is only recently that public attention has been called to the sudden and enormous growth of our boot and shoe exports. Twenty years ago we were not making boots and shoes for Europeans. The domestic demand was such that no one seriously entertained the thought of trying to displace the English and German footwear in European and Asiatic markets. Now we are not only displacing this product in many markets but we are shoeing the Germans and English themselves. With an export trade of over 4,000,000 pairs in the fiscal year of 1903, Americans may reasonably contemplate the possibility of an industry that may be in time devoted exclusively to the manufacture of boots and shoes for the foreign market.

The figures of growth of exports of boots and shoes in Germany during the past decade are particularly striking. In the fiscal year of 1903 our exports to Germany had increased to 189,198 pairs, valued at $337,093.

It should be noted in this connection that up to this time very little effort has been made by American manufacturers to adapt their product to local ideas and tastes in Germany or the United Kingdom. The shoes that are sent to these countries are for the most part "American shoes." When American manufacturers turn their attention more seriously to the problem of meeting the local demand in the various foreign markets they should make even better progress than they have in the past.

VILLAGERS UNDER ODD BAN.

Residents of New Hampshire Temperance Town Find It Impossible to Quench Their Thirst.

It is an easy thing to get a drink at the solitary bar in Hillsboro, N. Y., if the buyer lives there. But if he hails from Antrim, a town of 700, four miles away, he will find the purchase of alcoholic beverages a matter requiring considerable strategy, if not actually impossible.

The only bar in Hillsboro is at the hotel. It is the only place near Antrim where liquor can be had. Its owner has been served by Former Gov. D. H. Goodell with a list of those interdicted, which contains the name of every male resident of Antrim more than 21 years old, 400 in all.

Even Mr. Goodell's own name and those of his sons appear in the column. Mr. Goodell defeated the granting of a license in his own town, and is determined that none of his fellow townsmen shall procure a drink elsewhere.

Mr. Goodell served the notice on the hotel proprietor under authority which he claims exists in section 15 of the license law, which reads:

"No person shall sell, deliver or give away, or cause or permit or procure to be sold, delivered or given away, any liquor to any person where notice in writing has been given forbidding sale to such person from the parent, guardian, husband or wife of such parent, or by any magistrate or overseer of the poor of a town or city, or by any prosecuting attorney, or by any county commissioner, or by a selectman."

In the warning Mr. Goodell describes himself as a magistrate. The ex-governor signed his name, beneath which he placed the title "Justice of the peace."

The hotel people are refusing to serve anybody from Antrim.

TWO PRAYERS.

Queer Requests Made in the Supplications of Imaginative Preachers.

"Speaking of 'queer breaks' occasionally made by pastors in addressing their faithful flocks, here is one that I think takes the cake," observed a New Yorker to some friends as they were chatting at the club, according to the Times.

"The case in question was that of a young clergyman whose imagination sometimes exceeded his common sense. At any rate, on one occasion he began his prayer as follows:

"'Oh Lord, we thank Thee that there is one small spark of grace remaining in our hearts. Water it, we beseech Thee, Oh Lord, water it.'

"That reminds me of the favorite climax of the minister of the one church in a little country place where I was staying one summer," remarked one of the others when the laugh had subsided. "He was of extremely pacific tendencies and rarely ended his prayer by any other phrase than the following:

"'Oh Lord, we pray Thee that the dove of peace and the eagle of freedom may soar heavenward together, bearing between them a banner with the motto, "E pluribus unum." Amen.'"

AN EXPERT.

He Wanted a Confidential Clerkship Because He Could Be Very Confidential.

Secretary Shaw says that shortly after he assumed his duties as head of the treasury department he was called upon by an old gentleman from his own state of Iowa, who wanted an appointment as confidential clerk to one of the assistant secretaries of that department.

"In spite of the fact that I was very busy at the time," says Mr. Shaw, "I gave the Iowan the better part of an hour, for he was as pleasant and entertaining an old chap as one could meet—bright, chipper and witty.

On account of his age, the secretary felt that he could not comply with the request. So, gently but firmly, he informed him that he did not see his way clear to give him the appointment. This did not dampen the old gentleman's spirit in the least.

"'Now, sir,' said he, 'as I feel myself peculiarly well qualified to fill one of these confidential clerkships, I hope that you will consider my application further.'

Then, wagging his head most impressively, he added earnestly:

"'Or, sir, I could be so confidential!'"

Well Remembered.

Valley City, N. Dak., Dec. 14.—Two years ago Mrs. Matilda M. Boncher of this place suffered a great deal with a dizziness in her head. She was cured of this by a remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills, and has not been troubled since.

Shortly afterwards she had a bad bilious attack and for this she used Diamond Dinner Pills and was completely cured in a short time.

In January, 1903, she had an attack of Sciatica of which she says:

"I was almost helpless with the Sciatica, but remembering what Dodd's Kidney Pills and Diamond Dinner Pills had done for me before, I commenced a treatment of these medicines and in three weeks I was completely restored to health. I have great faith in these medicines for they have been of so much benefit to me."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are very popular in Barnes County, having made a great many splendid cures of Sciatica, Rheumatism and Kidney Troubles. Many families use no other medicine.

ON THE "DUDE" TRAIN.

Johnny Drummer, Who Is Side-Tracked to let the Limited go by, expresses his sentiments regarding that Superb Train.

"It has been my dream of joy supreme
To ride in plush and velvet splendor
Parlor car for a swell tailender
Platform fenced with a swell brass fender
On the Regular Limited Train

Electric bell right under your nose
Porter to come and brush your clothes
Grub in the diner the best that grows
A downy bunk for a night's repose
On the Regular Limited Train

Chorus

Biff! Bang! a mile a minute
No other method of travel is in it
I want to go tripping, skipping and zipping
Away on the Limited Train.

These lines are not original with me. They are taken from a tuneful little ditty sung in George Ade's comedy "Peggy from Paris." The jingle danced through my brain the other day as we lay on the siding at Prairie Junction, or some such place, to let the Santa Fe's west bound California Limited go by. It was a gorgeous train of palace cars, and behind the plate glass observation windows beauty and fashion and youth and old age were lolling among the luxurious cushions, some visiting, some reading, some pleasantly dozing, some making wreaths of cigar smoke, some gazing dreamily through the windows at the flying cities, and fields, and forests and rivers.

I stood on the rear platform of the last car of our train and watched the California Limited as she pulled away and left the golden west. And I thought of the difference between travel now and travel in the days of '49, when it took the gold-seeker half a long, weary year, filled with all kinds of hardships, to travel the distance that is now covered in three days. I thought of the slowly moving wagons, the dust, the stones, the jolting, the fever, the hunger, the homesickness, the sandy-like crossing of plains, the laborious climbing of mountains, the weary dragging weeks, the never ending trail.

In these palaces that had just glided by were people going to the same place to spend the winter months where the climate is perpetual summer. And they were not to endure a single hardship on the journey.

When night came they were to lie in beds whose soft embrace makes sleep a luxury—and in the day time in velvet cushions of their seats were to be made deeper still by pillows—and they were to spend a delightful part of their time in the gilded and glittering dining car, where fancy dainty that ever tickled the palate is enticingly served—in short, they were to have on the trip all the comforts of home—and of the best kind of home.

I stood there and watched them pass out of sight while my soul was consumed with envy. But I derived some consolation out of resolving that sometime I, too, would see California, and I promised myself that if I ever did go there it would be over the Santa Fe. "JOHNNY DRUMMER."

Mrs. Weisslitz, Buffalo, N. Y., cured of kidney trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Of all the diseases known with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless prompt and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave careful study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—made sure that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was certain to control that dreaded disease, woman's kidney troubles.

Read What Mrs. Weisslitz Says.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For two years my life was simply a burden, I suffered so with female troubles, and pains across my back and loins. The doctor told me that I had kidney troubles and prescribed for me. For three months I took his medicine, but grew steadily worse. My husband then advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and brought home a bottle. It is the greatest blessing ever brought to our home. Within three months I was a changed woman. My pain had disappeared, my complexion became clear, my eyes bright, and my entire system in good shape."—MRS. PAULA WEISSLITZ, 176 Seneca St., Buffalo, N. Robinson has purchased Ben Cleek's farm.—Will Carpenter's knee, which was cut with an axe, is about well.—Miss Elizabeth Rogers' school will have a Christmas tree and an entertainment at Grange hall on Christmas eve. A small admission fee will be charged, the proceeds to be used for painting the inside of the school room. Whether it will be in the afternoon or in the evening has not been decided, due notice will be given, and patrons and friends should encourage it with patronage.—F. F. Robinson delighted the young folks with a party, Monday night.—Several persons around here purchased ferrets to chase rats, rabbits, etc., out of their dens.—John Tanner had a husking bee last Wednesday night, and 40 shocks of corn were husked out.

John Rice and Will Otool were thrown from their buggy as they were coming from the city, Monday night. The accident happened near the Mt. Zion road. The horse scared at an old wagon that laid on the road side for a long time, and when it whirled around the buggy turned over, throwing the men out. The horse ran to John Rice's, where it ran into a fence and was thrown, but it succeeded in kicking loose from the wreck. Mr. Rice has an ugly cut in his forehead and arm. Mr. Otool is badly hurt about the head and has several other bad bruises.

A Timely Suggestion.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful housewife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is certain to be needed before the winter is over, and results are much more prompt and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system. In almost every instance a severe cold may be warded off by taking this remedy freely as soon as the first indication of the cold appears There is no danger in giving it to children as it contains no harmful substance It is pleasant to take—both adults and children like it. Buy it and you will get the best. It always cures. For Sale by All Druggists

Elvin Marksbery and Tom Huff, attended the ball at Union last Friday night Seventy-five boys and three girls were present.

Will Afterkirk passed through this place last week to purchase a load of hay from Mr. Rice. Hay is certainly scarce in this neighborhood.

Foxes are plentiful and have been making their annual visits around here at night. They have caught several ducks for Mrs. Gertrude Carroll. Chas. Ewalt's fox hounds came upon ones trail one day last week and gave him a lively chase, and it had no time for catching ducks while they were in pursuit.

How to Prevent Croup.

It will be good news to the mothers of small children to learn that croup can be prevented. The first sign of croup is hoarseness. A day or two before the attack the child becomes hoarse. This is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the rough cough appears, and it will dispel all symptoms of croup. In this way all danger and anxiety may be avoided. This remedy is used by many thousands of mothers and has never been known to fail. It is, in fact, the only remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant and safe to take. For Sale by All Druggists.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIX. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1903. NO. 10

County Correspondence.

Rabbit Hash.

Our friend, Dave Bailey, will move to Kansas in a few weeks.

Wallace Stephens, youngest son of F. M. Stephens, is quite sick.

Miss Lottie Stephens has returned from a visit to Patriot, Ind.

J. H. Walton has just finished pressing 60 tons of No. 1 timothy hay.

Mrs. C. E. Renner has gone to Huntington, Va., to visit her daughter

Robt. Platt had quite a gash cut in his head by his ax catching on a clothes line.

Mrs Lizzie Platt has gone to Covington to make her home with her daughter.

They say that the telephone line from this place up the river to Belleyue is a go.

Mesdames Adah Wilson and Wade Stephens will leave for Los Angeles, Cal., in a short time.

Mr and Mrs. Geo. Ward have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

The genial countenances of Bob Nixon and Charlie Klopp, of Woolper, were seen in our place last week

If you want to get Rev Nelson hydrophobiacly, ask him if the patrons of the telephone line rug off every time.

Maj. S. H. Stephens, of Big Bone, waxed very warm while trying to work out "How old is Ann," to Col. Riddell, last week.

Misses Pomella Stephens and Hattie Calvert, of Rising Sun, spent a couple of weeks with relatives at this place recently.

Col. James Conner lost a valuable fox hound while hunting here, last week. He offers "steep" dollars for its recovery.

Hubert Brady sold to C. G. Riddell, last week, a turkey that weighed 36 pounds net. Can any one in the county beat that?

Mrs. Della Hahn, of Connersville, Ind., has returned home after a two weeks' visit to her parents, Will Wingate and wife.

A certain young lady in this place takes a great interest in the Petersburg items of late. Come down this way again, Bro. T.

S. N. Riggs has moved to his new house in the lower part of town. We congratulate him on his taste in building such an up-to-date residence.

Miss Lollie Ward's school at Maple Hill will close in a few weeks. She has given general satisfaction and the patrons are very much pleased with her manner of teaching.

The assassination of Miss Lizzie Gillespie, of Rising Sun, was a shock to this community, where she was well and favorably known. We hope by the time this reaches the readers the criminal will be found out.

Mr. Editor, we may be guilty of a great many little tricks, but we hope we will never be guilty of voting for men on a ticket that we are ashamed of or deny it, so as to vote in the primary elections of the opposite party, as some do.

Last Saturday a tramp hailing from the State of New York, and on his way to Memphis, Tenn., who claimed he had walked all the way, was agreeably surprised by S. R and J. R. Stephens presenting him with $10 to help him on his way.

We are afraid Col Gooch hae lost two votes in the place by sending so many books. E. J. Wilson and Albert Clore, the two handsome mail carriers, swear they carried books three days from the river to the postoffice, and to say they were mad would be putting it mildly.

Mr. Editor, to you and the rest of the Recorder attaches and to your faithful corps of correspondents, who have been ever faithful and willing to give your many readers all the news of the county, dished up with a great deal of spice, a merry Christmas and a happy new year, and may your days be unclouded by adversity.

Almost one year has rolled around since last Christmas, and in that short space of time we look back and recall the sorrow and heartaches that have been in this community. We ask ourselves the question, "Is life worth living" and to know by Christmas of 1904 there will be more, our only consolation is we have a great deal of pleasure and happiness strewn along our paths as we plod along, and always hoping for the best, we know very well that all things are done for the best.

Miss Blanche Northcutt, who is teaching school at Gunpowder, spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Northcutt.

One of the most enjoyable events of the season was the party given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Groger on the evening of the 18th inst. The evening was pleasantly spent in dancing and every one concurred in pronouncing the party a social success.

Your correspondent spent several days, last week, as the guest of Prof. D. I. Tanner, of the Bromley school. Prof. Tanner is one of the most popular and progressive teachers in Kenton county, and every one is pleased with the manner in which he is conducting his school at Bromley.

H. P. Parsons went to Cincinnati, last Saturday after his wife Her condition was such and the weather so cold that they thought best not to bring her home until warmer weather, or until she gained more strength

Owing to the cold weather and ice in the river, it keeps Peanut Soaster (Harve Smith) right down to his knitting to carry the mail, and keep a supply of peanuts roasted for Clore and Co Harve is a hustler at anything he goes at.

Now that our neighbors have all butchered and the returns are all in, we desire to thank Mesdames T. J Walton, Lorenia Scott, Gillie Weisicle and Carl Rouse for samples of mussage which were exceedingly fine in each instance Many thanks kind friends.

We are still soliciting subscribers for the Recorder, and will continue to do so as long as we find people that don't take it. We frequently find a man that says, "it is too high priced; I can get a city paper with twice the reading matter for same money." This is all true; but does the city paper publish a word calculated to draw trade to your county, town, or your enterprises? If you have anything to sell, or wish to buy, does it give you a free ad as the Recorder does, if you are a subscriber? Does it contain notices of your schools, and a hundred other local matters the Recorder publishes? Not an item, not one. Take a city paper if you want to, but first take the Recorder.

James G. Smith and wife returned home, one day last week, after a week's stay with Mrs. Minnie Maurer, in Newport, whom we are glad to report much better.

The P. O. here seems to be quite a drag. No person wants it. We may get a rural route through here yet. We hope Uncle Sam will make some provision for us.

AN ULTIMATUM GIVEN.

Americans Notified by Colombia to Leave at Once.

There Is a Growing Feeling on the Part of the People of Bolivar to Accept the Situation on the Isthmus.

Panama, Dec. 21.—Serious trouble is reported in the Darien district. The Americans who arrived there Sunday were notified by the Colombians to leave in 24 hours. This ultimatum, it is thought, will be disregarded by the American commanders.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The navy department Sunday received a cablegram from Rr. Adm. Glass, commanding the naval forces on the isthmus, giving a general summary of the conditions that prevail there and of the various steps that have been taken by the navy. The cablegram stated that everything was quiet. The text of the dispatch was not made public.

The navy department has now a very formidable array of vessels on duty at the Isthmus of Panama. To the south of the isthmus are the Concord, the Boston, the Wyoming and the Marblehead, to be augmented by the New York, Rr. Adm. Glass' regular flagship.

To the east of the isthmus are the Mayflower, the Prairie, the Atlanta, the Nashville and the Bancroft. Proceeding southward to join the other vessels under immediate command of Rr. Adm. Coghlan is the Olympia, his regular flagship.

Naval officials say that so far as the reports at hand show no Colombian troops have been discovered on the southern part of the isthmus, while on the other side the only ones seen have been those on the shore bordering on the Gulf of Darien.

Panama, Dec. 21.—News was brought Sunday night by the steamer Martinique, from Savanilla, that two battalions of Colombian troops have left Savanilla for Quidedo.

A passenger on the Martinique declares that everything is quiet at Savanilla, and that there is a growing feeling on the part of the people of the department of Bolivar to accept the situation on the isthmus.

It is reported that President Marroquin recently sent this cablegram to Gen. Reyes at Washington: "Any negotiations which do not look to the re-establishment of the integrity of Colombia will not be acceptable."

Gen. Reyes is said to have replied in part as follows: "All aggression against Panama will be disastrous for Colombia. I will undertake further negotiations."

The dates of the cablegrams are not given.

CANNONS BOOMED.

Louisiana Purchase Celebration Ends in a Burst of Patriotism.

New Orleans, Dec. 21.—Under the sunniest of skies Sunday, the Stars and Stripes rose to the top of the tall staff in the historic Place d'Arms, amid cheers, the ringing of cathedral bells, the roar of cannon, and the centennial celebration of the Louisiana transfer ended in a burst of patriotism. The day's exercises opened with the pontifical mass in the old St. Louis cathedral, built while the Spaniards were still in possession of Louisiana, the shrine to which Andrew Jackson went immediately after the battle of New Orleans to hear the high mass of thanksgiving sung for the victory of the American arms. Festooned in the great nave were the flags of the three celebrating nations, Spain, France and the United States. The immense auditorium was crowded with a representative congregation. Archbishop Chappelle officiated in the celebration of mass. The regular choir of the cathedral was supplemented with the principal artists of the French Opera Co. and a full orchestra.

Rev. Father De Lamorinlere, the Jesuit orator, preached an eloquent sermon, and Archbishop Chappelle spoke briefly from the altar upon the great significance of the occasion.

Following the mass there was a replica in the Cabildo of the scene and events of a century ago.

The treaty of cession, the powers of the commissioners and the declaration of Daussat placing the American commissioners in possession were read in turn. Then the keys of the city were delivered and the proclamation of the American governor was read.

The ceremonies concluded at a signal, the American flag rose to the high staff in Jackson's quarters, while the Washington artillery thundered a salute. In the river within view were the six American and French warships.

The Spanish cruiser Rio De La Plata was delayed by bad weather. She was given a noisy welcome when she reached the city just as the Cabildo exercises were concluded.

One of the features of the celebration has been the popular interest in the Spanish representation. Senor Tuero y Odonnell has been the recipient of unusual attention.

THE ENTIRE FAMILY.

Machinists Kills His Wife, Three Children and Himself.

Woman Was Probably Killed While Sleeping, But Indications Are That There Was a Struggle on the Part of Two Children.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 21.—Roscoe W. Derby, a machinist, and about 45 years old, exterminated his family early Sunday by gassing his wife, his three children and then himself. The crime is believed to have been due to despondency over the impoverished condition of the family purse and the near approach of Christmas.

The crimes were extraordinary in their thoroughness and there was evidently no mishap in the enactment. The wife was killed first while sleeping at her husband's side in bed; two of the children were killed as they ran through the house in the darkness of the early morning, endeavoring to escape their merciless parent. The third child was killed in its bed after its elder brother and sister had been killed. The dead: Roscoe W. Derby, his wife Della, Harold, aged 8, Alice, 7, and Thomas, aged 5.

Derby had been down-town as late as 11 o'clock Saturday night, ostensibly shopping, but in all probability securing ammunition for his revolver. When he got home his wife and he talked with a neighbor who had been calling over the approaching feast. Derby seemed pale and nervous. Shortly after his arrival at home the neighbor left and the Derby family went to bed.

The crime is believed to have been committed about 4 o'clock Sunday morning. Mrs. Derby was shot to death in bed, two bullets having been fired into her forehead and a third, probably fired after the children had been exterminated, in the back of the neck. Mrs. Derby probably was killed during sleep, the expression on her face showing no sign of a struggle, and it was calm and peaceful. Two of the children, however, probably had a struggle, because they had been awakened by the noise of the revolver being fired and sought to escape him, but without avail. Harold's body was found lying in a pool of blood in the kitchen and that of Alice in the dining room with her face to the floor and a bullet in her breast. Harold may have been chased by his father, as there was evidence of flight in the manner in which the furnishings of the kitchen were thrown about. From the location of bullets in his head the boy evidently was caught by his father in a strong grasp and held while the weapon was placed against the little fellow's forehead and the bullets sent into his brain.

There was also evidence of a struggle on Alice's part. The last of the children to die was Thomas. He had remained in bed, probably still asleep, and also received bullets in his head, dying instantly. After the extraordinary crimes had been committed, the perpetrator of them went into the bed room where his wife had been killed and, lying down at her side, fired a bullet into his own brain and died at his wife's side.

A number of pool-room race checks were found about the house, showing that Derby had been trying his luck on betting.

The first knowledge of the crime was communicated in a letter written by Derby Saturday to a friend, who lived not far away, and which was sent him by special delivery. The letter was to the effect that when it had been received, the Derby family would be dead. When the friend hurried to the house Sunday morning, all that had been promised was seen to have been fulfilled.

COURT KNEW ENGLISH.

The Expression Was in the Negative, But Not Commonly Understood That Way.

"Ten dollars," said the judge.

"Duty your honor," said the prisoner, "I protest against this fine. I have the right to make a defense against the charge."

"But you have pleaded guilty," said the judge, according to the New York Times.

"I beg your honor's pardon. I denied the charge in the plainest terms."

"Young man," said the judge sternly, "I want to call your attention to the fact that the court understands the English language. You have pleaded guilty in unmistakable words. The plaintiff charges you with assault and battery. It is clearly evident that he has been assaulted and battered. According to your own statement, he approached you on the street and used abusive language toward you. Then you say that you 'didn't do a thing to him.' If the court understands the language spoken by millions of people you immediately wiped up the earth with him. The fine stands, and any further reflection upon the court's knowledge of English will cost you $10 more."

a Western Woolgrower.

Newcastle, Wyo., Dec. 21.—There is a man in this place who claims that no one need suffer with backache, as he has proven in his own case that it can be completely and permanently cured.

His name is S. C. Holst, and he is a stock raiser a woolgrower.

"I was shearing sheep at the time the first pain came on," says Mr. Holst. "I was so bad for two years afterwards that I could hardly straighten, and when once down, it was almost impossible for me to get up again.

"I tried all the medicine I could hear of and several doctors without help, not even for a moment. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they made a new man out of me. I felt as if there was new blood in my veins. I am as stout in the back as a mule and can lift and work as hard as I please without an ache or pain in any part of my body.

"It is now over a year since they cured me and I can say there is not a healthier man in Wyoming than I am, and before using Doan's Kidney Pills there was not a more complete physical wreck in the whole country than I was."

"Here, take this rifle," cried the excited showman. "The leopard has escaped. When you find him, shoot him on the spot!" "Which spot, sir?" gasped the green circus hand.—Scribe.

Miss Alice Bailey, of Atlanta, Ga., tells how she was permanently cured of inflammation of the ovaries, and escaped the surgeon's knife, by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The universal indications of the approach of woman's great enemy, inflammation and disease of the ovaries, are a dull throbbing pain, accompanied by a sense of tenderness and heat low down in the side, with occasional shooting pains. On examination it may be found that the region of pain will show some swelling. This is the first stage of inflammation of the ovaries.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express my gratitude for the restored health and happiness Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought into my life.

"I had suffered for three years with terrible pains at the time of menstruation, and did not know what the trouble was until the doctor pronounced it inflammation of the ovaries, and proposed an operation.

"I felt so weak and sick that I felt sure that I could not survive the ordeal, and so I told him that I would not undergo it. The following week I read an advertisement in the paper of your Vegetable Compound in such an emergency, and so I decided to try it. Great was my joy to find that I actually improved after taking two bottles, so I kept taking it for ten weeks, and at the end of that time I was cured. I had gained eighteen pounds and was in excellent health, and am now.

"You surely deserve great success, and you have my very best wishes."—MISS ALICE BAILEY, 50 North Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.

Another woman saved from a surgical operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Read what she says:—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot thank you enough for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. If it had not been for your medicine, I think I would have died.

"I will tell you how I suffered. I could hardly walk, was unable to sleep or eat. Menstruation was irregular. At last I had to stay in my bed, and flowed so badly that they sent for a doctor, who said I had inflammation of the ovaries, and must go through an operation, as medicine could help me, but I could not do that.

"I received a little book of yours, and after reading it, I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am now a well woman. I shall praise your medicine as long as I live, and also recommend the same to anyone suffering as I was."—MRS. MINNIE OTTOSON, Otho, Iowa.

All sick women would be wise if they would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and be well.

ALLEGED LAND FRAUD.

John A. Benson, Wealthy San Francisco Man, Arrested.

Numerous Arrests of Employes in the Interior Department Are Expected to Follow and Others Will Be Dismissed From Service.

Washington, Dec. 19.—John A. Benson, a wealthy San Francisco real estate operator, charged by the interior department with being the head of alleged land frauds extending over a dozen states and territories to which Secretary Hitchcock referred at length in his annual report, was arrested on a charge of bribery Friday at the Willard hotel by Secret Service Officer John A. Burns.

It is alleged in the warrant that Benson paid $500 to Woodford D. Harlan, formerly chief of the special service division of the general land office and now a clerk in that office, on March 15, 1903, to extract information regarding an investigation of his operations by the land office.

As soon as Benson was apprehended he was taken before Commissioner Taylor, who issued the warrants. He wished to have a preliminary hearing of his case postponed, and the date for such hearing was fixed for December 30. He gave bail for his appearance on that date, when the government attorneys will ask to have him held for a grand jury.

An officer of the government said that the information obtained regarding the alleged conspiracy implicates a number of persons at present employed in the interior department at Washington and elsewhere. Numerous arrests are expected to follow that of Benson and some employes, who may not be arrested, will be dismissed from the service. It is said that Secretary Hitchcock and the special attorneys in the case hold it absolutely necessary to the successful working out of the case that no action be taken with reference to any other alleged offenders until the principals in the case have been apprehended.

Government officers say that Benson came to Washington in answer to decoy letters and with the intention of bribing persons supposed to work in the land office, but who were in reality secret service officers. The information on which the warrant was issued said in brief that Mr. Harlan, in his capacity as chief of the special service division of the general land office had charge of the investigation of the land frauds, sending out special agents in suspected cases of fraud and receiving the reports of such agents on the cases, and that Benson had payed to him the sum of $500 in return for being allowed to examine the reports of the special agents in his own case. The specific offense alleged is that Benson unlawfully gave money to an officer of the United States acting in behalf of the United States in an official function with intent to induce him to do an act in violation of his lawful duty, contrary to section 5451 of the Revised Statutes.

Benson declined to make any statement further than to say he would appear when wanted. Mr. Benson, it is asserted, has defrauded the government of at least 100,000 acres of land by various schemes since the passage of the forest reserve act in 1897. That act provides that the owner of land which is wanted by the government for a forest reserve shall be allowed to select in place of it other public land. It is alleged that Benson obtained advance information as to the land that would be wanted by the government for forest reserves and that by means of fraudulent entries, or by purchase, immense tracts of such lands were obtained and afterward exchanged for valuable public lands.

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Regular Session.

Washington, Dec. 16.—Senate—The senate continued the debate on the Cuban bill Tuesday. Mr. Perkins (Cal.) spoke for the measure, as did Mr. Simmons (N. C.). Mr. McCumber (N. D.) opposed it. Mr. Patterson (Col.) made an extended speech against the bill during which there were numerous colloquies between himself, Mr. Aldrich and Mr. Dolliver. With the former there was quite a lively debate on the tariff, in which Mr. Aldrich said the duty on sugar was too high. Mr. Dolliver replied to suggestions made by Mr. Patterson that Gov. Cummins, of Iowa, had changed his tariff views after having visited the white house.

House—Rural free delivery, reciprocity with Canada and the new republic of Panama were topics of discussion in the house. The subject of rural free delivery was introduced by Mr. Maddox (dem., Ga.), who claimed that certain states had been favored in the establishment of routes. This allegation resulted in a lively discussion. Mr. Hepburn (rep., Ia.) and Mr. Hemenway (rep., Ind.), among others, replied on the republican side. Mr. Crumpacker (rep., Ind.) defended the course pursued by the administration in dealing with the Central American situation and replied to criticisms which have been made on the opposite side of the chamber.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Senate—By the decisive vote of 57 to 18 the senate, Wednesday, passed the bill carrying into effect the reciprocity treaty with Cuba. The final vote came at the close of the day, which was marked by a debate which, while at all times animated, was never acrimonious. The principal speeches were made by Mr. Spooner for the bill and by Mr. Bailey against it. The bill passed carries into execution the treaty between the United States and Cuba, which was ratified last March. The treaty provides for a reduction of 20 per cent. from the rates of duty under the Dingley law on all Cuban articles imported into the United States and a varying reduction of from 20 to 40 per cent. from the established Cuban duty on articles into Cuba from the United States. After the passage of the Cuban treaty the senate agreed to the house resolution providing for a holiday recess from December 19 to January 4.

House — Central American affairs were discussed in the house and also pensions, industrial and agricultural conditions and labor. The session lasted more than four hours, the house being in committee of the whole almost the entire time on the pension appropriation bill on which no conclusion was reached. Mr. Lind (dem., Minn.), referring to an editorial published in a home paper, which he said reflected on his relations with Mr. Williams, the minority leader, stated that he desired to say that his relations with Mr. Williams were of the most cordial character.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Senate—The senate Thursday was the scene of a most importane debate on the isthmian canal question aa affected by the president's recognition of the independence of the republic of Panama. The discussion began with a speech by Mr. Hoar, on his resolution of inquiry, and lasted several hours. In addition to Mr. Hoar's address there were speeches by Mr. Gorman and Mr. Foraker. All three were notable utterances and of historical interest.

House—The house passed without division the pension appropriation bill carrying $138,150,000. While the bill was under consideration, there was a general discussion on Panama, rural free delivery, tariff and pensions, speeches being made by Messrs. Scott (rep., Kan.), Miers (dem., Ind.), Sims (dem., Tenn.) and Burgess (dem., Tex.).

Washington, Dec. 19.—Senate—The relationsbip of the United States to the new republic of Panama continued to be the leading theme in the senate Friday, but the discussion was confined to one senator. Mr. Daniel (Va.) was the speaker and he advocated the acceptance of Mr. Hoar's resolution, calling on the president for more information relative to the November revolution in Panama. He said that so far as the available information shows the executive authorities of the United States had knowledge of the revolution in advance of the people of the isthmus and he contended that the action of this country in preventing the landing of Colombian troops in Panama was without precedent. Mr. Fulton made a speech in support of the bill to give aid to the proposed Lewis and Clark expoaition at Portland, Ore., in 1905.

House—Among the measures of public interest introduced in the house were the following: By Representative Morrell (Pa.), granting a rebate of 15 per centum of tariff duties on goods brought to and from the Philippine islands in American ships; by Representative Shafroth (Col.), a constitutional amendment providing that the right to vote shall not be denied on account of sex.

BLUFF OF REPUBLICANS.

Trying to Delude the Voters Into the Belief That Everybody Is Prosperous.

The republicans have fooled the people so often and so long, or at least they think they have done so, in regard to prosperity and its causes, that they think the people will believe whatever the republicans tell them. This is having a demoralizing effect upon the republicans and is making them even more reckless of facts than formerly. If the republican leaders in congress assert that black is white they fully expect a majority of the people to believe it, at least on election day.

The republicans have but one cause for prosperity—the Dingley tariff act and continued republican administration. Good crops in this country with high prices, occasioned by the scarcity abroad, cuts no ice, in their plan of salvation, for all of these things will be reversed if the wicked democrats should get control of the government; at least so the republicans unhesitatingly tell us, for haven't we had experience in the past?

Now that we are in the midst of a severe depression and that hundreds of thousands are out of employment entirely, while millions are working at reduced wages, the republicans continue to prattle about "republican prosperity" and to assert that we are more prosperous than ever before. When the Hon. J. G. Cannon was nominated for speaker of the house, he said, in a speech to the republican caucus:

"The people never were so well and perfectly employed as now."

In a speech in the house on December 1, Congressman Hepburn, of Iowa, unblushingly stated:

"To-day every man in the United States who wants to work finds compensating wages in the great labor fields of the United States, and at a compensating wage. What has there been a time when the distribution of wealth was as great as it is now, and when the humblest and the poorest had so large a share of the accumulations of each year aa now? There never has been a time."

Of course the democrats quickly accept such challenges as to the present condition of industry and business. They are having long lists of wage reductions and closed mills printed in the Congressional Record. They are also printing numerous statements from leading republican papers and from trade journals which freely and frankly declare that we are now at the beginning of what appears to be a period of depression and are discussing the probability of the extent of this period. But what do the republicans care for these facts when they are confident that they can delude the voters into believing that everybody is prosperous? Are the people really hypnotized on election day by these leading republicans? Will the people ever open their eyes and see the facts for themselves? When they do there will be a big and varied collection of republican statesmen out of jobs. Times will then surely get bad right away; very, very bad.

——The wisdom of acquiring the Philippine islands cannot be doubted now. What a convenient place to send men about to undergo one of those official investigations!—Indianapolis Sentinel.

——It is hard to understand the mysterious ways of prosperity. The discovery of new oil fields throughout the country has had the effect to increase rather than reduce the price of the illuminating fluid.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.).

——Two republican administrations have placed us on a business basis. In Nebraska a federal grand jury is investigating the sale of postmasterships by the republican party, while in Washington they are investigating the sale of the government by the incumbents.—St. Louis Republic.

——Twenty-three of the democratic members of the United States senate are quoted as favoring the nomination of Judge Alton B. Parker for the presidency. They represent many widely separated constituencies, and that almost all the democratic senators recognize the distinguished New York jurist as the logical candidate is distinctly impressive.—Buffalo Courier.

——The republican leaders in New York have been having a merry time of late. One of the party organs now says: "The governor's victory was complete. There really was nothing left for Platt to do except to acquiesce." It adds that the governor "laid down the law to Senator Platt and Col. Dunn in no uncertain way," and now all is sweetness and light and harmony. Everybody knows what that kind of compulsory harmony is worth, especially where Tom Platt is the person who is said to be in the strait-jacket.—Chicago Chronicle.

——The "stand-patters" for a worse than war tariff that shelters monopolies have by their profligate expenditures done their best to stop the public demand for a reduction of taxation.—N. Y. World.

——The republican organization in this state is just now a seething cauldron of animosities, passions, resentments, ambitions and unsatisfied desires. The material for a conflagration is at hand, and even with all the precautions taken to guard against such a calamity on the eve of a state and national convention, the catastrophe is not far off.—Brooklyn Citizen.

HANNA BACKS OUT.

Leaves Roosevelt with a Bad Job on His Hands and Himself Free to Act.

It looks very much as if Mr. Hanna were leaving Mr. Roosevelt "with the bag to hold." In the bag Mr. Roosevelt is holding is a big national scandal and several other detrimental facts peculiarly associated with his administration. They become the more peculiarly his own political property when the great party boss, Marcus A. Hanna, declines to have anything to do with them, says the St. Louis Republic.

By cutting himself off from Mr. Roosevelt and all things Roosevelt ian, Mr. Hanna leaves himself free to follow his own political fancy in his own political way. Mr. Hanna could go before the republican national convention unincumbered, from the convention's point of view. He could go before the convention with a clean promise of providing a radically different quality of administration and federal service, and a promise of vindicating his party's record, of redeeming his party and rehabilitating it in the people's respect. By contrast, his competitor, Mr. Roosevelt, could not make such promises; at least could not give such promises a political value so that they would pass current in exchange for the pople's votes. Mr. Roosevelt is estopped by the administration's record.

Mr. Hanna's declaration that he will not occupy the chairmanship as of old conclusively demonstrates that "boodle" possesses a tremendous political significance in republican circles; in fact the declaration almost establishes "boodle" as an issue, were a declaration required to establish what is established already. Certainly a clear distinction, based in good part upon the fact of the national scandals, would contrast Mr. Hanna's candidacy from Mr. Roosevelt's, with the difference altogether in favor of the former

Mr. Hanna's declaration places him in a semi-receptive attitude. If republicans want him, they may have him. His declaration clearly attests that Mr. Roosevelt, so far from being a aura thing, is regarded as a dangerous proposition by a big faction in his party. With Mr. Hanna's declaration, republican politics shows its first spark of life and interest.

FAULT FOUND WITH MESSAGE.

Republican Senators Are Disgruntled at the Passages About Treaties.

The more President Roosevelt's message is analyzed the more fault republican senators are finding with it. They have discovered, says a Washington telegram, that, among other things objectionable, it contains long discussions of the Chinese and Panama canal treaties, which are not only contrary to usage, but a distinct violation of one of the unwritten laws which control the mutual relations of the executive power and the senate in regard to foreign treaties.

Treaties are supposed to be held a secret until they have been submitted to the senate. Under the rules of that body they are maintained as confidential executive business until such time as the senate by a majority vote agrees to their publication. Heretofore presidents in transmitting treaties to the senate have merely indicated their character. President Roosevelt, however, is no slave to precedent or anybody's rules. He deals extensively with the subject matter of both treaties, so that their contents are familiar to every American citizen who took the pains to read the president's message.

Senators regard this as a direct breach of good faith and are angry. They say that the president ought to have known better. He will probably hear from it hereafter when the treaties are taken up for ratification. Then the senate will not let such an opportunity slip by without reminding the president of the necessity for greater prudence. It is only a question of time when there will be a public disagreement between the president and the senate. Until now republican senators have refrained from expressing open criticism of the president's conduct only because they have not been sure of their ground. They have been afraid that the public would side with the president. Now, however, they are convinced that the president is losing his popularity and they will take the first occasion that presents itself to express their condemnation at his strenuosity.

——Senator Scott, of West Virginia, is still for Hanna for president. Looks as if he had something he wanted to trade.—Los Angeles Herald.

——Speaker Cannon has a very weak voice, but that is not so serious a defect as the poor eyesight common to presiding officers when the wrong man is trying to address the chair.—Albany Argus.

——Secretary Shaw bases his plea for a ship subsidy on the argument that the marine interests of the country are the only ones which are not protected. It is a ghastly shame that there should be any discrimination in passing around the "graft."—Detroit Free Press.

——The most noteworthy trait of the president's communication to congress is its lack of candor. This is a defect the country did not expect in a public document from Mr. Roosevelt, who, whatever his faults, has been believed to possess the courage of his convictions. The unfortunate predicament in which the temperament of the executive places him in relation to recent events at the Isthmus of Panama has led him, doubtless unconsciously, into suppressing some of the essentials of his course therein and into perverting ascertainable truths connected with it.—Chicago Chronicle.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER
Wednesday, - - Dec. 23, 1903.
W. L. RIDDELL, - Publisher.

When a system under which the public roads are worked gives as universal dissatisfaction as that in force in Boone county, it looks like it would be well to try another, at least one year. When once in a rut there is no use of remaining there until it is demonstrated that to get out of it would be going from bad to worse.

If Mr. Barton, of Pendleton county, is qualified for the position of Speaker of the next House of Representatives, he is certainly entitled to the support of the members of his neighbor counties. That he is qualified and worthy is taken for granted because of the pleasure it gives the Democrats of Pendleton county to honor him.

The Missouri Supreme Court reversed the finding of the lower court in the case of Ed Butler, of St. Louis, sentenced to three years' imprisonment on the charge of bribery. The court orders the defendant's dismissal, holding that the St. Louis Board of Health had no authority to let a garbage contract and that Butler could not be convicted of bribing the board to do something it had no authority to do.

The first number of the Owen County Democrat, Evan E. Settle and Frank C. Greene, owners and editors, was issued last Thursday. It is a six column quorto, and starts out with a fine lot of advertisements, which are very essential to the prosperity of a local paper. The editors are natives of Owen county, and popular with the people, Mr. Greene being Commonwealth's Attorney-elect in this judicial district. Owen county is large enough to support two good papers, and here is hoping the able and energetic young editors will have abundant success.

The resolution offered in the Senate by Senator Hoar is significant and important. It asks many questions about the Panama imbroglio that are not only interesting, but will prove embarrassing to the Administration. Coming as it does from so old, able and experienced a Senator as Mr. Hoar, who is chairman of the Committe on Federal Relations, it can be accepted as an indication that the venerable Massachusetts statesman is not disposed to follow the President in his course until he is perfectly satisfied that the Administration has acted on the dead square.

There were about forty regiments of Kentucky union soldiers in the great charge at Mission Ridge. The 23rd Kentucky was the first regiment to break through the line at Bragg's headquarters, capturing two pieces of artillery, which they used on the retreating foe, and then moved on to attack the enemy in front of Sheridan's division in flank and rear, enabling Sheridan to move to the ridge without resistance. The colors were shot down three times on the charge and all of its color guards killed or wounded. And yet there are no marks on the battlefield in honor of the noble men who fought there for the flag of their country.

Now that the question of ballot reform it is so prominently before the people, is likely that a number of bills along that line will be presented to the next Kentucky Legislature. The subject is a grave one. Much good or much evil may be accomplished. Any measure calculated solely for party advantage will be condemned by the best citizens of the Commonwealth. What we want is a law that will give the people a fair vote and an honest account, doing away as far as is possible with strife and turmoil. To that end the Democrat offers these suggestions:

Have all party nominations made at the same time and by the same vote that elects. Let the names of all candidates for party nominations be placed on the regular election ballot, the candidate receiving the largest vote of his party for the office to which he aspires to be the nominee of his party and have counted for him all the votes cast for that office. For illustrations: There are three candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor, and four candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor. Place the names of all the candidates on the ballot. The Democratic voter votes for his choice of the three Democratic candidates, the ballots are counted, the one of these three candidates receiving the most votes to be the Democratic nominee for Governor, and all the Democratic votes cast for Governor to be counted for him. Say Beckham, Breckinridge and Hendricks are the candidates. The county vote for each is certified and reported to the State canvassing board. When they make the count they find that Beckham has received 48,000, Breckinridge 45,000, Hendricks, 37,000; Beckham is the nominee, and gets the total vote of 130,000. And so with the candidates on the other tickets and for all other offices.

This plan would do away with the bitter contests for party nominations and cause a strict and fair lining up of the party strength. The candidates of a party would be compelled to work together for party success, and they would not dare to indulge in vituperation and trickery against each other. The voter would be compelled to vote his choice for once and all and could not "repeat" in the primary The argument to be made against this plan is that the ballot would be intricate. It, would, but would not this very fact make it necessary that the voter should be able to read and have sufficient intelligence to select the names of his favorites in voting? We think this would practically amount to an educational qualification and reach the desired end. We should like to hear from the newspapers of Kentucky what they think of this suggestion.– Harrodsburg Democrat.

Good roads, are one thing that the good people of Boone county have never had the pleasure of having. Why so? simply because we have been working the roads under the same old system that our fore-fathers had when they worked the public roads. It might have been a good system in days gone by when there was not one hundreth part of the travel on the public roads then that we have now in this day and age. What we need is to have our system changed, and we fully endorse the plan that some good intelligent citizen has given us in the Recorder, to have one supervisor over the county, and let him give the public roads the attention that they so much need. We have in office the best county officers Boone ever elected, and we hope they will come to the rescue of this neglectful cause.

Farmers, Producers and Consumers of Tobacco in Boone County, State of Kentucky.

I have offered the following bill in Congress:

"A Bill for the Relief of the Farmers and Tobacco Growers of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Farmers and growers of tobacco shall hereafter have the right to sell tobacco in the raw or unadulterated, of their own growth, in any quantity, either in the leaf, twist, or such other form as they may wish, free from any tax or charge, or being in any manner subject to any statutory regulation on the part of the Government of the United States. All statutes in conflict herewith are hereby repealed."

Its passage will prevent the arbitrary fixing of the price of raw leaf, or the manufactured product. It will be an equitable automatic governor of prices, protecting both producer and consumer, and working no injury to the manufacturer, who is satisfied with a legitimate profit on his capital. This bill has been endorsed by the White Burley Tobacco Growers Association of Kentucky, the only organization of Tobacco Growers in the United States. Every Member of the Kentucky Delegation in Congress is enthusiastically supporting it, but there is no influence so potent before Congress as a direct petition from the people. I want one hundred thousand citizens to petition Congress through their Members, urging the passage of this bill. Blank petitions will be furnished upon application. Your hearty co-operation is most earnestly desired.

Very Respectfully,
South Trimble,
7th Kentucky District.

A pretty fancy is to lay a looking-glass, or large pieces of glass about under the Christmas tree, edging with cotton batting and sprinkling frosting powder on the cotton to represent snow-bound lakelets. Bright colored tissue paper, crepon paper, or colored waxes may be made to represent flowers and berries, tying them to the branches with baby ribbon or bright cord. Empty egg-shells make pretty baskets to fill with small candies.

Fight Will Be Bitter.

Those who will persist in closing their ears against the continual recommendation of Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, will have a long and bitter fight with their troubles, if not ended earlier by fatal termination Read what T. R. Beall of Beall, Miss. has to say: "Last fall my wife had every symptom of consumption. She took Dr. King's New Discovery after everything else had failed. Was it not that Attorney Sidney Gaines' reputation for sobriety and veracity is known of all men, some would, doubtless, say, after reading the following, that he is a notorious fabricator, or he is steaming up for a hilarious time during the approaching holiday period: Water in the field where Mr. Gaines keeps his stock gave out the otherday, and he at once set about to locate a spring in a swampy place in a hollow. The first time he drove his spade into the ground he turned up a large turtle. He thought nothing of this but with the second effort with the spade up came another turtle. When the fifth turtle was taken out, the performance became very interesting: "My stars!" said he, "nothing here but turtles." Having taken out one or two more turtles Mr. Gaines abandoned his search for water, and hastened back to town and related his experience. He has made a calculation and ascertained at the rate he unearthed turtles, the small swamp in which he was at work would yield several wagon loads, which would produce several thousand gallons of soup. The turtles had been driven to the swamp by the failure of water in the branches in the neighborhood.

Samuel H. Stephens, 65, of Big Boone Grange Hall neighborhood, died of heart disease at 3 a. m., last Monday. He had been in very poor health for several months, and Sunday afternoon he was feeling better than he had been for some time, and the services of neighbors as watches were dispensed with that night, his wife and daughter being the only persons about the house when the summons came. He leaves a wife, two sons and three daughters to mourn the loss of a kind and indulgent husband and father. Mr Stephens was the son of the late Micajah Stephens, and his wife was a daughter of the late T. P. Marshall. Mr. Stephens was a man who always stood well in the community where he lived, and was reliable in every respect. He was a prominent member of Union Baptist church, from which the funeral will be conducted to day.

C. W. Deans, Executive Committeeman for Carroll county, in his card in the last issue of the News, says: "After the meeting of the growers in Carrollton on the 5th inst., releasing all signers of the contract, no doubt a great many will think that this is the last of the Association, but such is not the case. We must and will succeed. We failed on account of the stringency in the money market, and on account of the failure of the farmers in not taking the interest that they should in such an important undertaking. We merely gave up the idea of handling this crop; we do not think we have made a failure, but on the other hand, have made giant strides towards the consummation of this gigantic undertakig. We have paved the way by getting the farmers to thinking all over this district, and they are finding out how they stand, and what little share they get out of this tobacco, compared with what the manufactures receive; and he also knows that there will never be any relief for him unless he does go into this organization and help himself."

LIVER TROUBLES

"I find Thedford's Black-Draught a good medicine for liver disease. It cured my son after he had spent $100 with doctors. It is all the medicine I take."—MRS. CAROLINE MARTIN, Parkersburg, W. Va.

If your liver does not act regularly go to your druggist and secure a package of Thedford's Black-Draught and take a dose tonight. This great family medicine frees the constipated bowels, stirs up the torpid liver and causes a healthy secretion of bile.

Thedford's Black-Draught will cleanse the bowels of impurities and strengthen the kidneys. A torpid liver invites colds, biliousness, chills and fever and all manner of sickness and contagion. Weak kidneys result in Bright's disease which claims as many victims as consumption. A 25-cent package of Thedford's Black-Draught should always be kept in the house.

"I used Thedford's Black-Draught for liver and kidney complaints and found nothing to excel it."—WILLIAM COFFMAN, Marblehead, Ill.

Hon. M. D. Gray made his final appearance here last week as Commonwealth's Attorney, closing a second term in that office, being longer than it was ever held by any of his predecessors. It is said that the stronger the counsel for the defense the more to his liking, and to the better advantage he would appear. He quits the office with the good wishes of all.

The grand jury adjourned late last Thursday afternoon, having been in session four days. Thirteen true bills were returned, several of them being of quite a serious nature the parties therein being charged with housebreaking. Gaming and selling liquors constituted the offenses charged in most of the indictments.

The grand jury made the following written report:

"We have been in session four days, have examined 35 witnesses, found 13 indictments. We have visited the county infirmary and find that it is well kept. The inmates are well cared for. We found that the cistern was dry and they had to haul water. We would therefore, recommend that another cistern be dug. We found the down spouts out of order; also that the roof leaks, and that the house needs repairing. We also examined the jail and found it in good condition."

The judge took the matter under advisement, and will return on Friday of the second week in January to render a decision on that point and take further steps in the case. Peter Hager, of East Bend, left at this office, two ears of corn that grew on one "shank" but in different husks. He says the finding of that kind of ears presages a Democratic victory. The fall that Cleveland was elected he found a double ear, on which he based a prediction of Cleveland's success, and when he found another this fall he was satisfied that Beckham would have a walkover. He will keep a sharp look out for a double ear next fall, and if he finds one he will know that a Democratic victory will follow in November.

Very few hogs are being fed in this part of the county. A scarcity of corn makes a scarcity of hogs. There is a great change in the manner in which hogs are now prepared for market from that of 40 years ago. In those days Absalom Gaines, John Rogers, Morgan Rice, Wesley Rice and John Craven would fatten and take to market in one year more hogs than the entire county now produces in three years. They would buy field after field of corn and turn their hogs in, and all they had to do was to eat and grow fat. Their hogs were never considered ready for market until they would average 300 pounds or better. Bellevue was their shipping point, and about this time of the year several large droves would be sent off each week, and the boys through the country considered it quite a treat to secure a position as driver and go to Cincinnati with a drove of hogs. Some times a bad market would be struck, and they would be gone several days, which they devoted to seeing the "elephant." Andy Shroats handled, for many years, nearly all the hogs the above named parties shipped.

Rain on election day may have some effect on the aggregate vote but it is not likely to effect one party more than another. In the old days of Whig and Democratic parties it used to be argued that as the Whigs wore silk hats and good clothes they would not run the risk of getting wet to vote, but those days are past. Nowadays there are about as many silk hat voters in one party as the other, and neither party derives any particular benefit from bad weather.

The Prince of Peace

At His Name Every Knee Shall Bow and Every Tongue Confess

EVERY country of earth offers an apotheosis in the person of some great man who distinguished himself in some great crisis in its affairs. Switzerland idolizes William Tell, Russia her Peter the Great, Prussia her Frederick the Great, France her Napoleon, Italy her Garibaldi, England her Alfred the Great and the United States her Washington.

It is food for reflection that in the selections of heroes and in hero worship it is an invariable rule, not a single exception being known in all history, that choice is made of one who has crowned his life with deeds done in battle. By and through the flash of the sword alone has immortality of fame been won by mortals.

The scimiter of Mohammed and not his Koran conquered Arabia, Armenia and the Balkans. Moses was a lawgiver, but he also was a mighty warrior and led his followers on from one victory to another. It is he and Joshua and David and John Hyrcanus, all intrepid soldiers, who have made glorious the history of the Jewish people. The history of Mohammedanism is written in blood and Omar and Saladin stand out prominent in its records. So with other nations. Deeds, deeds only, and these calling for great holocausts of human lives, to make imperishable some individual name.

Christmas day offers an anomaly, however, in the history of men who have lived and wrought wonders. The Christ was a man of peace, deploring war. What is yet more strange, He is glorified through His words and not through His deeds. The Heavenly voice said to the simple shepherd on the plains of Bethlehem: "Behold! I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all the people; for unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour which is Christ the Lord." And the accompanying choir with ineffable melody sang the refrain: "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace."

The Christ-birth and the Christ-life stand forth the opposite of all other great lives that have filled pages in earth's history. Born of humble parentage in a stable, amid the lowing of kine and the raucous complaining of discontented cattle, reared in the far-away bleak hills of Galilee, engaged daily in sawing logs into boards, or planing the latter into smoothness, He sets forth suddenly, at the age of 28, as a teacher of righteousness. Not among strangers, but in the midst of His own people, He appeared, and they were astounded at the profundity of His knowledge. As though to persuade themselves that they were not mistaken as to His identity, they asked of one another: "Is not this the carpenter's son?"

His life work was brief, but four short years! Compare this with the years spent by other illuminati of earth in perpetuating their fame. Without use of money, or influence, or crowders, and without courting favor of the rich and powerful, He went about from town to town preaching His gospel of peace and love. Those who gathered to Him were poor men—fishermen, publicans, small farmers or herdsmen, rather.

The waters of the sea of Judea were but little stirred by His presence. So little was His presence felt that no contemporaneous historian of His time, outside of His immediate followers, makes any reference to His life or His works. Josephus, a voluminous and very just historian, ignores Him utterly. No record has been found at Rome of His death, so little impression did it make upon the mind of Pilate.

True it is that He healed sick men, cleansed lepers, raised the dead and cast out devils. But these were subordinate and incidental only to His life-work, which was that of proclaiming a new gospel—that men should love one another. He made no parade of miracle-working. It was only when the suffering were brought into His presence that He made exercise of His divine power in healing.

He died the most shameful, disgraceful death known to His generation. In his extremity He was deserted even by His most devoted followers. He trod the wine-press of agony alone.

Yet this Man of Sorrows has conquered the world. Other illustrious men lived out their little day and all that remains of them is the memory of their deeds. They sought to build up material kingdoms; Christ's realm is in the hearts of men. His teachings have survived the overthrow of a thousand kingdoms of earth. His words to-day are as potent to sway men as when they came burning from His lips. All the higher civilization of earth yields Him reverence and homage.

Age but serves to strengthen the might of His power and to confirm the promise of the prophecy: "At the name of Jesus every knee shall bow and every tongue confess."

A Dream of Christmas

I WATCH the glowing embers as the moments flit away
For Christmas will be with us in the morning cold and gray,
The winds sleep in the valleys and the stars shine on the snow
The while I dream of Christmases that vanished long ago;
I see the tiny stockings hanging by the ruddy hearth,
In every room this holy night is hushed the childish mirth,
For the little ones are sleeping 'neath the winter's snare dome,
A-dreaming of the happy hour when Santa Claus shall come.

WHO would not for a moment wander to the Long Ago
To see the little stockings hanging in a cozy row
Who would not draw the coverlid from each well cherished face
And gaze upon the children in their innocence and grace!
I see them sweetly sleeping and about them all is still,
They do not hear the jingling bells upon the whitened hill;
Cheek to cheek they lie in slumber, angel guarded, as I know,
A vision of some Christmas fair that filled long ago.

WHO plucks not from the vanished Past some Christmas like to this?
Who feels not still upon his brow some holy Christmas kiss?
The bells that ring to-night beneath the sky's clear dissdom
Tell more than this sweet story of the Babe of Bethlehem:
They bring to us from out the Past the loves we cherish yet,
Their tones recall the Christmases we never quite forget.
We've but to listen now to hear the bells across the snow
That ring once more deep in our hearts as in the Long Ago.

BUT in the chimes to-night I hear a music not of earth—
The star-born chorus that proclaimed the humble Christ-child's birth.
And a sweet, immortal vision comes from Judah far away
Of herd dowbed in grandeur and in love the world's first Christmas Day;
To-night I hear a tapping at my widow framed in white,
'Tis not the bells which on the hills ring out this winter night;
Nay, surely 'tis a tapping, rising soft above the din,
And dreaming, I the chosen seek to let the Christ-child in.

FRANCES STOREY'S HAPPIEST CHRISTMAS

By HILDA RICHMOND

"Papa says one of you girls must accept Aunt Caroline's invitation for the holidays," said Mrs. Storey, with a troubled look on her motherly face. "I am sorry to have you go to that dead-alive little village, but you know papa seldom says 'must,' so we will have to make the best of it. Now which will it be?"

"It's simply impossible for me to go, mamma," said Margaret, whirling lightly around on the piano stool. "I've practiced for weeks on this Christmas music and the entertainment could not go on without my playing. Frances or Kate will have to sacrifice this time, and it's only fair, for they have not so much on their minds as I have."

"Why, Margaret, my time is as precious as yours," said Kate, looking up from the new dress she was finishing, "and besides I am going to sing at the party next week."

"I might go if someone would finish dressing these dolls for the tree down at the mission. Poor Aunt, Carrie must be lonesome since her only daughter went to Oregon to live and I'd like to see her again. She used to let us make little pies and muss around in her clean kitchen, and at home Sarah never allowed us to spoil her domain," said Frances.

"I'll attend to the dolls," said Margaret, promptly, "and help you pack your trunk if you need help. I have no doubt you will have a good time at Cedar Hill, for Aunt always thought so much of you."

In spite of her 19 years the whole family considered Frances a mere child and no one but the mother thought it made any difference that she was to spend the holidays in a lonely house with Aunt Caroline, instead of having a share in the city celebrations, which she so much enjoyed. Mrs. Storey slipped a number of packages marked "open on Christmas eve" in the big trunk and provided a stylish traveling dress, but her heart welled as the trim figure disappeared amid a chorus of farewells and the noise of the busy station. Mr. Storey gave his daughter some bright gold pieces with the instructions to spend them as she liked, but Frances reflected that she was likely to bring them home gain for want of a chance to invest in anything except goods found in a country store at Cedar Hill.

It was late in the afternoon before the brakeman announced "Cedar Hill," and Frances was surprised to see a number of passengers get off. "Is this really Cedar Hill?" she asked of an old man near.

"It really is," he answered with a smile. "If I am not mistaken, you are Fanny Storey that used to play with my granddaughters. Don't you remember Grandfather Devon?"

"Of course I do. How are Nellie and Ruth? The reason I thought this was not Cedar Hill is because the town when I knew it, was only a little place, and this looks like a city."

"We've had a boom since those days. Here, Horace, help Miss Storey with her luggage. I can take care of myself. This is the young lady who used to play with the girls a dozen years ago, but I don't suppose she remembers the freckled boy who built playhouses for her."

"Yes I do," said Frances, shaking hands with the elegantly dressed young man. "You always built the very nicest houses of any boys we knew Mr. Devon, and I still recollect them with pleasure."

All this time they were leaving the train and looking for Aunt Caroline, who evidently had not received the letter announcing Frances' visit, for she was not in sight. "We'll take you to Mrs. Howard's, for she lives close to us," said the young man, loading himself with "Bissy's" baggage. "You never would find the old house without a guide, for factories and stores and churches have sprung up in such profusion that it is entirely overshadowed."

"I wish mamma and the girls could see me now," said Frances, gazing at the latest styles in dresses in a store window. "Mamma cried to think of my coming to this out-of-the-way place and I very nearly started with only a satchel, thinking I would only need a few clothes. We write and get letters from Cedar Hill so seldom that I never dreamed of the change I see to-day."

"You'll be glad enough you brought your trunk, for things are lively during the holidays."

"What is that beautiful building we are coming to?" inquired Frances, as they neared a stone structure that might have graced a city.

"That is the public library," said Mr. Devon. "I suppose you have a supply of books in that big trunk for fear there would be nothing to read in our town. I won't mention it to the citizens though, for fear they might put you on the first train for home. There is Mrs. Howard on the porch. She knows you."

The days that followed were busy ones for Frances. She sent a telegram telling of her safe arrival and found only time for the briefest notes till after Christmas, on account of the many places to go and the delightful things to do. Aunt Caroline enjoyed the company and the frolics to the utmost and urged her niece to make the old house as lively as possible. The girls and boys she played with years before flocked to see her, bringing friends, with them, till Frances declared this the nicest visit she ever had in her life.

"You and I are the committee on dolls for the poor children's Christmas tree," said Horace, coming into the parlor where Frances was putting up holly for the great day. "Imagine waiting till three days before the twenty-fifth before looking after dolls! But it's not their fault, for Miss Gray would have attended to it if her mother had not taken sick. Come, get your sunbonnet and we'll make short work of the infants."

"I'm going to buy some candy and fruit for the people at the hospital," said Frances when the dolls were disposed of. "Papa gave me some gold pieces to spend and they are burning holes in my pockets."

"A good idea. I'll go halves, for I feel like celebrating, too."

Over and over again Frances wished the folks at home could see her during the happy holidays. Every letter assured them that she was having a fine time, but it is impossible to put the spirit of good times on paper. The Christmas tree for the Sunday school of Third street church was a complete success and then the young people trooped off to the mission to distribute gifts and candy to the factory people who could not attend "the big church up town."

"Are you homesick, Fanny?" asked Nellie Devon, with an arm around Frances as the gay crowd sat waiting for the clock to strike 12 on Christmas eve in Mrs. Howard's old-fashioned parlor. "I don't want to remind you of home or make you sad, but you must have so many pleasant things to do in the city that we never heard about."

"I don't know what they are," laughed Frances. "I think I could give the president information about 'The Strenuous Life' since I've been here.

This is the busiest and happiest holiday time I ever had, except that I want all the folks at home to enjoy it, too."

"You must all come to dinner tomorrow—no, to-day—" said Mrs Howard as the young people started home. "It has been so many years since I had such a flock around me that I must make the most of it. I want Frances to have a good time so she will want to come every year."

Frances felt a touch of self-reproach on Christmas morning when she remembered the neat little parcels she was to have opened on the evening before. She had fallen into the happy sleep that visits the pure-hearted without a thought for the lovely time she was having and a little prayer for her family and friends. As she smoothed out the note slipped through the beautiful ring, she smiled to read the tender message—"My Dear Daughter: I hope this will be the happiest Christmas of your life to, reward you for giving up your own pleasure to gratify Aunt Caroline. Many happy returns of the day, sweetheart. Mother."

Mrs. Howard found time on Christmas day for a long letter to her brother, in which she said, "You must be prepared to give us your little Fanny, for I am sure Horace Devon has persuaded her that Cedar Hill is a good place to spend a lifetime. He is a rising young architect and has a fine place in the city, to which he goes every day. This may sound like strange tales, but I did not want the news to strike you too suddenly. Of course the young people are not rash enough to make plans far into the future without consulting you, but I can find no fault with their anticipations. Horace is a——"

But Mr. Storey had laid down the letter with a bewildered look that plainly showed his pain and astonishment. His wife expressed no surprise, though tears came into her eyes as she said, "You might have taken a hint from the child's short letters in which she spoke of being perfectly happy. I have been hoping this would be a happy day for her, but I am not quite prepared to say I like the realization of my wishes."

With the light streaming through the stained glass windows on the evergreen and holly wound around the stately pillars of the church and the Christmas music in her ears Frances found it hard to keep her thoughts from the mental picture of the bare little church Cedar Hill had boasted in other days. "Glory to God in the Highest," sang the sweet voices just as the choir in the church at home was doing at that very moment, but there was no homesickness in her heart.

Under cover of her big hymn book Horace Devon softly pressed her slim hand while the ushers seated late arrivals in the little pause that followed the anthem, and she smiled to think her mother's Christmas wish had come true.—Baptist Union.

A Christmas Mother

By FLAY C. RINGWALT

It was the week before Christmas, and one of the reception rooms at Trinity orphanage was filled with an air of excitement and the gay chatter of women's voices, says the Minneapolis Housekeeper. This year, the board of managers had adopted a new plan. Instead of soliciting general contributions for the Christmas tree, they were sending to society women interested in the institution the letters which the orphans had written Santa Claus, with an accompanying plea that each recipient would consider herself the dear old gentleman's substitute, and see to it that the little writer's wishes were gratified on Christmas morning.

"Do look at this!" interrupted the president, holding up a small envelope, stamped and sealed.

some one read aloud, amid laughter.

"Who handed it in?" asked one.

"Let me think. Oh, I remember now. It was that strange child, Dorothy Green. She's too queer. Often when all the other children are romping together, I've found her alone in the farthest corner of the playground, sitting with folded hands, staring up at the sky. I have a suspicion of—" She ended by making a quick whirling movement with one of her pretty hands.

"That means 'wheels in her head,'" explained the secretary, laughing. "Our illustrious leader has sworn off from slang, so she can't speak English as it is thought!"

A general laugh, then all the heads bent over the long table again, and there followed an impressive scratching of busy pens.

"Done?" asked the president, with a smile, as the secretary collected and counted the notes scattered over the table. "It's just time for the letter carrier," she added, glancing at the clock. "If I put them in our box he will get them and they'll be delivered this afternoon." She hurried away, the notes held tight in both hands.

"I gave them to the letter carrier myself," she announced on her return. "You addressed the envelopes," she added, turning to the secretary. "Are you sure that nobody was left out?"

"How mean of you to suggest horrid possibilities, my dear!" retorted the secretary. "Please hand me my list. I know that they were all right, but to convince the assembled multitude, I shall run over the names aloud. Now listen: 'Brown, Burton, Carter—' "

"You didn't send one to Mrs. Marion Carter!" interrupted the president.

"Of course I did! Why not?"

"My dear child, don't you know that her own little girl has just died? Mrs. Carter is almost insane with grief. I wouldn't have such a thing happen for worlds!"

A woman sat hopelessly rocking before a cheerless fire in a desolate nursery. The room had an abundance of furniture, walls crowded with bright-colored prints, and floor strewn with scattered toys, but the room and the woman's heart were empty, for the sweet child's spirit that had filled them with was gone.

The nursery door softly opened and a maid tiptoed into the room, cautiously glancing at the face gazing into the fire.

"A letter, Mrs. Carter," she explained, hastening away.

Marion Carter was conscious of the sickening feeling that always crept over her now when letters came, for their sympathy pierced her afresh. But this was not a note of condolence. As she read the page of explanation, there was a sudden flash in her eyes, and, angrily twisting the sheet, she threw it into the grate. A flame leaped from the smouldering coke, and cast a light upon an unnoticed little envelope fallen to her lap. Her first impulse was to hurl this away, too, but the stiff up-and-down letters in the address held her gaze. She seemed to see a small cramped hand performing the stupendous task of writing them.

MR. S. CLAUS, ESQ.,

She read through a mist, and a ghost of a smile hovered over the set lips.

"Poor little orphan, she didn't know!" thought the woman, with self-reproach. "She mustn't suffer on account of those thoughtless women who sent it here! What the child wants I will give her—for the sake of my darling." With trembling fingers she opened the tiny envelope, drew out the letter and read:

"Dear Mr. Santa Claus: This year I don't want a Christmas doily or even a Christmas book. I want a Christmas Mother. I leave scaletchun to you, but she must be a rocking chair mother that takes me in her lap after I have on a white nighty with my bear feet sticking out, and hugs me up close, sitting before a fire in a grate. I've read a lot of nice things differnt ones do, but I saw a pictchure of this kind in the book you gave me last Christmas. I seen some real-live Mothers, to. The other day, Sister Dora took me shopping, and they was on the street with their little girls. But there was some that hadn't any little girls. I knew they was Mothers though, 'cause of the nice way their eyes looked when they turned and smiled at me. I wanted a Mother for ever so long 'cause I'm a hole-orphan not a half-orphan what has a Papa to take her walking Sundays, but I never asked you for one before 'cause I didn't know there was ready-made Mothers without any little girls till I seen them down town. I'm a very good little girl most always. "DOROTHY GREEN."

The agony that was crushing the heart of the reader broke in tears, and the woman sobbed with the little letter pressed to her bosom. An hour passed. She struggled to her feet, and slowly walked to the door. Then she paused, looking about the nursery as if dazed. There was a lingering sadness upon the pale face, but light of sweet resolve brightened the dull eyes.

Little Dorothy had found her Christmas Mother.

CARRIES BULLET IN HIS HEART

Young German Astonishes Doctors at a London Hospital—Missile Gives Him Little Trouble.

Max Meyer, a young man from Leipsic, walked into a London hospital recently and informed the surgeons there that he had a bullet embedded in his heart. They thought him crazy, but finally subjected him to the Roentgen rays and saw a pistol bullet firmly fixed in the heart's apex, corresponding with a wound in the chest. Meyer was accidentally shot by a friend two years ago, and since then has visited and astounded several famous surgeons. Dr. Lyster, who located the bullet, says:

"It is unique in the history of medical science. The man is in good health, despite the fact that he actually has a bullet in his heart. Furthermore, I do not think he will suffer any ill effects from it."

The man is well made, of medium height, in the pink of condition and, like the doctors, fails to understand why his injury does not prove fatal. "It gives me neither trouble nor inconvenience," he said. "In fact, unless I am talking about it, I forget I ever had the accident. I always have a good appetite, sleep well and take plenty of exercise. Only under violent exertion does it affect me, and then in a very slight degree."

GIRL IS NOTABLE LAWYER.

Graduated from Michigan University Two Years Ago—Now Assistant Attorney General of Philippines.

Floy V. Gilmore, 23 years old, is the first woman in the world to be admitted to the bar in the orient.

Miss Gilmore, who graduated from the Michigan law department two years ago, has had the most brilliant career of any Michigan coed. She outstripped even the ambitions of men. Starting as a stenographer in the office of the attorney general of the Philippines, she was promoted to the position of assistant attorney general. She is the pardoning power of the islands.

Miss Gilmore was recently in Ann Arbor on a vacation and was admitted to the local county bar. This assures her of admission to the bar in the Philippines, since on her return she need take only the code examinations, which are so easy that no prejudice can bar her success.

WILL TUNNEL UNDER SIERRAS.

Harriman Proposes New Engineering Task to Reduce Operating Expenses of Road.

"We have made all necessary surveys and have decided to build a tunnel through the Sierras. That is our next big job," said E. H. Harriman recently. "I don't know just when we will begin actual work," he continued, "but soon, for all surveys are made. By this means we shall eliminate 37 miles of snow sheds, leaving only four miles. We shall not materially shorten the distance, but we shall vastly reduce the grade. We shall save lifting our trains 1,000 feet or more, and thus cut millions of dollars from our expense bills. There will be one tunnel five and one-quarter miles long and several others not so long."

English as She Is Spoke.

In Wales there are 500,000 people who can't speak English. But that's nothing, says the Chicago Record-Herald. In London alone there are 5,000,000 people who can't speak English "as she should be spoke."

Carrying It Too Far.

J. C. Hummel, of Hamburg, Pa., has whooping cough, at the age of 87. This, remarks the Chicago Record-Herald, is carrying the second childhood business to extremes.

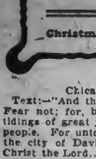
The Joy of Christmas



As Heralded by the Angels and Known to the World.

Christmas Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1901, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Dec. 30, 1900.

Text:—"And the angel said unto them, Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.....And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."—Luke 2:10, 11, 13 and 14.

FIRST Christmas Message and Song. —What a picture our text paints for us! Simple shepherds keeping watch o'er their flocks by night. The gentle sheep browsing here and there on the Judean hillside. The stillness and quiet of the soft night only broken by the musical murmur of conversation as the men talk together of God and the hope of Israel, for God reveals Himself to man when his heart is turned towards Him and when his thought searches out the deep things of Scripture. It is quite in harmony with Scripture and the Divine methods to suppose that these simple but devout Jews were talking of the promises of God made to Israel of a Saviour and Deliverer. Faith was reaching up toward God in anticipation and certainty of fulfillment, when "lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them." Heaven and earth seemed to mingle and the outstreaming glory of the Lord enwrapped angel and shepherds as in a mantle of light. "And they were sore afraid." In the presence of the supernatural, man always trembles, but where the reverential spirit rules the heart God speaks reassuredly—"and the angel said unto them, Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." And scarcely have the vibrant tones of the angel finished the thrilling message when from out the vast blue of the starry heavens there floats into the circle of light a "multitude of the heavenly host," whose voices the chorister of Heaven had been training through the ages before to sing their wonderful song of praise to God. And, says Edersheim, "what the angels sang was but the reflex of what had been announced. It told in the language of praise the character, the meaning, the result of what had taken place. Heaven took up the strain of 'glory;' Earth echoed it as 'peace;' it fell on the ears and hearts of men as 'good pleasure:'

"Glory to God in the highest—
And upon earth peace—
Among men good pleasure!"

WHAT a message that was! What a song that was! Earth had been waiting expectantly for centuries for that message and that song. Its sins needed a cure. The judgment of death needed a Saviour, Who would bear that judgment and provide a way of escape for man. And so the angel sent by the loving Lord came to earth with the message of a Saviour born, and the angelic host caught up the glad story and echoed it in song. And since that first Christmas morning God's ministers have been echoing that message until it has circled the globe and found lodgment in almost every nation and people under the sun. And earthly choirs have been singing the strains of the redemption song until hearts everywhere have caught the strains of the heavenly music, and the name of Jesus is heard in every tongue. It was but a few Judean shepherds which heard the first Christmas message, and felt the thrill of the first Christmas joy. All the rest of the world lay in darkness and ignorance and sin. There was no response to the joy bells of Heaven and the angel voices except in the hearts of the very, very few. But to-day the message and the song of Christmas have well-nigh filled the earth. In Jesus' day He was forced to declare that "the Kingdom of Heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by storm," and how much more is it true to-day that the things of God are secularized and appropriated by the world. The mustard seed has become the great spreading tree in the branches of which the fowls of the air have come and lodged. But Christmas above all other events connected with the Christ has been taken possession of by the world. The joy of Christmas has filled the earth almost "as the waters cover the sea."

BUT that joy is of a material rather than a spiritual character. The joy and gladness of the world's Christmas celebration are an expression of the natural man, and not that of the spiritual. It is something which appeals to the physical senses. The day is filled with feasting and merrymaking, with giving and receiving gifts, and with all manner of excesses and indulgences. The world's thought of and plan for Christmas is wholly of the earth earthy. The celebration of the birthday of the One Who came into the world to redeem from sin and set up a spiritual kingdom is characterized by everything which appeals to the physical and material nature of man. Ruskin exclaims: "Standing as if were astonished in the midst of this gayety of yours, will you tell—what it is all about?" And well may we ask: What is the meaning of this joy as the world gives expression to it? It is truly significant that Christmas is so universally observed. The coming of Christ into the world was for the purpose of accomplishing a great spiritual conquest over the hearts of men, but through the influence of that spiritual conquest has been wrought great transformation in material things. The influence of the Christ is felt upon every hand. Civil and religious liberty, the safe-guarding of life and property, the exaltation and protection of the home, and the elevation of womanhood and the deepening sense of responsibility towards childhood have come as direct effects of the development of Christianity in the world. Practically all that the world possesses of material progress and prosperity is the result of Christ's advent into the world. I do not wonder that the world rejoices at Christmas time, even though it does not realize the true message of Christmas and know its true and deepest joy. It has received untold material blessings from the Christ, even though it has refused to receive the spiritual, and it is truly significant, we say, that Christmas is so universally observed. The world unconsciously pays tribute to the One Who has given it such great material blessing, and Who waits to become its Saviour and King.

AND if the world has missed the true joy of Christmas as proclaimed by the angels, what is that joy? How may the world come to know that joy? What will be the expression of that joy? And first of all, what is that joy? The angel said: "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy." And all Heaven was filled with the song of that joy on that first Christmas morning. Never before was such a song heard. Never before did Heaven pour forth her bright hosts upon earth as it did upon the night when Jesus was born. And what was that joy which filled all the heavens and was to become known unto men and in time fill all the earth? It was not that superficial joy which is dependent upon the material senses for realization. It was not that joy which echoes and reechoes around the world at Christmas time. What was that joy, then? And to tell what that joy was, we must search out the source of that joy. Joy does not exist solely of itself. It is the manifestation of something which lies behind it and which gave it birth. To appreciate the quality and degree of your joy one must know the causes from which that joy arose. To understand the true joy of Christmas one must trace back to its source that joy and know the thing upon which it depends. "A Saviour born" was the burden of the angel's message. Here was the reason for the joy of Heaven. Here was why the earth should rejoice. The joy of Heaven was great because the Christ which it gave to earth was its best gift to man. The joy of the earth was to be great in proportion as it received and appropriated the gift. Christ was and is the source and inspiration of true Christmas joy. First, because of the supreme need of man which brought Him to earth, and second, because of His power to supply and satisfy that need—the disease and the remedy; man lost in sin, Jesus mighty to save. A disease without a remedy is pitiable and distressing and ends in death. A remedy unbestowed is powerless for good; it abideth alone. But a disease, be it ever so desperate, to which is applied a remedy which is able to cure, issues in health and brings unspeakable joy. Men of science search for a lifetime for the remedy for some distressing and fatal disease and count it time well spent when they have succeeded, and joyfully give their discovery to suffering humanity. Here is joy profound and deep, but who can measure the joy which Heaven felt when it bestowed its remedy for sin. There was rejoicing among the angels, and man was called to join in that song of joy and praise.

CHRISTMAS, then, reminds us of a world lost in sin, and of a Saviour come to save, and the joy of Christmas is known when the Saviour's power is tested and the sinner's need supplied. Think of the world to which Jesus came—a world lost in the depths of sin. No home ready to receive Him; forced to lie in a manger. Few hearts ready to welcome Him; shut out with His handful of followers from the nation whose King He had come to be. Alone in the wilderness to fight His battle with the devil; alone at His trial when He is condemned; alone on the cross as He cries in agony of spirit as He bears the sin of the world: "My God! My God! Why hast Thou forsaken Me?" This is the world to which He came. This is what He received from the world. And yet angels could sing with a joy that filled the heavens, because His coming and His sacrifice meant the salvation of the world. Only a few ready to share in the joy of that first Christmas, because only a few were ready and willing to receive Him. The world did not hear the music of that first Christmas morning. To-day it does hear the music of Christmas. To-day the world joins in gay spirit in celebrating the day, but the world does not know the joy of Christmas. It cannot know until it feels its utter need, and accepts the Christ as the One Who can cleanse from all sin. It may share in the Christmas song and good cheer, but of the true joy of the day it is as unconscious as was the world when Jesus came as a babe to Bethlehem. "What is this Christmas to you?" asks the devout Ruskin. "What Light is there, for your eyes, also, passing yet over the place where the Child lay? I will tell you, briefly, what Light there should be—what lessons and promise are in this story, at the least. There may be infinitely more than I know, but there is certainly this: The Child is born to bring you the promise of new life. Heaven grant to you the vision of that sacred Light, and ordain that more and more in each coming Christmas it may be said of you: 'When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.'"

AND if the world knows not the true joy of Christmas, how may it come into that realization and experience? Is the true joy of Christmas always to be the possession of the comparatively few, while the great majority are unconscious of its meaning and indifferent to its blessing? It is not God's purpose that it should be thus. God's gift of a Saviour was to all the world, not to a few in the world. The joy of the angels would not have been complete if they had not been sent with the message of "good tidings to all people." But earth's sin was not so great, nor earth's sinners so many, that sin could not be cleansed by Jesus' blood and every sinner saved. Jesus began by curing the worst cases of disease, by cleansing the foulest sinners, by raising those who were dead and rotting in the grave. See His followers: Despised Galilean fishermen, publicans, harlots; Mary, out of whom seven devils were cast; the man of Gadara, who had been possessed of a legion of devils, the scarlet woman of Samaria, the thief on the cross. Think of those whom Jesus gathered during His earthly ministry as His followers, and see if it does not include all types and grades and classes. There were the proud and cultured Nicodemus and the rich Zaccheus. The rich and the poor, the cultured and the ignorant, found in Jesus deliverance from sin. And a few years later the chiefest of sinners, Saul, was brought to the feet of Jesus as he neared Damascus' gate. It is God's will that all should know the true joy of Christ and Christmas. And it may be known by that act of faith and surrender which forsakes self as a lost sinner, and accepts Christ as the only Saviour. Then the first Christmas joy is the present Christmas joy, for, as Phillips Brooks so beautifully says:

"Shall we not listen while they sing
This latest Christmas morn,
And music hear in everything,
And faithful lives in tribute bring
To the great song which greets the King
Who comes when Christ is born?"

WITH the true joy of Christmas in the heart, what should be the expression of it in the life? It must find expression. As well try to dam up the Niagara or turn the sun's light into the darkness of night as to try to stifle the joy of the heart which is rejoicing in a Saviour born. Heaven could not contain the Son of God because of His great love and the love of His Father for the lost human race. And the heart cannot shut up the joy of Christmas which vibrates and thrills with the message of a Saviour. It must find expression. And how? Listen again to the song of the angels:

"Glory to God in the highest,
And upon earth peace—
Among men good pleasure!"

A triple expression of that Joy: Praise to God, the giver of the Saviour! Peace through the Saviour upon the earth! Good pleasure among men by the operation of that supreme spirit of love and service which comes from fellowship with the Christ. If the world has taken Christmas day by violence, and filled its sacred hours with thoughtless revelry, if it has crushed in the mire of its sin and pleasure its blessed memories, let the Christian be not dismayed or disheartened, but let him drink into his soul all the sacred, tender joy of the Christmas time, of a Saviour born, of a Saviour received, and give expression to that joy in a way so full and free that it must needs exert its influence upon all about. How shall we give? Give as God gives to thee. From Him come,

"Christmas gifts for thee,
Full and free!
Precious things from the Heavenly store,
Filling thy casket more and more;
Golden love in Divine chain,
That never can be unwined again;
Silvery carols of joy that swell
Sweetest of all in the heart's lone cell;
Pearls of peace that were sought for thee
In the terrible depths of a fiery sea;
Diamond promises sparkling bright,
Flashing in tarthest reaching light.

"Christmas gifts for thee,
Grand and free!
Christmas gifts from the King of love,
Brought from His royal home above;
Brought to thee in the far off land,
Brought to thee by His own dear hand.
Promises held by Christ for thee,
Peace as a river flowing free,
Joy that in His own joy must live,
And love that infinite Love can give.
Surely thy heart of hearts upthis
Carol of praise for such Christmas gifts!"

Oh, how God gives, gives, gives! Shall we only sing carols of praise to Him as expression of our joy? When the true joy of Christmas is so little known and when God intended that it should be universal, can we do else than express our joy in a way that shall awaken others to know that same joy which we feel? The message of the angel is our message to the world: "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." And the song of the Heavenly host must be our song of "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

PE-RU-NA PROTECTS THE LITTLE ONES

Against Winter Catarrh In Its Many Phases.

Neglected Colds in Children Often Bring Disastrous Results.

Peruna should be kept in the house all the time.

Peruna should be kept in every house where there are children.

Don't wait until the child is sick then send to a drug store. Have Peruna on hand—accept no substitute.

Pe-ru-na Protects the Entire Household Against Catarrhal Diseases.

As soon as the value of Peruna is fully appreciated by every household, both as a preventive and cure of catarrhal affections, tens of thousands of lives will be saved, and hundreds of thousands of chronic, lingering cases of disease prevented. Peruna is a household safeguard.

ALICE SCHAFER.

ANNA R. BROWN

Mrs. J. M. Brown, Dunnegan Springs, Mo., writes:

"My little daughter three years old was troubled with a very bad cough which remained after an attack of catarrhal fever. She has taken one bottle of Peruna through which she has obtained a complete cure. She is now as well and happy as a little girl can be. When our friends say how well she looks I tell them Peruna did it." In a later letter she says: "Our little daughter continues to have good health."

Pe-ru-na Kept in the House for Five Years.

Mr. Albert Lietzman, 1596 Milwaukee Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I am only too glad to inform you that I am feeling splendid and have never felt better in my life. Through the advice of a friend I tried Peruna, and am glad to say it cured me to perfection. I began to tell a friend about Peruna the other day, and I had to shorter commenced than he told me his folks have kept Peruna in the house for the last five years. I am sure I wouldn't be without it. Mother also uses it to keep herself in good health."

Mrs. Schafer, 436 Bope Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"In the early part of last year I wrote to you for advice for my daughter Alice, four years of age. She has been a puny, sickly, ailing child since her birth. She had convulsions and catarrhal fevers. I was always doctoring until we commenced to use Peruna. She grew strong and well. Peruna is a wonderful tonic; the best medicine I have ever used.

"I was in a very wretched condition when I commenced to take Peruna. I had catarrh all through my whole body, but thank God, your medicine set me all right. I would not have any other medicine.

"Peruna cured my baby boy of a very bad spell of cold and fever. He is a big healthy boy fifteen months old. I have given him Peruna off and on since he was born. I think that is why he is so well. I cannot praise Peruna enough. We have not had a doctor since we began to use Peruna—all praise to it.—Mrs. Schafer.

Be Sure to Have Pe-ru-na on Hand During the Inclement Months of Fall and Winter.

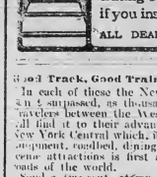
Croup, capillary bronchitis and articular rheumatism are the special banes of childhood. These all alike result from catching cold.

One child catches cold and scares its mother into hysterics by having croup in the dead of night.

Another child catches cold, develops a stubborn cough that will not yield to ordinary remedies. The parents are filled with forebodings.

Still another child catches cold and develops that most fatal malady of childhood, capillary bronchitis. The doctor is called, pronounces the case pneumonia and, if the child is lucky enough to live, it has developed weak lungs from which it may never recover.

And yet another child catches cold and articular rheumatism is the result. Ankles, knees, wrists and elbows become suddenly swollen and painful. A long disastrous illness follows. The child may live and become incurable cripple, a miserable invalid of valvular disease of the heart. All these mishaps are the direct result of neglected cold. Peruna is the safeguard of the family. If a child catches cold Peruna should be used immediately.



A few doses of Peruna and a child's cold is gone. The apprehension of the parents flee away. The household is free from fear once more.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

How to Prevent Croup.

It will be good news to the mothers of small children to learn that croup can be prevented. The first sign of croup is hoarseness. A day or two before the attack the child becomes hoarse. This is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough. In this way all danger and anxiety may be avoided. This remedy is used by many thousands of mothers and has never been known to fail. A Timely Suggestion.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful housewife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is certain to be needed before the winter is over, and results are much more prompt and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system. In almost every instance a severe cold may be warded off by taking this remedy freely as soon as the first indication of the cold appears. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains no harmful substance. It is pleasant to take—both adults and children like it. Buy it and you will get the best. It always cures. How to Prevent Croup.

It will be good news to the mothers of small children to learn that croup can be prevented. The first sign of croup is hoarseness. A day or two before the attack the child becomes hoarse. This is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the rough cough appears, and it will dispel all symptoms of croup. In this way all danger and anxiety may be avoided. This remedy is used by many thousands of mothers and has never been known to fail. It is, in fact, the only remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant and safe to take. For Sale by All Druggists.

In answer to the question Rabbit Hash asked, "Is life worth living." We answer that it is worth living, if we but live it rightly, and make the most of the pleasant things that spring up along its pathway, by banishing the unpleasant things from our minds. Life is what we make it. If it is not worth living we make it so. To sunny dispositioned people life is worth living. They are always looking for the silver lining of every cloud and are always happy, or at least never allow themselves to fret and worry. If we would but look on the bright side of things, much fretting and worry would be avoided, and we would be happier, brighter and better; then life would be worth living.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

To Prove What the Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root, Will Do for YOU, Every Reader of Our Paper May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Absolutely Free by Mail.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected, and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

I was a constant sufferer for a number of years with weakness of the kidneys and back and frequent desire to urinate, but after using Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, I am entirely cured and cheerfully recommend this wonderful remedy to any who may suffer from these common complaints.
Most truly yours,
B. H. CHALKER, Chief of Police, Ozark, Ala.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for many kinds of diseases, and if permitted to continue much suffering with fatal results are sureto follow. Kidney trouble irritates the nerves, makes you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable. Makes you pass water often during the day and obliges you to get up many times during the night. Unhealthy kidneys cause rheumatism, gravel, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints and muscles; makes your head ache and back ache, causes indigestion, stomach and liver trouble, you get a sallow, yellow complexion, makes you feel as though you had heart trouble; you may have plenty of ambition, but no strength; get weak and waste away.

The cure for these troubles is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the world-famous kidney remedy. In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to Nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that has ever been discovered.

If there is any doubt in your mind as to your condition, take from your urine on rising about four ounces, place it in a glass or bottle and let it stand twenty-four hours. If on examination it is milky or cloudy, if there is a brick-dust settling, or if small particles float about in it, your kidneys are in need of immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy for kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

(Swamp-Root is pleasant to take.)

You can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

EDITORIAL NOTE—You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful remedy, Swamp-Root, sent absolutely free by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root, and containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives, to its wonderful curative properties. In writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in this paper.

An English Earl's Opinion.

The English, next to the Americans, are the greatest travelers in the world, and while they as a rule insist upon having the best there is to be obtained, they appreciate good service, and beautiful scenery. The Earl of Shaftesbury, having, with his wife, spent some little time in the United States during the summer, speaks most enthusiastically in regard to what they have seen. A few days ago he said to a gentleman in Buffalo:

"Our stay in New York was a delightful one, and the picturesque grandeur along the Hudson and its surroundings was a source of much joy to us all.

"It has seldom been my good fortune to pass the time in such excellent sport as that furnished in your enchanting Adirondack Mountains."—Albany Times-Union.

Rare Distinction of the Town Was Not in Line with the Expectations of the People.

"What town is this?" asked the eminent statesman, who, relates the Chicago Tribune, was making a political tour of the provinces.

"Tonia," they told him.

The eminent statesman stepped out to the rear platform of the gorgeous private car in which he was traveling.

"My countrymen," he said, impressively, to the cheering throng at the station, "your beautiful and thriving young city has a rare distinction—independently of its commerce and manufactures, independently of its charming location, independently, I may add, of the stalwart men and fair women who inhabit it, so many of whom I see before me—not forgetting these bright and winsome young children over here because truly eloquent. His eyes flashed, his voice rang out in clarion tones, and he shook his clenched fist at the zenith.

"—has the rare distinction of bearing a name that has only five letters, and yet has four syllables!"

The applause, as the train moved away, was simply deafening.

EASY SAILING SO FAR.

IS THIS PROSPERITY?

Facts Give the Lie to the Interested Optimistic Statements of Republicans on Labor.

The Hon. J. G. Cannon said, the day the republicans nominated him for speaker of the house, "The people never were so well and perfectly employed as now." That great republican leader, Congressman Hepburn, of Iowa, who, when he is speaking will not brook interruption by any new member, said, on December 1, "To-day every man in the United States who wants to work finds employment in the great labor fields of the United States, and at compensating wages."

How do the facts bear out these strong optimistic assertions? On October 22 the Boston Transcript, a leading republican paper, said:

"Organized labor is facing the greatest wage crisis since the panic of 1893. It has been estimated that before the close of the year the big employing concerns of the country will have discharged nearly 1,000,000 men."

On November 11 the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, the greatest journal of this class in this country, said:

"It would be folly to shut our eyes to the fact that industrial and in turn commercial depression are following right along in the wake of the financial collapse. Mills are shutting down; mining is being restricted."

The National Labor Tribune, of Pittsburg, said, November 21:

"There are still more idle mills throughout the country than seemed possible during the flush times of a year or more ago. What is still more unpleasant to contemplate, a number of the shutdowns appear to be for good, or at least for an indefinite time."

The International Mercantile Agency, of which ex-Director of the Census Merriam is the head, said, about December 5:

"The week is characterized by further slackening industry. Wages of 200,000 industrial employes have been reduced ten per cent. or more, and preparations are making to effect a similar reduction with respect to 300,000 others in various lines on or about January 1."

As indicating the slackening in industry, we may note the falling off in the production of pig iron. The Iron Age of December 10 says that the production fell from an average of 1,600,000 tons a month for July, August and September, to 1,074,000 tons for November, and that "Such a drop within the short space of two months is altogether unprecedented in the American iron industry." Yet it says that not only did the stock of unsold iron greatly increase during November, but that for the first week in December there was a still further falling off in production.

If, as has heretofore been supposed, the iron and steel industry is the barometer of business, then a great industrial storm will soon be upon us.

Of course those who choose to do so can accept the interested optimistic vaporings of their republican statesmen and discard the disinterested warnings of our great trade and labor journals and of our financial and commercial authorities. This is a free country and a man need not put a roof on his house if he does not think there will be any more rain. Time will tell who were right.

BYRON W. HOLT

The republican programme may be completely cut and dried, but it doesn't look that way. Roosevelt may see himself again leading the party of perquisites first and progress when it can't hold back. It still seems that if his control is to continue he must mount that broncho and do some of his roughest rough riding. He must give the disgruntled faction of his party a record-breaking taste of the strenuous life. Otherwise to another republican may yet fall the honor of being defeated by the democratic nominee. The signs of general unrest, coupled with open revolt against Roosevelt, lead some not hasty politicians to believe that the action of the next republican convention is by no means certain.—St. Louis Republic.

——Hanna's followers are ready to "stand Pat" if he can stand Roosevelt.—N. Y. World.

——Great feature! Biggest attraction, most tremendous hit of years billed for the republican vaudeville stage! New song, entitled, "Oh, How I Love Roosevelt," sung by Marcus A. Hanna. Don't miss it.—St. Louis Republic.

——It is claimed democrats will make political capital out of the postal scandals, which, perhaps, accounts for the way the administration is letting them alone. Even Roosevelt seems to have acquired a little discretion.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

"GRAFTERS" IN MEETING

Republican Spoilsmen Get Together to Patch Up Their Broken Fences.

Perry Heath bobbed up serenely at the meeting of the republican national committee, with the hearty approval of Senator Hanna and the good wishes of all the grafters in the G. O. P. The warm welcome that Heath received at the hands of the committee and the congressional friends of the grafters, shows that, although there has been a partial investigation of the post office frauds, the idea, that loot is a perquisite for republican office holders, is still dominant in the minds of the republican leaders. President Roosevelt, who at first was opposed to Heath holding the high official place of secretary of the committee, by acceding to Hanna's demand for his retention, will make the average voter conclude that the spoilsmen have complete control of the republican national organization. Nor was this continuance in the office of secretary the only honor thrust upon Heath. He represented Minnesota by proxy in the deliberations of the committee. President Roosevelt, it is said, claims that the question of dealing with Heath belongs to the national committee and not to him, but as president and head of the party, he could have requested that Heath be set aside for somcone not smirched with the post office scandals. It will not be a drawing card with the honest republican voters when they understand their candidate for president did not stoutly object to the elevation of Heath as one of the pliers of the party temple. Mr. Bristow must feel that his work of exposing republican rascals has received a severe setback and the cause of good government a jolt that will undo the laborious work of his investigation if those like Heath, who only escaped indictment by the saving grace of the statute of limitations are put forward as the highest products of republicanism.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——Your Uncle Mark Hanna is the most conspicuous illustration of the truth of the statement that every knock is a boost. He has been knocked so long and hard that he is now kept busy declining a presidential boom.—Kansas City Journal (Rep.).

——The trouble with the post office department is that it is used to reward politicians, who act as if they think they have already earned the salaries in party service. They wouldn't bother their heads with practical and economical business plans and probably couldn't if they would. This sort of thing leads to widespread indifference and indifference leads to inefficiency and "graft." The post office department needs business administration, first of all.—Sioux City Tribune.

——Republican contemporaries are having considerable to say of "the democracy's poverty" when it comes to selecting a candidate for the presidency. If the republican party had some of that sort of poverty it would be more comfortable just now. The democrats, at least, have their whole party to choose from, while the republicans know that they must confine themselves to one man or insure their defeat, while they know at the same time that by nominating that man they are inviting defeat.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——The senate has also failed to confirm the recess appointment of Leonard Wood as a major general. His friends make the extraordinary suggestion that even if one session does end and the other begin precisely at noon there is theoretically an instant between them, when Mr. Roosevelt might again designate Wood as a major general by a "recess appointment." So silly a quibble may exhibit in a favorable light the ingenuity of its authors, but the president can hardly be expected to take it seriously. He would be more wise to abandon altogether his attempt to confer upon his personal friend this unearned promotion.—N. Y. World (Ind.).

——As a candidate for president on the ship subsidy issue, Mr. Hanna could probably poll Mr. Grisdom's vote.—Detroit Free Press.

——Mr. Roosevelt says the way to do is to "vigorously scrutinize the character of those appointed." Yet he is trying to cram the malodorous Wood down the throat of the army.—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

——If President Roosevelt shall goon in this impulsive, restless, over-strenuous, disturbing fashion of his, will there not be a grave duty and a great opportunity presented to the democratic party?—N. Y. World.

New Year's Resolves

Better to Make and Break Them Than Not to Make Them at All

SOME facetious individual has defined New Year's day as "a time when men make good resolutions in the confidence of breaking them as soon as possible." But he has much to learn to his own profit who sneers at good resolutions because some men break them. To resolve to do right does not mean necessarily that one will keep the promise, but such purpose, whether outwardly expressed or inwardly understood, is proof that the individual is conscious of abiding sin of some sort.

It is the self-righteous individual who is in danger. Good resolutions are born of repentance; and repentance when genuine is a cardinal virtue. The self-righteous fellow does not resolve to do better because his vanity tells him there is nothing wrong in his makeup. He may go along committing blunders every day and doing no end of mischief. Such a fellow is beyond redemption. Like Ephraim of old, he is joined to his idols and should be left alone.

Doubtless there are many thoughtless and some insincere good resolves made on New Year's day. Nevertheless it is a good thing that many men do begin the new year with resolves to strive after what is higher and better. It is a marked and glorified improvement upon the custom once so general but now, thank God, obsolete, of men going from house to house paying calls and guzzling wine or stronger drink until before the round was completed they were hopelessly drunken.

It is a great deal better for a man to resolve a hundred times and fail in each resolve than to go along contented with his lot of sin and shame. There is hope for a man just as long as there abides in him desire for what is better. It is well to enter into argument with one's self only after due deliberation, but a broken pledge to do right is far better than no pledge at all.

There is nothing strange in association of good resolves with the dawn of a new year. On the contrary, the occasion is one that suggests just such a general practice. The old year has ended. Its memories suggest sins committed while conscience slept," practices that degraded the moral man, follies that brought shame and vices that weakened body and brain. But memory is not all. Body and mind tell the sensible man that such practices end in physical wreck and moral decay.

The year is new and clean. The sun, just risen, looks upon it for the first time. Men of business close up their pages for the year ended and begin new and fresh ones for the new year that has dawned. They figure out accurately their losses and their gains in the old year, subtracting one from the other.

As the merchant begins his year anew, why may not the moral nature of a man be renewed if the memories of the past year and the physical shortcomings of the present suggest the need of a striving after what is higher and better?

That the practice has been abused is no argument against its use. That some men have made good resolutions only to break them is not evidence that reform is impossible. Striving after what is right is Godlike. One may raise his standard so high as not to be able to attain it, but there is virtue in every attempt to make better one's life. Indeed one may find at the closing of a long life that he has tried but to fail, and yet his very efforts to do right will be counted to him for righteousness.

The objection is, if it can be called an objection, that men are too much influenced by special occasions for special efforts. There is no more virtue in New Year's Day than there is in All Fool's Day. It would seem foolishness to wait for any such time or season for a starting period in right living. The present is the time for action, and one day is as good as another in the sight of God, as well as of men.

But the man who has put off the day of resolves to be good until the dawn of the new year will strengthen himself and work righteousness by starting out clean with the year. He will only hurt himself by devoting too much time to resolving. What he most needs is to avoid the pitfalls and snares which formerly overcame him. He has need to change resolves into action. It is his duty to retrospect in order to know himself. Each conquest of self is added strength for future victories.

Happy indeed is that New Year's for the man who, having resolved in its dawn to do right, finds at its gloaming that he has been true to his promises.

WILLIAM ROSSER COBBE.

THERE IS HOPE FOR HIM.

Deacon Goodie—Cheer up; my man; you'll be out on the first of the year.

Jail Bird—Yes, but what can I do after being a thief and holdup man?

Deacon Goodie—Oh, you can go into the coal business, or start a plumbing shop.

"One kiss," he begged, "before I go."

"Well, take it; but you cannot have another one this year."

And then the clock struck the New Year.

A Good Beginning for the Year

"I BELIEVE in beginning the New Year well," observed young Mr. Talkington, as he carved the turkey; "I am not superstitious, but—"

"Yes," said his wife, demurely, "I remember how well we began it last year."

"You were to start on a trip that day, weren't you?" queried a guest.

"Yes, and the train, a new one just put on, left at 9:25. Ned said we should arise at five, thus beginning the New Year well and catching the train comfortably. He ordered a cab for 6:30, so it would reach the house at night;

HAD TIME TO BURN.

he did this over night and also wound up the cook's alarm clock. Ned duly waked me the next morning."

"With difficulty, dear."

"You waked me, anyhow, and your voice sounded like the dentist's saying, 'Step this way, please.' We hadn't heard the cook go down, and going to investigate I found her asleep. She said the alarm had gone off at 2:15, and she'd been up every half hour since to see if it was five. The volcano was awake then!"

"Oh!"

"When I returned, Ned pointed to the clock on the mantel and said it was 5:17, and we were late."

"Well?"

"Nothing—only that clock was a wedding present and so handsome that nobody ever expected it to keep time. Investigation proved it was just four, and we went back to bed for an hour. I was dreaming that the cook's New Year's resolve was that she would never leave me, when an awful noise waked me. The cook called that it was eight, and as breakfast had been ready three hours she thought she'd better call us!"

"But did you reach the station in time?"

"Yes. In my haste I did my hair with three pins and Ned put on his dress coat and odd shoes—we are both forgetful, you know. We scalded our throats with hot coffee and choked ourselves with overdone steak. The cabman, who had arrived at 6:30 sharp, demanded full pay for the time he had waited, else he'd deduct from the number of Ned's useful eyes!"

"Dreadful!" chorused the guests.

"While he did this the cook gave warning and told me that the catch on the back cellar window was loose.

"We were in time. To Ned's feverish inquiries the ticket agent calmly responded, 'Oh, yes, we had plenty of time—24 hours and 29 minutes!'"

"Why, how on earth could that happen?"

"The train, as I said, was a new one, put on for the first time on New Year's day, and—and the calendar to which the agent pointed told us that to-day was December thirty-first!"

ELISA ARMSTRONG.

Their New Year's Dinner

"SO you went to Isabel's New Year's dinner?" said the brunette. "Lucky you! Tom and I dine with his mother on the first day of each year, listening to a discourse on economy which lasts from oysters to coffee."

"Knowing that all your bills will be in the next morning's mail, too," cried the blonde. "Yes, we accepted Isabel's invitation, and—"

"How do you like Isabel's new dress? Is it as cold as—"

"Her reception of a tardy guest? Not quite. I was ready at only ten minutes after the last moment at which we could safely start—and if that is not being punctual, I'd like to know what is! 'Eleven sharp!' Jack called to the driver, and then I looked up to see—Isabel's old house!"

"When the dinner was given to display the new one?"

"Exactly. After running a block through the snow in his thin shoes and nearly being arrested as an escaping thief, Jack got the driver to return. Once inside, he declared I hadn't told him Isabel had moved."

"Because he had kept on reading his paper while you told him about it?"

"Yes. I had even told him how the bathroom was tiled. But, dear, I had forgotten whether the new number was 250 or 2550."

"What on earth—"

"Jack threatened to go home and get dinner on the chafing dish—the cook had holiday. Then I remembered thoughtfully writing out the address while Mae and I discussed that new dressmaker, and putting it in Jack's waistcoat pocket, because I am so forgetful."

"How thoughtful."

"Jack gave the slip to the driver and promised him something awful to drive fast."

"Then your troubles were ended?"

"N—no. I had written down the ad-

JACK WAS WAITING.

dress of the new dressmaker, instead of Isabel's."

"And you were no better off than before?"

"Worse. Jack's language was awful. I said we could just drive along the avenue until we came to the house which I would recognize immediately."

"So—"

"He said we were invited to dinner, not to breakfast. Then he asked the driver if he happened to know where Mrs. De Style lived."

"Nonsense. He—"

"He knew. It was about six blocks from our house. Stupid of Jack not to have asked sooner. And he seemed to think the whole affair my fault!"

"Well, you reached Isabel's after all."

"Ye-es, in time for the salad. And—and I really should not like to repeat the things our hostess said when she had a chance to speak to me alone."

J. Pierpont Morgan's latest gift is a house to his daughter. It is said to be one of the finest residences in New York, and is located at Park avenue and Thirty-seventh street.

Moses G. Cobb, a wealthy attorney of San Francisco, died recently, leaving his entire estate to Mrs. Rose Barry, a widow who during the last three years of his life looked after him. Cobbs' widow, son and five grandchildren are cut off without a cent. A legal contest is in progress. The executor is asked to see that Cobb's body is cremated and "the ashes scattered to the waters of the Pacific ocean."

John D. Spreckles, Jr., son of the California millionaire, is selling tickets in the office of the Oceanic Steamship company offices, San Francisco. His father is president of the company and the young man has determined to master the business. He is on duty every morning at nine o'clock and works until five in the afternoon. His salary, which he has to earn, being shown no favors, is about $100 per month. Later he means to check freight on the dock in order to familiarize himself with that department.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

It isn't an easy matter to see happiness through another man's eyes.

We can all find reasons why other people shouldn't make mistakes.

Knowledge of a good many men consists of things that aren't so.

Most writers who drop into poetry manage to drop clear through.

All women were born to love and be loved, and they fight it out on that line.

Contentment comes to those only who want but little and are satisfied with less.

What a pity it is that people who worry over trifles haven't something worth while to trouble them!

A girl has it in her power to make any number of men happy for life—by declining to marry them.

SIMPLEST OF IMPLEMENTS.

Internal Improvements Effected by a Woman with a Hairpin and a Brush.

There is a story in Lippincott's Magazine of a husband, who, on his return from a visit, sat down to hear the family happenings during his absence. This incident, it may seem, has a moral. The wife was naming the reforms she had successfully introduced.

"You know," said she, "that closet that was locked for over a month? You said it couldn't be opened except by a locksmith? Well, I opened it."

"How in the world did you do it?"

"With a hairpin. And the furnace door has been sagging round on one hinge for ever so long, you know; but it's all right now."

"Well, I'm glad you had it fixed."

"Had it fixed! I fixed it myself with a hairpin. And then there was that crayon portrait of mother that stood on the floor for six weeks because you hadn't brought me any picture-hooks—"

"Well, I intended to, but—"

"O, it doesn't make any difference now. I made a hook myself out of a hairpin."

"No!"

"And there's Willie! You've been coaxing and bribing him for a year to break him of biting his nails, and I broke him in a week."

"With a hairpin?" he inquired, weakly.

"No! Don't be a goose. With a hairbrush."

OBEYED INSTRUCTIONS.

Photographer Planted His Camera Where He Was Told To and There Was Trouble.

The city editor summoned the photographer of his staff, relates Youth's Companion. "Col. Wellington's house is burning," he said, "and I want a picture of the fire. Get out there as quick as you can with your camera and take a view of what's left of the building, from the inside of the fence corner."

"But," said the photographer, "if—"

"That's the point I want it taken from—right in the corner."

"But I think there's—"

"I don't care whether there's a better point or not. You know what I want. Hurry up! You are losing time."

The photographer took his camera and departed. A few hours later he came in with the proof of a picture he had taken from the desired point of view.

"What is this?" asked the city editor.

"That is a photograph of the ruins of Col. Wellington's house from the inside corner of the fence, near the street."

"I can't see anything of the house."

"I can't, either," responded the photographer. "I tried to tell you there was a big tree standing between that corner and the house, but you wouldn't let me."

Mr. Grover's Case.

Frederika, Ia., Dec. 28.—Mr. A. S. Grover is now 74 years of age. For the last 30 years he has suffered a great deal of sickness, and, although he is a temperate man and never used spirits of any kind, his kidneys had troubled him very much. He said:—

"I was told I had Diabetes, and my symptoms corresponded exactly to those of a young man who died of Diabetes in this neighborhood. My feet and limbs were bloated quite a little.

"I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and at last determined to try them. I took in all ten boxes before I was well, and now I can truthfully say that I am all right. The bloating is gone from my feet and legs. I have gained eight pounds in weight, and can sleep well at night, and every symptom of my trouble is gone.

"It is some time now since I was cured, and I have not had the slightest return of any symptom of the old trouble."

Mrs. Fairbanks tells how neglect of warning symptoms will soon prostrate a woman. She thinks woman's safeguard is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and neglect are the cause of untold female suffering, not only with the laws of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains, and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully, according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. Since I have been well I have been more careful, I have also advised a number of my sick friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they have never had reason to be sorry. SISTERS OF CHARITY

Use Pe-ru-na for Coughs, Colds, Grip and Catarrh—A Congressman's Letter.

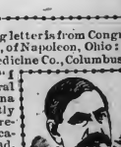
In every country of the civilized world Sisters of Charity are known. Not only do they minister to the spiritual and intellectual needs of the charges committed to their care, but they also minister to their bodily needs.

With so many children to take care of and to protect from climate and disease, these wise and prudent Sisters have found Peruna a never failing safeguard.

Dr. Hartman receives many letters from Catholic Sisters from all over the United States. A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in Detroit, Mich., reads as follows:

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sir.—"The young girl who used the Peruna was suffering from laryngitis, and loss of voice. The result of the treatment was most satisfactory. She found great relief, and after further use of the medicine we hope to be able to say she is entirely cured."



—Sisters of Charity.

The young girl was under the care of the Sisters of Charity and used Peruna for catarrh of the throat with good results as the above letter testifies.

Dr. Hartman, one of the best known physicians and surgeons in the United States, was the first man to formulate Peruna. It was through his genius and perseverance that it was introduced to the medical profession of this country.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

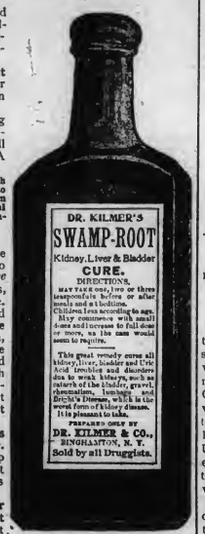
Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

To Prove What the Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root, Will Do for YOU, Every Reader of Our Paper May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Absolutely Free by Mail.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected, and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.



I was a constant sufferer for a number of years with weakness of the kidneys and back and frequent desire to urinate, but after using Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, I am entirely cured and cheerfully recommend this wonderful remedy to any who may suffer from these common complaints. Most truly yours,
B. H. CHALKER, Chief of Police, Ozark, Ala.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for many kinds of diseases, and if permitted to continue much suffering with fatal results are sureto follow. Kidney trouble irritates the nerves, makes you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable. Makes you pass water often during the day and obliges you to get up many times during the night. Unhealthy kidneys cause rheumatism, gravel, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints and muscles; makes your head ache and back ache, causes indigestion, stomach and liver trouble, you get a sallow, yellow complexion, makes you feel as though you had heart trouble; you may have plenty of ambition, but no strength; get weak and waste away.

The cure for these troubles is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the world-famous kidney remedy. In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to Nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that has ever been discovered.

If there is any doubt in your mind as to your condition, take from your urine on rising about four ounces, place it in a glass or bottle and let it stand twenty-four hours. If on examination it is milky or cloudy, if there is a brick-dust setting, or if small particles float about in it, your kidneys are in need of immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy for kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

(Swamp-Root is pleasant to take.)

You can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

EDITORIAL NOTE—You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful remedy, Swamp-Root, sent absolutely free by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root, and containing many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives, to its wonderful curative properties. In writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in this paper.

An English Earl's Opinion.

The English, next to the Americans, are the greatest travelers in the world, and while they as a rule insist upon having the best there is to be obtained, they appreciate good service, and beautiful scenery. The Earl of Shaftesbury, having, with his wife, spent some little time in the United States during the summer, speaks most enthusiastically in regard to what they have seen. A few days ago he said to a gentleman in Buffalo:

"Our stay in New York was a delightful one, and the picturesque grandeur along the Hudson and its surroundings was a source of much joy to us all.

"It has seldom been my good fortune to pass the time in such excellent sport as that furnished in your enchanting Adirondack Mountains."—Albany Times-Union.

Rare Distinction of the Town Was Not in Line with the Expectations of the People.

"What town is this?" asked the eminent statesman, who, relates the Chicago Tribune, was making a political tour of the provinces.

"Tonia," they told him.

The eminent statesman stepped out to the rear platform of the gorgeous private car in which he was traveling.

"My countrymen," he said, impressively, to the cheering throng at the station, "your beautiful and thriving young city has a rare distinction. Independently of its commerce and manufactures, independently of its charming location, independently, I may add, of the stalwart men and fair women who inhabit it, so many of whom I see before me—not forgetting these bright and winsome young children who are also here, the hope and mainstay of the republic—independently, I say, of all these, your lovely city—"

Here he became truly eloquent. His eyes flashed, his voice rang out in clarion tones, and he shook his clenched fist at the zenith.

"—has the rare distinction of bearing a name that has only five letters, and yet has four syllables!"

The applause, as the train moved away, was simply deafening.

EASY SAILING SO FAR.

IS THIS PROSPERITY?

Facts Give the Lie to the Interested Optimistic Statements of Republicans on Labor.

The Hon. J. G. Cannon said, the day the republicans nominated him for speaker of the house, "The people never were so well and perfectly employed as now." That great republican leader, Congressman Hepburn, of Iowa, who, when he is speaking will not brook interruption by any new member, said, on December 1, "To-day every man in the United States who wants to work finds employment in the great labor fields of the United States, and at compensating wages."

How do the facts bear out these strong optimistic assertions? On October 22 the Boston Transcript, a leading republican paper, said:

"Organized labor is facing the greatest wage crisis since the panic of 1893. It has been estimated that before the close of the year the big employing concerns of the country will have discharged nearly 1,000,000 men."

On November 11 the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, the greatest journal of this class in this country, said:

"It would be folly to shut our eyes to the fact that industrial and in turn commercial depression are following right along in the wake of the financial collapse. Mills are shutting down; mining is being restricted."

The National Labor Tribune, of Pittsburg, said, November 21:

"There are still more idle mills throughout the country than seemed possible during the flush times of a year or more ago. What is still more unpleasant to contemplate, a number of the shutdowns appear to be for good, or at least for an indefinite time."

The International Mercantile Agency of which ex-Director of the Census Merriam is the head, said, about December 5:

"The week is characterized by further slackening industry. Wages of 200,000 industrial employes have been reduced ten per cent. or more, and preparations are making to effect a similar reduction with respect to 300,000 others in various lines on or about January 1."

As indicating the slackening in industry, we may note the falling off in the production of pig iron. The Iron Age of December 10 says that the production fell from an average of 1,600,000 tons a month for July, August and September, to 1,074,000 tons for November, and that "Such a drop within the short space of two months is altogether unprecedented in the American iron industry." Yet it says that not only did the stock of unsold iron greatly increase during November, but that for the first week in December there was a still further falling off in production.

If, as has heretofore been supposed, the iron and steel industry is the barometer of business, then a great industrial storm will soon be upon us.

Of course those who choose to do so can accept the interested optimistic vaporings of their republican statesmen and discard the disinterested warnings of our great trade and labor journals and of our financial and commercial authorities. This is a free country and a man need not put a roof on his house if he does not think there will be any more rain. Time will tell who were right.

BYRON W. HOLT

The republican programme may be completely cut and dried, but it doesn't look that way. Roosevelt may see himself again leading the party of perquisites first and progress when it can't hold back. It still seems that if his control is to continue he must mount that bronco and do some of his roughest rough riding. He must give the disgruntled faction of his party a record-breaking taste of the strenuous life. Otherwise to another republican may yet fall the honor of being defeated by the democratic nominee. The signs of general unrest, coupled with open revolt against Roosevelt, lead some not hasty politicians to believe that the action of the next republican convention is by no means certain.—St. Louis Republic.

——Hanna's followers are ready to "stand Pat" if he can stand Roosevelt.—N. Y. World.

——Great feature! Biggest attraction, most tremendous hit of years billed for the republican vaudeville stage! New song, entitled, "Oh, How I Love Roosevelt," sung by Marcus A. Hanna. Don't miss it.—St. Louis Republic.

——It is claimed democrats will make political capital out of the postal scandals, which, perhaps, accounts for the way the administration is letting them alone. Even Roosevelt seems to have acquired a little discretion.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

"GRAFTERS" IN MEETING

Republican Spoilsmen Get Together to Patch Up Their Broken Fences.

Percy Heath bobbed up serenely at the meeting of the republican national committee, with the hearty approval of Senator Hanna and the good wishes of all the grafters in the G. O. P. The warm welcome that Heath received at the hands of the committee and the congressional friends of the grafters, shows that, although there has been a partial investigation of the post office frauds, the idea, that loot is a perquisite for republican office holders, is still dominant in the minds of the republican leaders. President Roosevelt, who at first was opposed to Heath holding the high official place of secretary of the committee, by acceding to Hanna's demand for his retention, will make the average voter conclude that the spoilsmen have complete control of the republican national organization. Nor was this continuance in the office of secretary the only honor thrust upon Heath. He represented Minnesota by proxy in the deliberations of the committee. President Roosevelt, it is said, claims that the question of dealing with Heath belongs to the national committee and not to him, but as president and head of the party, he could have requested that Heath be set aside for someone not smirched with the post office scandals. It will not be a drawing card with the honest republican voters when they understand their candidate for president did not stoutly object to the elevation of Heath as one of the pillers of the party temple. Mr. Bristow must feel that his work of exposing republican rascals has received a severe setback and the cause of good government a jolt that will undo the laborious work of his investigation if those like Heath, who only escaped indictment by the saving grace of the statute of limitations are put forward as the highest products of republicanism.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——Your Uncle Mark Hanna is the most conspicuous illustration of the truth of the statement that every knock is a boost. He has been knocked so long and hard that he is now kept busy declining a presidential boom.—Kansas City Journal (Rep.).

——The trouble with the post office department is that it is used to reward politicians, who act as if they think they have already earned the salaries in party service. They wouldn't bother their heads with practical and economical business plans and probably couldn't if they would. This sort of thing leads to widespread indifference and indifference leads to inefficiency and "graft." The post office department needs business administration, first of all.—Sioux City Tribune.

——Republican contemporaries are having considerable to say of "the democracy's poverty" when it comes to selecting a candidate for the presidency. If the republican party had some of that sort of poverty it would be more comfortable just now. The democrats, at least, have their whole party to choose from, while the republicans know that they must confine themselves to one man or insure their defeat, while they know at the same time that by nominating that man they are inviting defeat.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——The senate has also failed to confirm the recess appointment of Leonard Wood as a major general. His friends make the extraordinary suggestion that even if one session does end and the other begin precisely at noon there is theoretically an instant between them, when Mr. Roosevelt might again designate Wood as a major general by a "recess appointment." So silly a quibble may exhibit in a favorable light the ingenuity of its authors, but the president can hardly be expected to take it seriously. He would be more wise to abandon altogether his attempt to confer upon his personal friend this unearned promotion.—N. Y. World (Ind.).

——As a candidate for president on the ship subsidy issue, Mr. Hanna could probably poll Mr. Griscom's vote.—Detroit Free Press.

——Mr. Roosevelt says the way to do is to "vigorously scrutinize the character of those appointed." Yet he is trying to cram the malodorous Wood down the throat of the army.—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

——If President Roosevelt shall go on in this impulsive, restless, over-strenuous, disturbing fashion of his, will there not be a grave duty and a great opportunity presented to the democratic party?—N. Y. World.

New Year's Resolves

Better to Make and Break Them Than Not to Make Them at All

SOME facetious individual has defined New Year's day as "a time when men make good resolutions in the confidence of breaking them as soon as possible." But he has much to learn to his own profit who sneers at good resolutions because some men break them. "To resolve to do right does not mean necessarily that one will keep the promise, but such purpose, whether outwardly expressed or inwardly understood, is proof that the individual is conscious of abiding sin of some sort.

It is the self-righteous individual who is in danger. Good resolutions are born of repentance; and repentance when genuine is a cardinal virtue. The self-righteous fellow does not resolve to do better because his vanity tells him there is nothing wrong in his makeup. He may go along committing blunders every day and doing no end of mischief. Such a fellow is beyond redemption. Like Ephraim of old, he is joined to his idols and should be left alone.

Doubtless there are many thoughtless and some insincere good resolves made on New Year's day. Nevertheless it is a good thing that many men do begin the new year with resolves to strive after what is higher and better. It is a marked and glorified improvement upon the custom once so general but now, thank God, obsolete, of men going from house to house paying calls and guzzling wine or stronger drink until before the round was completed they were hopelessly drunken.

It is a great deal better for a man to resolve a hundred times and fail in each resolve than to go along contented with his lot of sin and shame. There is hope for a man just so long as there abides in him desire for what is better. It is well to enter into argument with one's self only after due deliberation, but a broken pledge to do right is far better than no pledge at all.

There is nothing strange in association of good resolves with the dawn of a new year. On the contrary, the occasion is one that suggests just such a general practice. The old year has ended. Its memories suggest "sins committed while conscience slept," practices that degraded the moral man, follies that brought shame and vices that weakened body and brain. But memory is not all. Body and mind tell the sensible man that such practices end in physical wreck and moral decay.

The year is new and clean. The sun, just risen, looks upon it for the first time. Men of business close up their pages for the year ended and begin new and fresh ones for the new year that has dawned. They figure out accurately their losses and their gains in the old year, subtracting one from the other.

As the merchant begins his year anew, why may not the moral nature of a man be renewed if the memories of the past year and the physical shortcomings of the present suggest the need of a striving after what is higher and better?

That the practice has been abused is no argument against its use. That some men have made good resolutions only to break them is not evidence that reform is impossible. Striving after what is right is Godlike. One may raise his standard so high as not to be able to attain it, but there is virtue in every attempt to make better one's life. Indeed one may find at the closing of a long life that he has tried but to fail, and yet his very efforts to do right will be counted to him for righteousness.

The objection is, if it can be called an objection, that men are too much influenced by special occasions for special efforts. There is no more virtue in New Year's Day than there is in All Fool's Day. It would seem foolishness to wait for any such time or season for a starting period in right living. The present is the time for action, and one day is as good as another in the sight of God, as well as of men.

But the man who has put off the day of resolves to be good until the dawn of the new year will strengthen himself and work righteousness by starting out clean with the year. He will only hurt himself by devoting too much time to resolving. What he most needs is to avoid the pitfalls and snares which formerly overcame him. He has need to change resolves into action. It is his duty to retrospect in order to know himself. Each conquest of self is added strength for future victories.

Happy indeed is that New Year's for the man who, having resolved in its dawn to do right, finds at its gloaming that he has been true to his promises

WILLIAM ROSSER CORBE.

THERE IS HOPE FOR HIM.

Deacon Goodle—Cheer up; my man; you'll be out on the first of the year.

Jail Bird—Yes, but what can I do after being a thief and hobo?

Deacon Goodle—Oh, you can go into the coal business, or start a plumbing shop.

AT 1159 P. M.

"One kiss," he begged, "before I go."

"Well, take it; but you cannot have another one this year."

And then the clock struck the New Year.

A Good Beginning for the Year

"I BELIEVE in beginning the New Year well," observed young Mr. Talkington, as he carved the turkey; "I am not superstitious, but—"

"Yes," said his wife, demurely, "I remember how well we began it last year."

"You were to start on a trip that day, weren't you?" queried a guest.

"Yes, and the train, a new one just put on, left at 9:25. Ned said we should arise at five, thus beginning the New Year well and catching the train comfortably. He ordered a cab for 6:30, so it would reach the house at night;

MAD TIME TO BURN.

he did this over night and also wound up the cook's alarm clock. Ned duly waked me the next morning."

"With difficulty, dear."

"You waked me, anyhow, and your voice sounded like the dentist's saying, 'Step this way, please.' We hadn't heard the cook go down, and going to investigate I found her asleep. She said the alarm had gone off at 2:15, and she'd been up every half hour since to see if it was five. The volcano was awake then!"

"Oh!"

"When I returned, Ned pointed to the clock on the mantel and said it was 5:17, and we were late."

"Well?"

"Nothing—only that clock was a wedding present and so handsome that nobody ever expected it to keep time. Investigation proved it was just four, and we went back to bed for an hour. I was dreaming that the cook's New Year's resolve was that she would never leave me, when an awful noise waked me. The cook called that it was eight, and as breakfast had been ready three hours she thought she'd better call us!"

"But did you reach the station in time?"

"Yes. In my haste I did my hair with three pins and Ned put on his dress coat and odd shoes—we are both forgetful, you know. We scalded our throats with hot coffee and choked ourselves with overdone steak. The cabman, who had arrived at 6:30 sharp, demanded full pay for the time he had waited, else he'd deduct from the number of Ned's useful eyes!"

"Dreadful!" chorused the guests.

"While he did this the cook gave warning and told me that the catch on the back cellar window was loose.

"We were in time. To Ned's feverish inquiries the ticket agent calmly responded, 'Oh, yes, we had plenty of time—24 hours and 29 minutes!'"

"Why, how on earth could that happen?"

"The train, as I said, was a new one, put on for the first time on New Year's day, and—and the calendar to which the agent pointed told us that to-day was December thirty-first!"

ELISA ARMSTRONG.

Their New Year's Dinner

"SO you went to Isabel's New Year's dinner?" said the brunette. "Lucky you! Tom and I dine with his mother on the first day of each year, listening to a discourse on economy which lasts from oysters to coffee.

"Knowing that all your bills will be in the next morning's mail, too," cried the blonde. "Yes, we accepted Isabel's invitation, and—"

"How do you like Isabel's new dress? Is it as cold as—"

"Her reception of a tardy guest? Not quite. I was ready at only ten minutes after the last moment at which we could safely start—and if that is not being punctual, I'd like to know what is! 'Eleven sharp!' Jack called to the driver, and then I looked up to see—Isabel's old house!"

"When the dinner was given to display the new one?"

"Exactly. After running a block through the snow in his thin shoes and nearly being arrested as an escaping thief, Jack got the driver to return. Once inside, he declared I hadn't told him Isabel had moved."

"Because he had kept on reading his paper while you told him about it?"

"Yes. I had even told him how the bathroom was tiled. But, dear, I had forgotten whether the new number was 250 or 2550."

"What on earth—"

"Jack threatened to go home and get dinner on the chafing dish—the cook had holiday. Then I remembered thoughtfully writing out the address while Mae and I discussed that new dressmaker, and putting it in Jack's waistcoat pocket, because I am so forgetful."

"How thoughtful."

"Jack gave the slip to the driver and promised him something awful to drive fast."

"Then your troubles were ended?"

"N—no. I had written down the ad-

JACK WAS WAITING.

dress of the new dressmaker, instead of Isabel's."

"And you were no better off than before?"

"Worse. Jack's language was awful. I said we could just drive along the avenue until we came to the house which I would recognize immediately."

"So—"

"He said we were invited to dinner, not to breakfast. Then he asked the driver if he happened to know where Mrs. De Style lived."

"Nonsense. He—"

"He knew. It was about six blocks from our house. Stupid of Jack not to have asked sooner. And he seemed to think the whole affair my fault!"

"Well, you reached Isabel's after all."

"Ye-es, in time for the salad. And—and I really should not like to repeat the things our hostess said when she had a chance to speak to me alone."

His salary, which he has to earn, being shown no favors, is about $100 per month. Later he means to check freight on the dock in order to familiarize himself with that department.

SIMPLEST OF IMPLEMENTS.

Internal Improvements Effected by a Woman with a Hairpin and a Brush.

There is a story in Lippincott's Magazine of a husband who, on his return from a visit, sat down to hear the family happenings during his absence. This incident, it may seem, has a moral. The wife was naming the reforms she had successfully introduced.

"You know," said she, "that closet that was locked for over a month? You said it couldn't be opened except by a locksmith? Well, I opened it."

"How in the world did you do it?"

"With a hairpin. And the furnace door has been sagging round on one hinge for ever so long, you know; but it's all right now."

"Well, I'm glad you had it fixed."

"Had it fixed! I fixed it myself with a hairpin. And then there was that crayon portrait of mother that stood on the floor for six weeks because you hadn't brought me any picture-hooks—"

"Well, I intended to, but—"

"Oh, it does-n't make any difference now. I made a hook myself out of a hairpin."

"No!"

"And there's Willie! You've been coaxing and bribing him for a year to break him of biting his nails, and I broke him in a week."

"With a hairpin?" he inquired, weakly.

"No! Don't be a goose. With a hairbrush."

Photographer Planted His Camera Where He Was Told To and There Was Trouble.

The city editor summoned the photographer of his staff, relates Youth's Companion. "Col. Welligan's house is burning," he said, "and I want a picture of the fire. Get out there as quick as you can with your camera and take a view of what's left of the building, from the inside of the fence corner."

"But," said the photographer, "if—"

"That's the point I want it taken from—right in the corner."

"But I think there's—"

"I don't care whether there's a better point or not. You know what I want. Hurry up! You are losing time."

The photographer took his camera and departed. A few hours later he came in with the proof of a picture he had taken from the desired point of view.

"What is this?" asked the city editor.

"That is a photograph of the ruins of Col. Welligan's house from the inside corner of the fence, near the street."

"I can't see anything of the house."

"I can't, either," responded the photographer. "I tried to tell you there was a big tree standing in that corner and the house, but you wouldn't let me."

Mr. Grover's Case.

Fredevika, Ia., Dec. 28.—Mr. A. S. Grover is now 74 years of age. For the last 30 years he has suffered a great deal of sickness, and, although he is a temperate man and never used spirits of any kind, his kidneys had troubled him very much. He said:—

"I was told I had Diabetes, and my symptoms corresponded exactly to those of a young man who died of Diabetes in this neighborhood. My feet and limbs were bloated quite a little.

"I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and at last determined to try them. I took in all ten boxes before I was well, and now I can truthfully say that I am all right. The bloating is gone from my feet and legs. I have gained eight pounds in weight, and can sleep well at night, and every symptom of my trouble is gone.

"It is some time now since I was cured, and I have not had the slightest return of any symptom of the old trouble."

Mrs. Fairbanks tells how neglect of warning symptoms will soon prostrate a woman. She thinks woman's safeguard is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and neglect are the cause of untold female suffering, not only with the laws of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains, and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully, according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. Since I have been well I have been more careful, I have also advised a number of my sick friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they have never had reason to be sorry. DID you know that nearly one-fourth of the entire population of the United States was attending school? That sounds pretty big, but we have the figures on the federal commissioner of education to prove it. He reports that in the secondary schools of this country there are 18,080,840 pupils. These figures do not include the college and university enrollment. It does not include the medical and law schools. In the common schools alone there are 16,000,000 children, or one-fifth of the population of the United States.

THE United States Civil Service Commission announces that the present eligible register for stenographers and typewriters for the Departmental and Philippine Services are depleted, and in order to create a new roster an examination will be held in town on January 5 next. This examination, it is announced, is open to males and females alike. The entrance salaries for stenographers and typewriters for the Departmental Service range from $840 to $1,200 per year, while for the Philippine Service they range from $1,200 to $1,400 per year. The age limit is 18 years or over for this country, and from 18 to 40 years for the Philippine Service.

The marvelous industrial development of the United States during the past decade contains no record that can compare with the growth of our great iron and steel industry. The whole fascinating story of the evolution from very small beginnings of the wonderful aggregation of coking ovens, blast furnishes. and rolling mills, which render the valley of the Monongahela the very center of the world's iron and steel industries, has never been told. In a special number devoted to Iron and Steel exclusively, the Scientific American presents an authoritative account of how we have outdistanced all other countries in the production of iron and steel. How wonderful that development has been, is shown by the mere fact that in 1810 there were produced in the United States but 53,908 tons of pig iron, and that in 1902 the total output of pig iron passed far beyond that of our nearest competitor, Great Britain, reaching the huge total of 17,821,307 tons. How this vast output of pig iron is converted into armor plate, gun steel, structural shapes tubes, rails, and steel and wire, besides a host of other things, it is this special number's purpose to tell. —Scientific American.

In his inaugural address Gov. Beckham used these words, which should find a responsive echo from the heart of every true Kentuckian:

"This party further directs us, as its instrument of power, that malice and vindictiveness shall have no part in our official actions and that party fidelity is not thown by political persecution of the opposition; that we shall endeavor to remove all bitterness and ill-feeling from among our people, and that our purpose shall be to establish perfect peace and tranquility throughout the State; that in discharging our public duties we shall discriminate against no section of the State, make no distinction among classes, treat the rich and poor alike, recognize the rights and proper relations of both capital and labor, and with scales evenly balanced, be just and fair to all; that in everyreasonable and possible way we shall lend aid and encouragement to the industrial and commercial development of Kentucky, to invite the investment of capital for the purpose of unlocking the vast natural resources with which the State is so richly blessed, and to make for our people a brilliant epoch in the material progress of the age; and that in all things we shall be true to that manly spirit and patriotic pride which thrills the heart of every genuine Kentuckian who loves his State."

A POLITICIAN'S FAREWELL.

"I am about to shuffle off this mortal coil of politics and fly away to the haven of my native mountains, where I may think and dream in peace, safe from the sickening sting of unjust criticism safe from the talons of some old political vulture; safe from the slimy kiss and keen dagger or ingratitude. I do not mean to say that all politicians are vultures, for the great majority of our public men are upright and honest, and worthy of the confidence reposed in them, yet there are black wings in the political firmament, and reptiles crawl and hiss in every capitol. But, thank God, the live thunders of eternal truth always clear as the atmosphere, and the heel of justice will surely bruise the serpent's head. I do not retire from this office with the rankings of disappointment and chargin in my bosom, but rather as one who retires from labor to rest, from war to peace, from trouble to happiness. I do not retire the 'somnambulist of a shattered dream,' but with all the bud of hope bursting into bloom, and all the bowers of the future ringing with melody. I am contented with my lot in life. Three times I have won the laurel wreath of honor, twined by the people of my native State, and that is glory enough for me.

"While I believe that the good in politics outweighs the bad, yet how thorny is the path, and how unhappy the pilgrimage of him who dares to do his duty. There are no flowers, except a few bouquets snatched from the graves of fallen foes; there is no happiness except the transient thrill of cruel triumph, which passes like a shadow across the heart.

"Every honest man who runs for office is a candidate for trouble for the fruits of political victory turns to ashes on the lips. To me there is nothing in this world so pathetic as a candidate. He is like a mariner without a compass, drifting on the tempest-tossed waves of uncer.ainty, between the smiling cliffs of hope and frowning crags of fear. He is a walking petition and a living prayer. He is a pickhorse of public sentiment, he is the dromedary of politics. And even if he reaches the goal of his ambition, he will soon feel the break of the vulture in his heart and the fang of the serpent in his soul.

"I am no longer a candidate; never again will I be inaugurated into public office. The ark of my humble public career now rests on the Ararat of private life, and I stand on its peaceful summit and look down on the receding flood of politics. The dove of my destiny has brought me an olive branch from happier fields, and I go hence to labor and to love. I take with me a heart full of gratitude and a soul full of precious memories—gratitude to the people for their unwavering confidence in me—precious memories of my friends who have been kind and true. The record I have made is an open book to all. I am willing to die by it, for whatever mistakes I may have committed, I have kept steadily in view the honor of the State and the happiness of the people.

"As I have already presented my views on public questions in my recent message to the General Assembly, I deem it unnecessary to further discuss them on this happy occasion—happy to our new Governor, happy to me, happy to all. It only reminds me to bid you all an affectionate and final farewell, and to express the prayer that the Christ who died for love and mercy's sake will guide our chief executive and all who shall follow him in the paths of peace and love, and baptize them with the spirit of mercy. Farewell, farewell."

Turning to Mr. McMillin, the Governor-elect, Gov. Taylor said: "And now, Benton McMillin, you have given your hand and heart to Tennessee. I pronounce you man and wife, and may the Lord have mercy on your souls."—[Florida.

The original penitentiary at Frankfort was built about 100 years ago, and it is a fact that for the first year after it was completed there was only one prisoner confined within its walls, and he was a horse thief. Since then it has several times been enlarged, and is now crowded beyond the rules of good health or the original ideas of the builders. At present there are about 1,300 convicts on the rolls, and the number is increasing slowly but surely. What a change from the days when the 'lone horse thief was monarch of all he surveyed inside the prison walls.—Winchester Democrat.

FROM Frankfort comes the following partial forecast of important work that will come before the Legislature this winter:

"In view of the State being free from debt and the same time holding a large surplus in the treasury, as shown by the Auditor's report, the impression prevails that unprecedented demands will be made of the next Legislature for appropriations for State institutions and for numerous other causes as well.

"If complications do not arise it seems certain that $1,000,000 will be appropriated for the erection of a new State capitol. The complication will consist in the manner in handling the money if the Legislature appropriates it and the old trouble regarding location. Indications of removal from Frankfort are not particularly favorable, but it is supposed that Louisville and Lexington will continue to push the location question. At the present time the location question is having a very damaging effect on Frankfort real estate.

"It is thought that the first question which will receive consideration by the Legislature will be that of the lunatic asylums. Appropriations for the improvement and enlargement of the present asylums or for the erection or a new one are absolutely necessary. All the asylums are crowded to their full capacity, and white female patients and colored patients, both male and female, are held in various jails in the State on account of the lack of accommodations.

"The present system of conducting the prisons having been tested and found effective and at the same time demonstrating that these institutions may be made self-supporting, it is probable that any recommendations the commissioners might make in regard to extension of the commissioner system to cover a wider field would be favorably received.

"It is generally understood that the Kentucky Exhibit Association, having in charge the exhibition of the State's resources at the St. Louis exhibition, will ask for a modest contribution from the State, and it is believed that some sort of an appropriation will be made.

"The extension of the common school period and an additional appropriation for the public schools will have many supporters.

"It is probable that a vigorous effort will be made to curtail or abrogate the present law in regard to the payment of an annual allowance for pauper idiots. It is said that this law is greatly abused. The present aggregate allowance runs into thousands of dollars annually. Provision will be made for such people to be cared for at the county poorhouses when they have no means of support.

"The knowing ones say that there will be a determined effort on the part of the next Legislature to create a central board of commissioners for the management of the eleemosynary institutions along the line of the bill introduced by Senator Carroll at the last session.

"The presumption is that no great changes will be made in the present election laws by the General Assembly, though all admit that there should be some modification in regard to devices so that each independent candidate may not have a separate column and a separate device. A general registration law has a good many advocates among the incoming members.

"A movement is already on foot looking to the passage of a redistricting bill, especially with reference to Circuit Court districts. It will be remembered that this measure was defeated by a few votes at the last session by the combination of the Republican strength, aided by Democrats. Some say that a redistricting bill cannot be passed at the present time on account of certain constitutionul provision.

"What is anticipated as the most interesting fight will be along the school book line. The adoption of a system of uniform school books will be among the first considerations of the members, and the Democrats are very anxious for the passage of the bill, for they consider it an unfulfilled pledge of 1899. In 1900 separate bills passed each house, but too late in the session for a compromise to be reached by conference. Supt. McChesney strongly recommends the uniform school book system in his report to the Legislature.

"The leaders are expected to make determined efforts to destroy the lobby evil, which sometimes grows to alarming proportions. It is thought that a committee will be appointed early in the session with this end in view."

One of the sights of the flood that will be remembered by thousands and which will be one of the incidents preserved always on account of the many photographs taken is that of the poor, lorn cow floating on a section of a wide freight platform. To make her secure a man landed on the floating raft and tied the cow to a hearse, which was covered with a tarpaulin, and it was in this position that most of the photographers caught her as one of the old incidents of the flood worth preserving. No doubt many people who saw the cow in her perilous position have wondered at her fate, whether she survived or perished. She is alive and well and doing faithful service for the family who own her, J. H. Hobbs, now living at 4023 Charlotte street, At the time the flood came the family resided at 1491 Wyoming street, and this cow and two dogs are especially treasured as survivors of one of the things that has made Kansas City famous.—Kansas City Journal.

In all Christmas plannings, let the little ones do their part, no matter how crude may be the result of their fingers. Let them "think up" things, and don't laugh at them if they make mistakes; they can never have but one childhood, and the Children's Festival should be very real to them.

Sweet potatoes came very near being bread, meat and medicine. This is a great combination. Sweet potatoes can be cooked without a pot, stove or oven, and can be eaten without a plate, knife and fork. The sweet potato is an obliging vegetable.

Some one has called for a device to "ring off" the "time killer" on a partiline rural telephone system. In some localities this is a growing evil and will go on until science will evolve a system that will eliminate the eavesdropper, the gossiper and other undesirable patrons.

From the time the grand jury consumed in investigating the assassination of Miss Elizabeth Gillespie, of Rising Sun, it ought to have made its work very thorough, and the trial of the parties, James Gillespie, Mrs Seward and Myron Barbour and wife, will be awaited with much interest. All the accused except James Gillespie, were permitted to give bond for their appearance for final trial.

John Moffit, colored, who lived on W. P. Carpenter's farm near Florence, entered Columbus Carpenter's house some time last Friday night, and stole several articles of provision, and now he languishes in the county jail, awaiting trial for housebreaking, for which he will likely get a term in the pen when circuit court convenes in April. John says he was drunk, or he would not have entered the house.

Supt. Early and wife, of the county infirmary, gladdened the hearts of the several beneficiaries of that institution, with a nice Christmas tree. Mrs. Early arranged a tree for the occasion, and on it were placed many presents. It was the happiest incident in the history of that institution and one for which Mr. and Mrs. Early are entitled to great praise. Instrumental and vocal music were also features of the evening that contributed largely to the enjoyment of all.

Few worse blizzards than that of last Friday evening ever struck this part of the country. For about 15 minutes the wind blew the snow with such force that a person could not face it. The storm began shortly after six o'clock, and in a minute or two everybody was driven in doors, while the wind and snow held high carnival without. The temperature began falling, and Saturday morning some of the thermometers registered as low as zero.

As Newton Sullivan was going home from Burlington last Thursday night, his horse backed the buggy off of a bank near A. O Hall's, and turned the vehicle over and threw itself down. Mr. Sullivan nor the buggy were hurt in the mixup, and he could not understand what caused the horse's ugly actions until he got home, when he discovered the hitch-rein which had been tied up on the harness had fallen down, and the horse had stepped on it, causing it to whirl around and upset the buggy, in which performance it cut its mouth badly.

Boone's representative in the General Assembly, the Hon. J. W. [Rising Sun Local.]

After eleven days' investigation of the murder of Elizabeth Gillespie the grand jury, on Tuesday afternoon last, returned an indictment charging murder in the first degree against James Gillespie, Belle Seward, Carrie Barbour and Myron L. Barbour.

The defendants were at once brought to the court room by Dr. Will Gillispie and the usual scenes incident to arrests dispensed with. On being arraigned each of the parties pleaded not guilty as charged. Capt. Coles, attorney for the defendants, at once filed applications for writs of habeas corpus which were granted and the writs issued returnable instanter. It was agreed by the attorneys and ordered by the court that Belle Seward and Carrie Barbour be released on $10,000 bail each for their appearance Wednesday morning, and bail being immediately furnished they were released. James Gillespie and Myron L. Barbour were remanded to jail without bail.

On Wednesday morning the habeascorpus proceedings were abruptly terminated by an agreement of counsel that the two women charged should be released on bail in the sum of $7,500 each and Myron L. Barbour on bail in the sum of $20,000 for their appearance at the March term of court. James Gillespie was remanded to jail without bail. Mrs. Seward, Mrs. Barbour and Myron L. Barbour promptly gave the required bail and were released. There will be no further proceedings, as far as is known, until the next term of court when it is likely a trial will be had. Large crowds were present in the court room during the proceedings and the terrible strain under which the people have labored for some time past appears to be lessened. There have been sensational reports of lynchings and mobs in the newspapers, but there is no foundation for such reports. The people of Ohio county are law abiding and do not approve of mob law in any manner but are anxious and willing that the courts proceed in their regular way and that the law be vindicated as provided by statutes and not otherwise.

The rabbit roasters had a regular feast a few nights since. They do say that when their boss cook pronounces a rabbit done there is no meat that is more toothsome.

The funeral took place last Monday afternoon, the interment being in the Sand Run cemetery, in the presence of a large concourse of neighbors and friends who loved and esteemed the deceased in life.

Parker, who died of yellow fever on the 5th day of last July, and was buried at that place under government quarantine, which has now been raised and the remains can be moved.

A large number of men pulled off an intensely interesting clay pigeon "shoot" at Limaburg, last Monday afternoon. W. T. Davis was the champion shot, breaking 15 out of 20. The contest for the booby prize was close between Jeff Eddins and Charles Westbay, the latter winning by not breaking a pigeon. Bert Rouse is credited with 12 straight breaks.

The total production of sugar in France in 1901-02 amounted to 1,051,930 tons, of which 320,742 tons were exempt from duty, as the official estimates had fallen that far short of the actual returns.

SENT A DECOY LETTER

Author of Mysterious Missives to Financiers Caught.

They Include J. Pierpont Morgan, Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller, Marshall Field, J. Ogden Armour and G. F. Swift.

Chicago, Dec. 25.—The source of the mysterious letters demanding large sums of money, which for the past six months have been received by men high in the financial world of New York and Chicago, was Thursday traced to Lee R. Brennan, a commercial artist of Chicago, and the young man was placed under arrest as he was leaving the general post office, where he had gone in answer to a decoy letter. When confronted with the evidence of his wrongdoing Brennan confessed to having attempted to enforce a dozen demands for sums of $25,000 and $50,000, and having threatened victims with death should they refuse to comply with his demands for money. In his confession Brennan declared that all his attempts to extort money had been futile, as he never received a dollar in answer to any of his requests.

The New York financiers of whom Brennan demanded money were J. Pierpont Morgan, John D. Rockefeller, James Stillman and Andrew Carnegie. Of each of these men he demanded $50,000 in his letters, and on receiving no replies, it is said, reduced the amount demanded to $25,000. Among those in Chicago on whom Brennan attempted to levy tribute were Marshall Field, R. T. Crane, J. Ogden Armour and G. F. Swift. None of the Chicago men was asked for more than $25,000.

In the case of Marshall Field, Brennan wrote under the name of William Craig. He first asked Mr. Field to leave $25,000 beneath a pillar of a porch at the latter's home. No attention was paid to the letter by Mr. Field until another communication, in which the veiled threats in the first letter were made plainer, was received from Brennan. In the second letter Brennan demanded that the money be mailed. Mr. Field then placed the matter in the hands of a detective agency and a correspondence with Brennan was established which led to his arrest Thursday.

A few days ago a decoy letter was sent to Brennan telling him that his demand on Mr. Field would be acceded to. Then a package was prepared and addressed to "Craig," to be delivered at the registered letter department of the general post office. Brennan fell into the trap and Thursday called at the post office, and asked for and was given the package. Signing the receipt Brennan with a pleased smile on his face turned to walk away, but walked into the arms of four detectives who had been watching the proceedings.

No formal charge was entered against Brennan Thursday night, but it was said he will be held for action of the federal authorities. A number of letters he acknowledges having written have been turned over to the post office officials for investigation. Several of the letters also have been given to the police departments of New York and Chicago, and still others to private detective agencies.

ANOTHER CRANK.

Man Who Sent Letter To President Roosevelt Arrested.

Washington, Dec. 25.—Having addressed a letter to President Roosevelt, the nature of which led the secret service officers on duty at the white house to believe that he was insane, the police Tuesday arrested Jermen Kehl, 39 years of age a native Conception, Chili. When taken into custody he had on his person a loaded revolver and a pair of steel knuckles. He claims to be an inventor and to have several patents pending, and he desired to be protected. He was pronounced insane by the police surgeons and was sent to St. Elizabeth asylum.

This is claimed to be the greatest gusher in Texas at this time. Land values are booming in this vicinity since the latest wells have been brought in.

OLD SOLDIERS' HOME.

During the Past Year 33,157 Veterans Were Cared For.

Washington, Dec. 25.—According to a report made by Brig. Gen. George H. Burton, who has just completed a tour of inspection of the various branches of the national soldiers' home, it was shown that during the past year 33,157 old soldiers have been cared for. The annual per capita expense of this maintenance was $141.70, which is an increase of 20 per cent during the past three years, ascribed to the general advance in the cost of food products. Of the inmates 25,163 are drawing pensions of from $6 to $72 per month, aggregating a total of $3,166,734. Eleven members have cash balances of more than $1,000 each to their credit.

During the past year there were 1,863 deaths and 3,582 first admissions, which makes the deaths 52 per cent of the increase a decided increase in the death rate.

There are 1,441 acres of land cultivated as farms and 98 acres as vegetable gardens, in connection with the various branches. The value of farm products was $509,051, while the cost of maintenance which includes lawns, flower gardens, transportation and teams was $92,403.

INSULAR POSSESSIONS.

An Estimate of $2,526,100 Made for Defense.

Washington, Dec. 25.—Secretary Root has forwarded to the house of representatives through the treasury department a supplemental estimate of $2,526,100 for the defenses of the insular possessions of the United States. In his request the secretary says: "Defenses for Porto Rico, the Hawaiian Islands, Guam and the Philippines are urgently needed to protect the newly acquired territory of the United States and government property to be stored there, also to prevent interruption of cable communication between San Francisco, the territory of Hawaii and Manila. This estimate is submitted with the object of beginning the construction of these defenses at once at such insular localities as are now the property of the United States, or may become so before the appropriation is exhausted, and of acquiring additional land needed as sites for defenses of the territory of Hawaii."

SUDDENLY SUMMONED.

Mrs. Hoar had been in poor health for sometime, but an improvement in her condition had been noted recently, and her sudden demise caused a great shock to her family. The body will be taken to Worcester Friday for burial. No funeral service will be held in this city. Mrs. Hoar, prior to her marriage, was Miss Ruth A. Miller, daughter of a well-known New England family, and was the senator's second wife.

A LABOR DECISION.

Laborers Have a Right To Strike and To Induce Others To Strike.

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 25.—The supreme court in deciding the labor dispute of W. I. Gray & Co., of Minneapolis, versus the Building Trades Council et al., asserts the rights of laborers to strike and to induce others to strike, and to use all means to win their cause are compatible with law and order. The court declared Judge Cray, of Minneapolis, went too far when he restrained the defendants to "go upon the premises." Judge Cray granted an injunction preventing the labor agitators from interfering with the business of the plaintiffs.

A TERRIBLE CRASH.

Twenty-Two Killed and 38 Injured in Train Collision.

Dead and Injured Pinned Down and Crushed By the Fragments of the Cars — Signal Light Extinguished By High Wind.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 28.—Sunday night the death list received from the head-on collision between two Pere Marquette railroad passenger trains near East Paris Saturday evening stands at 22 with 38 persons injured, several of them probably fatally.

The wreck, instead of being caused by man's carelessness or mistake, is charged to the high wind which extinguished the red signal light in the order board at McCord's station, where the west-bound train was expected to stop and receive new orders. Two minutes before the train rushed by McCord's the light was burning, says the operator there, but in that brief interval the blizzard that was raging extinguished it and train No. 5 flashed by the station to crash into east-bound train No. 6 near East Paris. The trains, which were two of the finest on the system, were reduced to a promiscuous pile of broken and twisted timber and metal, with dead and injured pinned down and crushed by the fragments of the heavy cars.

Five cars and two large locomotives were jammed into a space ordinarily occupied by three coaches and the wreckage was strewns across the railroad right of way from fence to fence.

There was no chance of the fast-running trains to see each other through the driving blizzard in time to even slow down. The west-bound engine drove through No. 6's engine like a wedge, separating the gear from the boiler and standing the latter on end like a broken, twisted shell. The running gear was crumpled up like so much twine. Great cast steel side rods bent into many shapes and even the steel tires of the big driving wheels split and sprung from the wheels, landing in some cases ten feet from the engine. The boiler of engine No. 397 turned over several times and the very force of the twisting impact seems to have been the means of saving the life of Engineer Waterman. He was flung 40 feet over the fence at the edge of the right of way. Moon, his fireman, was sitting on the opposite side of the cab and he, too, was thrown clear of the pile of wreckage.

As the trains came together the steam domes of each boiler blew off, releasing their contents, else there would have been added horrors from the blistering steam.

The east-bound train was composed of a mail and baggage car combination smoker, buffet parlor car, day coach and diner. The baggage coach caught between the engine and heavy train, crumpled up like pasteboard, only the roof remaining partially unbroken. The big blind mail coach, heavily bulkheaded, took the brunt of the blow but withstood the crash and communicated it to the smoker next in the rear. The smoker was swept clean, as the mail car telescoped its entire length and turned over at the north side of the track.

The smoker in turn crashed several feet into the parlor car and it was at the rear end of the smoker and forward end of the cafe car where the passengers were killed and injured. From a space six feet square the bodies of two women, a boy and a man were taken out.

According to statements made by officials of the Pere Marquette the west-bound train was traveling down grade at the rate of 60 miles an hour. The east-bound train was climbing the hill at a speed of 40 miles an hour.

When the engines met one turned completely over and lay with its nose in a direction opposite to that in which it had been traveling. The other climbed the wreckage of the first, its boiler torn from the trucks, standing erect in the center of the debris.

COLOMBIA'S EXTERIOR DEBTS.

Panama Will Assume a Part in Proportion to Her Population.

New York, Dec. 28.—Mr. Bunau-Varilla, minister of Panama to the United States, stated Sunday night that he had notified Sir H. Mortimer Durand, British ambassador to the United States, of Panama's willingness to assume a part of the exterior debt of Colombia in proportion to the population of Panama compared with that of Colombia. The minister says this will be done as soon as the independence of Panama is recognized by Colombia.

Trainer Huggins Arrives.

Quarantine, N. Y., Dec. 28.—John W. Huggins, trainer for the Whitney stable in England, arrived on the Minnehaha from London. He brought eight horses with him, among them being Aceful, who was taken from this country for the English Derby, and Ravenstein, one of Mr. Duryea's crack horses.

A Duel With Swords.

Paris, Dec. 28.—A duel with swords was fought Sunday morning between Capt. Levy, of the Fifth regiment of engineers, and Henry De Molroy, a leading anti-Semite. The duel was the outcome of an altercation over the Dreyfus case.

War Seems Almost Inevitable.

Peking, Dec. 28.—The opinion entertained by the best informed diplomats in Peking that war between Russia and Japan is probable and almost inevitable, remains unchanged. The Japanese war party is growing in strength.

DEPARTMENT OF THE LAKES.

Gen. Bates Reviews the Work For the Past Year.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—In reviewing the year's work of the United States army in the department of the lakes, Maj. Gen. John C. Bates, commander-in-chief of this territorial division, says that the character and appearance of recruits is not up to the same standard as compared with those of former years, the number of undeveloped youths being especially noticeable. According to the report the "Baby Blue" facings for infantry is unpopular and without exception is opposed by all infantry officers and a return to the white facings is universially desired, as is also the retention of the officers' blue overcoats in lieu of the new olive drab overcoat. The general mess system in operation throughout the department is declared unsatisfactory and a return to company mess system is recommended.

In discussing the need of a military prison which the report declares has been fully demonstrated, Gen. Bates says:

"The post guard houses have been overcrowded, although under instructions from superior authority I have released many prisoners where in my judgment such action was not likely to be detrimental to discipline and, in some cases, I am afraid I have rather exceeded that limit in efforts to reduce the number of prisoners. Furthermore I think it has a bad effect upon the young soldier entering the service to have constantly before his eyes these old soldiers serving long sentences and that it would be in the interest of discipline to send all men under sentence of a year or more away from the post to a military prison.

The roster of the department contains the names 172 commissioned officers and 2,764 enlisted men. In the period covered by the report there were 357 enlisted men tried by general court-martial, this being an increase of 22 over last year. Of the 357 men tried 342 were convicted.

SMITHSON'S REMAINS.

They Are Being Brought From Genoa to Washington.

Genoa, Dec. 28.—Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, has arrived here. He will convey to the Smithsonian institution at Washington, D. C., the remains of James Smithson, founder of the institution, who died in Genoa in 1829.

Washington, Dec. 28.—It is said here that the reason for the removal at this time of the body of the founder of the Smithsonian institution from Genoa to this country is because a stone quarry has encroached on the English cemetery at Genoa to such an extent that it has become necessary to remove the remains interred there. Mr. Bell left this country a little more than a week ago. Congress made no appropriation for the removal of Mr. Smithson's remains to this country and it could not be learned Sunday night owing to the absence of Prof. Langley from the city whether the regents of the Smithsonian had voted money for this purpose or Mr. Bell was acting in his own initiative. The matter had been discussed in local scientific circles where the opinion prevails that the grounds of the institution in this city are the proper site for their final resting place.

DOWIE'S FAREWELL.

Standing Room Was at a Premium in the Chicago Auditorium.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Preparatory to leaving for Australia John Alexander Dowie bade farewell to his Chicago adherents at a meeting in the Auditorium Sunday. Standing room was at a premium. After an all night "watch meeting" in Zion City New Year's eve, Dowie will leave for New Orleans and will travel to San Francisco via the southwestern route, stopping at various large cities en route. He intends to sail from the latter port January 21 and counts on being back in Chicago next June.

"I am going to leave everything in Zion City and not steal away with either the lace works or the temple," said Dowie. "That was a malicious lie about my wife taking away $7,000,000, but I'm foolish to deny it again. I will only take with me enough cash for spending money."

Protest Against Typesetting Machines.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Columbia Typographical union at a meeting Sunday appointed a committee to go before congress and enter an earnest protest against the installation of typesetting machines in the government printing office.

Gen. MacArthur Arrives.

San Francisco, Dec. 28.—Gen. MacArthur returned Sunday on the steamer Siberia from the Hawaiian islands, where he has been making a military inspection. The general is in good health and enjoyed his trip.

Mrs. Wm. M. Evarts Dead.

Windsor, Vt., Dec. 28.—Helen W. Evarts, relict of the late William M. Evarts, of New York, died at her country home here Sunday in her 84th year.

Suicided In Sweetheart's Presence.

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 28.—In the parlor of the home of his sweetheart, Miss Susie Gilliam, to whom he was to have been married on Christmas day, J. L. Householder, 29, Sunday night drank carbolic acid and died later.

Movement of Marines.

Colon, Dec. 28.—The marines from the converted cruiser Prairie, who have been stationed at Raviza, have gone from there to Panama, and are now located at Bas Obispo, a station on the Panama railroad.

A RIVER DISASTER.

Over $100,000 Worth of Property Destroyed at Cincinnati.

Two Vessels Crushed by an Ice Gorge —Barges Loaded With Coal Torn From Moorings and Carried Down the River.

Cincinnati, Dec. 28.—The packet boat W. H. Grapevine was sunk at the Coney Island wharfboat at the foot of Vine street at 2 o'clock Sunday morning by an ice gorge. When the vessel gave way to the pressure it keeled over against the wharfboat and all of the upper work was crushed and the boat probably damaged beyond repair.

Later thick ice from the gorges struck the sunken Grapevine, broke the packet into pieces and took the wreckage down stream so that it is a total wreck. Nothing could be learned of the hull Sunday night.

The rise in the river in connection with heavy ice from the gorges caused over $100,000 of other damage in the Cincinnati harbor Sunday. The largest loser was the Cincinnati Gas Co. Twenty-five of its barges loaded with coal were broken from moorings; eight were caught and 17 were lost. Seven barges at the new city water works were also carried away, but afterward caught. A drift of 50 logs was broken loose above Coney Island with six men on them and the men were not rescued until they reached this city, having been in a perilous condition during all the distance of 15 miles.

The idler, a pleasure excursion steamer owned by a club, was ground to pieces by the ice here Sunday night after being broken from her moorings. Loss $5,000. As the ice is passing out nearly all the coal fleets here have lost barges. Still greater damages are expected in the lower Ohio. The greatest gorge in the Ohio is at North Bend. It is many miles long and when it breaks the craft in the lower Ohio will be in danger.

Evansville, Ind., Dec. 28.—Heavy ice passed this port all day and there is considerable ice above still to come, and it now looks like the boats will remain tied up all week. The gorges between this city and Louisville broke loose Sunday afternoon. As all the local boats have gone to Green river for winter quarters there is not much danger to craft. The steamer Tarascon, that has been ice bound near Hawesville for several days, was able to get into Green river Sunday. Heavy ice continues to come out of the Wabash river and with the temperature moderating a rise in both the Wabash and Ohio rivers is expected.

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 28.—The recent cold snap has made dangerous the ice in the Allegheny river. At Rosston, the gorge is an immense affair, being packed to the bottom and extending 15 miles up-stream. It was formed during a thaw, and the ice breaking into small pieces has packed all the way to the bottom, offering resistance that can scarcely be overcome. The water is now backing up and spreading over the lowlands. The gorge at Springdale still holds and but little ice is floating in either the Allegheny or Monongahela rivers.

TRADES UNIONISM.

It Is Largely on the Increase in New York State.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 28.—Despite the fact that there has been alleged concentrated effort to discourage trade unionism, the New York state department of labor, in its bulletin issued Sunday night, for the quarter ending October 1, reports a great increase in membership and in unions established. The bulletin says:

"At the end of September the bureau of labor statistics registered 2,587 trade unions in this state, this being an increase of 225 over the number six months previous. The total membership was 395,736, an increase of 38,634. New York city gained 24,361, or 11.8 per cent. in membership. The principal increases were in the building and transport trades, while the clothing trades lost 4,065 members.

Choir on a Strike.

Montreal, Dec. 28.—Melville church, the leading Presbyterian place of worship in Westmount, the fashionable residence suburb of Montreal, was without the services of a choir Sunday. In his sermon on Christmas morning Rev. T. W. Winfield, pastor of the church, severely criticised the members of the choir for eating candy during the progress of the service. As a result of the criticism a deputation from the choir waited upon the reverend gentleman on Saturday and requested a retraction. This he refused to make and as a result the choir without an exception went out on strike.

To Curtail Production.

Pittsburg, Dec. 28.—A decision has been reached by the flint glass manufacturers to close all bottle factories shortly after the first of the year for a period of four weeks, in order to curtail production.

Rush Order For Mess Beef.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 28.—The Cudahy Packing Co. of South Omaha, is just in receipt of a rush order for 1,000,000 pounds of extra mess meat for the Russian government. The shipment must reach San Francisco before January 26.

Undertakers' Drivers' Strike.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—More hearses were used by the undertakers Sunday in conducting funerals than at any time since the livery drivers went on strike, but in every case policemen rode on the box with the driver.

Retrospection and Prospection

Value of Past Experiences Realized in the Days of the Future.

New Year's Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1901, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Dec. 27, 1900.
Text:—"Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom."—Job 32:7.

THE value of the yesterdays is measured by the offerings which they make to the to-days. The to-days are wisely and profitably lived in so far as they appropriate and assimilate the lessons and experiences of the yesterdays. "Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom." That is, the yesterdays should speak their message of admonition, of encouragement, of hope to the to-days; they should bring of their stores of wisdom which have been gathered as the fruitage of years and give instruction to the young to-days. The words of our text are the words of Elihu, the young man who speaks after Job's three aged friends have concluded their long harangues to the afflicted man. Elihu was modest, or at least affected to be, and with a becoming deference, of which he is consciously proud, he waits until the men of gray hairs have spoken. Well would it be if young men of to-day were as modest and deferential in the presence of their elders. Men of mature years and venerable age should speak first, says Elihu. But in his words there is an implied rebuke which is suggestive. It is as though he said to these three aged philosophers: The days and multitude of years of your observation and experience and learning should have enabled you to speak and teach wisdom, but, he goes on to say in the ninth verse, "great men are not always wise; neither do the aged understand judgment." Years do not always bring wisdom, nor do they always qualify a man to speak profitably and wisely. "Days should," however, "speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom." Each day should bring forth its treasure to add to the life, and each year should teach its lessons and bestow the wealth of wisdom with which it has been endowed. But too often the days melt into weeks, and the weeks are swallowed up of the months, and the months are soon lost in the years as they glide swiftly by, and thoughtlessness and heedlessness, worldliness and self-seeking rob the days and weeks and months and years of their offerings of true wisdom and enduring blessing.

CUSTOM has marked the first day of the New Year as the occasion for noting in an especial way the flight of time. From the most ancient times the beginning of years as marked by the calendars of the different nations and peoples has been characterized by ceremonies and observations of special recognition. The Jews, the Egyptians, the Chinese, the Romans, the Mohammedans and other nations, although differing as to the time from which they reckoned the commencement of the year, all regarded it as a day of special interest. Americans in the larger cities of the country where the Chinese are found in any numbers are reminded at the present day of the difference betwen the calendar commonly in use among the principal nations of the world and that of China, by the elaborate celebration of the Chinese New Year. It is the great day in the Chinaman's year, and the day is given over to festivities and religious ceremonies of various kinds. The Jews to this day observe the New Year's day of their own Jewish calendar with great faithfulness and solemnity. The celebration of New Year's day is of pagan origin. The early Christian fathers—Augustine, Ambrose and others—forbade in Christian use all festive celebration of the day, because of the immoral and superstitious observances of the pagan festival. The Christians, however, were directed to open the year with a day of prayer, fasting and humiliation. But New Year's day is not a religious or church day, except in the Roman Catholic church, where it is observed as a holiday of strict observance and religious ceremony. Upon the Christian of the Protestant denominations it has no direct claims, and yet there is scarcely an organized body of Christians in the world but in some manner and to some degree gives recognition to the day. It may be in a watch night service, in which the closing hours of the Old Year and the dawn of the New Year are passed in songs of praise and worship, in prayer, Scripture reading and testimony. It may be a prayer service or other manner of religious exercises on New Year's day. It may be a New Year's dinner or social, or it may be only a thought and reference to the day at the regular religious services preceding its dawn. It is a time of accounting, a summing up of days past and a thought for the days which the New Year will count off day by day, and only give up the secrets of those days as they are revealed by the day's unfoldings. "Days should speak," and the New Year's day is the time when the days of the year which has gone should have opportunity to speak and cast the influence of their experience upon the days of the year just begun.

IT IS an old and trite saying that "time is money." It is a sad commentary upon the material worldly standards of the majority of people that this definition of time is considered full and complete; that that is all that can be said for time. But is time to be weighed only in the world's perishable gold? Time may be money; it may give man the opportunity of gaining heaps on heaps of the shining metal in barter and trade, but it is more than money, it is a sacred trust. Days should speak, but they should speak of something else than mad rush after wealth; they should speak of something else besides self-seeking and indulgence in pleasures and all manner of excesses. And days do speak in condemnation and judgment to those who will hear them speak in no other way. The sowings of the yesterdays bring the inevitable reapings of the to-days. But the days slip so swiftly by that we are hardly conscious of their passage, and the year is gone before we realize it, and we have scarcely heard a whispered message from the days as they have flown by. But while the Old Year is dying, and the New Year is about to be born, there is a disposition on the part of man to stop and listen and think ere he steps into the days of the New Year. It is time of retrospection and prospection. It is, as the business man would say, a time of taking stock and planning new business; a closing up of the old set of books and the opening of new ones. Expenditures and receipts are carefully figured out, and the profits ascertained. And man who has been intrusted by God with 365 precious days, and which he has spent one after another, thoughtlessly or thoughtfully, godlessly or righteously, selfishly or in kindly service for others, ought to take an accounting at the end of the year. Expended: 365 days, given crisp and fresh, like new bank notes, from the hand of God. Receipts: What? Profits: What? Days should speak, and what should be their message?

DAYS should speak of human limitations and uncertainties, and of God and eternity. There is an awful lack of the consciousness of God and eternity in the world. People spend their days as though they were to be without end; they plan with little thought of the limitations and uncertainties which bound those plans. It is positively pathetic to see the bold assurance with which man passes through this life. He lives and feels and acts as though he were a fixture, when he is but "as grass and as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth; for the wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more." But, on the other hand, the Lord is the same "yesterday, to-day and forever," and "His mercy is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear Him," and again in 1 Peter 1:25, after declaring that "all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass," the apostle goes on to proclaim that "the Word of the Lord endureth forever." Man's days are numbered, eternity is without end; Man's plans and devices fail, but God's plans and purposes are as certain of consummation as that day follows night. What day during the year which is just drawing to a close that has not felt the tread of the silent reaper Death? It is said that with every tick of the watch a human life goes out somewhere in the world. While we are in life we are in the midst of death. Friends, acquaintances, loved ones have fallen about us on every hand. As we look back over the year, the sad days when the hand of death has robbed us of those whom we loved and cherished and esteemed stand out prominently. And what message do they speak to us? Is it one only of personal loss and sorrow? If so, you have failed to hear its most important message to your soul. It would speak of death which is sooner or later to rob you of all that life now offers you, and it would point you to God who holds all you may be possessed of in eternity. "How much did he leave?" was asked concerning the wealthy man who had just died. "He left it all," was the sage reply. And the all-important question is not what he left, but what did he have laid up in store on the other side? Did he have treasure in Heaven? Did he have a Saviour Who was preparing a mansion for him in the Father's House, after the earthly house of this tabernacle should be dissolved? Is it well with your soul, with my soul? Is the question which the days filled with death ask as they pass.

BUT days speak not only of the uncertainty of life and of God and eternity, but also of human failure and sin and selfishness. How fresh and clean and spotless the days come from the hand of God, and how stained and scarred and marred they become as man fills out their record. Search diligently among the days through which you have passed during the past year and see if you can find one day which is free from failure or mistake. Most of the days are stained with sin of heart and life, and the cleanest and best days of the year are not without their evidences of human weakness and failure. Are we afraid to face them and hear them speak? This is not manly; this is not right. But oh, how many turn from the memory of past failure, or wrongdoing, past mistake or grievous sin, past difficulty or trouble, and refuse to hear these days speak or learn the lessons which they might teach! How many try to forget, and rush feverishly into the New Year with the deluded thought that it will know no such record! When Paul declared he was going to forget those things which are behind he did not mean that he locked the past in the chamber of impenetrable oblivion and rushed heedlessly onward in hope of winning the prize. No; but he did mean that the failures and sins and mistakes of the past were not to handicap and discourage him in the race which lay before him. But those same failures and mistakes and sins were to be the helpful signposts to him by which he would avoid those same pitfalls again. The runner circling the track stumbles because of unevenness of ground. When next he comes to that place he would be foolish indeed if he forgot all about the dangerous spot. He must remember it so that he may avoid stumbling there a second time. But on the other hand he must forget the failure. He must not let the impression prevail that he stumbled there once and must therefore stumble there again.

DAYS do speak of failures and sins, but their true message is not one of discouragement, but encouragement. The Devil points to the days of failure and says: See how you failed; of course you will fail again. But God points to the days of failure only that He may point out the cause of failure and help to victory at another time. It is not man's fault that he cannot blot out or rewrite the past, but it is man's fault if he does not learn the lessons of the past as a help to the living in the present. Lord Melville, the noted English statesman of one hundred years ago, when on New Year's day he was wished a Happy New Year, exclaimed: "I hope this year will be happier than the last, for I scarcely recollect having spent one happy day in the whole of it." He could not recall the year and live it over again. For this he was not to blame, but he was to be censured that he did not search out the reason or reasons for the unhappiness of that year, and prevent their recurrence in the New Year. The New Year brings with it the worthy impulse to do better, and from this impulse is formed the New Year's resolutions—resolutions hastily formed and easily broken. This is always the comedy and tragedy of the New Year. And wherein does the trouble lie? Not in the making of the resolution, but in failure to listen while the days of the past speak their message for the future. "Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom," and especially should this be true as one year draws to its close and the other, bright and fresh and untarnished, begins to unfold.

AND in the speech of the days of the past is found a prophecy of the future. No one who stands upon the threshold of the New Year but wonders what is hidden within its bundle of days. Man never possesses more than the present; God is the custodian of the future. But the days of the past may furnish something more than a hint sometimes of what the future will be. The sowing of the past brings the reaping of the future. Do you fear to let the days of the past speak because they may prophesy of an unhappy fruitage to be garnered from the days of sowing gone by? Perhaps; but will foolish blindness and refusal to hear the message of the days of the past avert the undesirable reaping of the future? Nay, verily! "Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom." And if we patiently and humbly receive their message we may be able to change defeat into victory, and failure into success. And what is the supreme message of the days and the years? It is not of man and his doings, but it is of Christ and what He has done for man. The days of Christ upon earth have not ceased to speak. Christ, the Son of God, Christ the perfect man, Christ the sacrifice for sin, Christ the Saviour of the world. And every day since Christ wrought out the redemption of man from sin has been laden with the message of the Christ.

IT is the presence of Christ in our days which makes them worth living, even though we fail to recognize that Christ and yield to Him obedience. It is the certainty of Christ in the days to come which fills them full of hope. It is Christ Who can help you interpret the days of the past, and it is Christ Who is able to help you enter the days of the New Year hopefully, victoriously and successfully. Retrospection without Christ to interpret and reveal the lessons of the past is a failure. Prospection without Christ to cheer and encourage is discouraging and perilous. New Year's resolutions without the Christ as the inspiration and the dynamic force to execute are sooner or later a sad and dismal failure. Samuel Johnson gave expression to this truth when he said: "I have now spent 55 years in resolving; having, from the earliest times almost that I can remember, been forming schemes of a better life. I have done nothing." What an admission for a great man. But we all have to make the same distressing confession where we are trying in our strength to make and keep New Year's resolutions. But Samuel Johnson did not rest there. His prayer was finally: "O God, grant me to resolve aright, and to keep my resolutions, for Jesus Christ's sake!" And it is right here where every one must end the Old Year and begin the New if he would have the days of the past speak a true and faithful message to his soul, and be girded and equipped for the future. "Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom," and they will if we have the mind of Christ to understand and the will of Christ to do.

The thermometer stood at 15 above zero during the greater part of the day, and at 10 o'clock Friday night it had fallen to 4 below, with the promise from the weather office of 10 degrees below by daylight Saturday.

The snow did not cause any trouble until the wind arose, when it commenced to drift badly, and many of the outlying street car lines were seriously crippled. The cold is scheduled to continue through Saturday, with a high wind to add to the discomfort.

NOTHING OVERLOOKED

All Phases of Kentucky Educational Life to Have Part.

SPECIAL BLIND AND DEAF EXHIBIT

Chairman E. H. Mark Preparing to Show at the World's Fair the Progress of the Schools From 1793 to 1904—Support of Leading Educators of the State Enlisted.

As early as 1793, a hundred and ten years ago, Kentucky's educational system was inaugurated in the Transylvania University at Lexington. Thirty-six years later the public school system began. It is the purpose of Prof. E. H. Mark, the superintendent of the schools of Louisville, who the Kentucky Education Association was fortunate enough to get as chairman of its Educational Committee, to show every phase of educational life from 1793 to 1904 at the Exposition in St. Louis. To those acquainted with Prof. Mark and his wonderful energy and resource, this announcement means that the exhibit of educational affairs from Kentucky will be more than could be expected. Prof. Mark is in close touch with the leading educators of the State and has enlisted their support. All the different classifications will be given the prominence to which they are entitled. The collegiate, the high school, the training school, the kindergarten, the normal and the business courses are, of course, included. Especially designed cabinets for displaying drawings, pert-folio work, etc., will be provided for the different schools. A sample of this cabinet, with the base on which written work is to be shown, is now at headquarters for the inspection of any educators.

The exposition authorities are very anxious to have an excellent exhibit of the blind and deaf and dumb institutions of Kentucky. Dr. B. B. Hunton, of the Blind Institute of Louisville, has been invited by Prof. Howard J. Rogers, the chief of the department at the World's Fair, to send two of his best pupils, a boy and a girl, to St. Louis, for the entire exposition period, suggesting that they matriculate in Green's School for the Blind in St. Louis and appear in the Educational Building daily with the classes to be sent from Dr. Green's School. One of the features of the Educational Building will be a large pipe organ, and Dr. Rogers invites one of Dr. Huntoon's blind pupils to perform on this organ.

Dr. Huntoon has also been asked to make a display of the Braille System of blind printing. The New York Point System is to be shown, and, as the exposition may be reckoned as a place for the survival of the fittest between these conflicting printing systems, it is the hope of the association that Dr. Huntoon will consent. Dr. Rogers is also very desirous of having a class from the Deaf and Dumb Institute at Danville. He has promised the association that everything of an ingenious nature turned out by these blind and deaf and dumb pupils will be stamped with the word "Kentucky" thereon and sold as souvenirs at the exposition.

LIVE STOCK ARISTOCRACY.

Kentucky Expects to Capture Some of Those World's Fair Premiums.

The aristocracy of Kentucky's live stock, which is only another way of saying the uncrowned kings and queens of the American turf, the cattle barns and the poultry yards, will be sent to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, with the full expectation of bringing back to the State many thousands of dollars of the quarter of a million dollars offered by the World's Fair officials in premiums. Mr. L. L. Dorsey, until recently president of the Kentucky Live Stock Breeders' Association, is chairman of the Live Stock Committee of the Kentucky Exhibit Association. He has appointed the following chairmen of subcommittees of the different classifications: T. L. Hornsby, Eminence, Shorthorn Cattle; J. W. O'Bannon, Louisville, Aberdeen Angus Cattle; D. L. Moore, Harrodsburg, Polled Durham Cattle; W. H. Giltner, Eminence, Hereford Cattle; M. A. Scovell, Lexington, Jersey Cattle; S. DeRidder, Prospect, Harness Horses; David Castleman, Pleasant Hill, Saddle Horses; George Graddy, Versailles, Thoroughbred Horses; John T. Hughes, Lexington, Coach and High Stepping Horses; W. T. Chilton, Campbellsburg, Sheep; F. G. Hogan, O'Bannon, Hogs; James Taggart, Pinewille, Jacks and Mules; J. L. Shallcross, Anchorage, Belgian Hares; J. H. Good, Louisville; Poultry; R. H. Young, Louisville, Pigeons.

Each of these chairmen has a subcommittee and all who form these committees, a list approaching one hundred and fifty in number, are giving much of their time to preparations. It may be safely said that Kentucky will have between three hundred and five hundred head of its finest stock at the exposition, and all of this stock is to be the best that can be shown in the various classifications. Chief Coburn, of the Live Stock Department of the Fair, urges upon the Exhibit Association the importance of showing only quality.

It Rome should really consent to send a valuable collection of Vatican relics for exhibition at the World's Fair it will certainly absorb the greatest interest. The rarest treasures of the world are in the Vatican. —Church Progress.

A Timely Suggestion.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful house-wife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is certain to be needed before the winter is over, and results are much more prompt and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system. In almost every instance a severe cold may be warded off by taking this remedy freely as soon as the first indication of the cold appears. There is no danger in giving it to child ren for it contains no harmful substance. It is pleasant to take—both adults and children like it. Buy it and you will get the best. It always cures. Results as shown in the milk pail do not indicate so much difference, pound for pound, in the various feeds of the same class as is sometimes claimed. Cottonseed meal, linseed meal, either new or old process, highgrade gluten meal, may either one be instituted for another in a mixed ration without showing much difference in the amount of milk. Whole meal from corn or wheat or oats, barley or buckwheat will produce about the same yield whichever grain is ground. In buying all the relative feeds the market cost would be the main thing to consider were it not that some feeds have peculiar effects on the digestive and milk-producing organs, and that the richness of manure varies considerably according to the feed. The best all-round results are obtained by a mixture of the leading feeds, varied in proportions of each according to the market. Bran is the bulk maker, and should be a part of all winter rations where much ground feed is used. —Maryland Farmer.
